DONALD KENNEDY, of ROXBURY, MASS.,

Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston. Send postal card for book.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Sold by all Druggists.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

A Double Hanging.

Charles Ermisch and Otto Wonigkeit, the murderers of William Lindhoff, in St. Paul, on May 2, last, were hanged in the courtyard of the Ramsey county jail. The traps were sprung at a few minuter after 5 o'clock a. m. That on which Ermisch stood acted perfectly, and his neck was instantly broken by the fall. The other trap did not fall owing to some defect in the lever. Wonigkeit heard his companion descend to death and knew that something had happened to delay matters in his own case, but he gave no sign, standing perfectly still until on another trial of the lever he, too, was launched into futurity. The condemned men displayed marvelous fortitude throughout their last hours, and walked to the scaffold without the slightest evidence of weakness. There was a large cowd about the exterior of the enclosure all through the night. When the sound of the falling bodies was heard these morbid loafers disappeared. The bodies of Ermisch and Wonigkeit were removed to the cemetery shortly after 6 a. m., and nothing remained to mark the scene of the tragedy except the rough board shanty that enclosed the scaffold.

Will Come to Minnesota.

Frank Grygla, traveling land agent of the Great Northern railway, has been in correspondence with leading Poles and Slavonians of Philadelphia, Jersey City and the Pennsylvania coke regions, relative to founding colonies for these people in the Red River valley. Matters have progressed so far as to practically assure the immigration to Minnesota of about 1,500 Polish families. A committee will visit the state in May next, and will make a tour of the northern and western portions of the state. The people who will take part in the migration have lived in the United States for several years, speak the language fairly well, are familiar with American institutions, and a large number of them are financially in good circumstances. They have become tired of their uncongenial work as laborers in the cities and in the coke regions, and wish to own their own land and to till it. Some of the colonists will be located on railroad lands, but a greater number will take up homesteads.

Ard Godfrey Dead.

The death of Ard Godfrey occurred at his home in Minneapolis. He had been a resident of that city 47 years, and at the time of his death was 81 years old.

Mr. Godfrey was one of the earliest promoters of the city. He and the late Franklin Steele built the first saw mill at the falls of St. Anthony, in 1849, which was a great help to builders in the locality. When St. Anthony was made a postoffice, Mr. Godfrey was made postmaster, and Cataract lodge, A. F. and A. M., was organized in the parlor of his house in 1851. In the spring of 1854, Mr. Godfrey commenced a levee at the junction of Minnehaha creek with the Mississippi, to aid steamers in landing on their way from Fort Snelling to St. Anthony falls. The harbor was called Godfrey port.

Killed While Hunting.

Fred Bloom, of Inver Grove, accidentally shot himself and died in a few minutes. Mr. Bloom and Louis Horbach had been doing a little hunting near his farm, which is situated a mile south of Inver Grove station. When they returned, and as they stopped at the door of his house, Mr. Bloom stepped to the rear of the buggy to pull out the gun, a 32-caliber repeating Winchester rifle. He had just begun to draw out the gun when it went off, the ball striking him about two inches below the ribs to the right of the center.

A Young Man Suicides.

James E. Winn, accountant in the office of the Van Dusen-Harrington Company, Duluth, committeed suicide by taking poison, the exact nature of which has not been determined. He was single, aged about 24. No reason can be assigned, unless it was poor health. He was not in a position where he could get behind in his accounts.

News in Brief.

The reformatory at St. Cloud, is soon to branch out into another industry, a brush factory. The order for machinery has been sent and it is expected within a year to include a broom factory. The brush factory is to furnish labor for fifty inmates.

Dan D. O'Connell has begun an action in the district court of St. Paul, againts the St. Paul City railroad company for $3,000 damages caused by one of its cars running against and smashing his buggy, killing his horse, which he was driving, and injuring himself on March 20, 1893.

John Silker, aged 26, employed by F. W. Millet, the horseman at Rochester, for five years, suicided by shooting himself in the mouth. The ball came out near the left temple. He was temperate and industrious.

A medal of honor has been awarded to Andrew W. McCormack, late sergeant of the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Illinois volunteers, now a resident of Monticello, Minn., for most distinguished gallantry as a member of the storming party at Vicksburg, May 22, 1863.

A bad wreck occurred on the Great Northern a mile west of St. Cloud, in which 20 cars of wheat, flour and lumber were ditched. The wreck was caused by the train breaking in two.

T. A. Chubb, a brakeman on the Wisconsin Central road between Chippewa Falls and Minneapolis, was struck by an overhead bridge at Troutbrook Junction and knocked off his train. He sustained a severe contusion of the skull and was badly bruised about the body. Chubb was brought home to Minneapolis and was attended by Dr. Long. He will recover.

Two hundred land patents were received at Duluth from Washington. Among them were several for lands in the new gold belt, which gives hope that the country up there may be developed without long delays caused by contests.

Articles of incorporation were filed in the office of the secretary of state incorporating the American Exploration Company, of Duluth, with a capital of $100,000. The incorporators are John E., A. R. Lionidas and W. J. Merritt and C. S. Christopher, all of whom are residents of Duluth.

W. H. Best, a Minneapolis commission merchant, was run over by a train of freight cars in the Union Depot yards, St. Paul, and suffered the loss of his right foot.

David Cronin, of Lake City, was killed by the accidental discharge of a Winchester.

RAISED BY REPUBLICANS.

It Was the Tariff Instead of the Workingman's Wages.

McKinley, the logical candidate of the republican party for the presidency, says that there are two ways of checking importations—one by imposing a full or prohibitive tariff and the other by lowering wages.

Then it ought to be found that a full or prohibitive tariff increases wages both in the special lines of protected industry and generally throughout the country. McKinley made a tariff and the result was lowered wages in the most fully protected lines and a tendency downward in all wage-earning occupations. How is this?

It ought also to be instantaneously apparent that wages are first increased in the particular line where the prohibitive duty is levied and subsequently increased from industry to industry until everybody is getting good wages. But instead of being so instantaneously apparent that the intelligent workingman can see the swell of increase starting from the particular point and lifting the level of the whole country, it is never apparent at all, and the workingman must take McKinley's word for the blessings that attend a prohibitive rate.

In 1892 the republican platform demanded duties equal to the difference in wages between the United States and countries which might send goods here.

Democrats at once promised that they would not propose a tariff in this congress which would not give duties to that amount. Not that they agreed to any connection between a tariff and wages, but that they had no desire to at once radically reduce duties to the extent a literal compliance with the republican platform would require. To fit a tariff to the republican platform it would be necessary to figure out the cost of each protected article. For instance, the tariff maker must find out how much the manufacturers here and abroad pay for the labor employed in making a ton of iron, a yard of dress goods and a set of table china. He would find out that the American manufacturer pays less than the English and a great deal less than the Spanish or Italian.

Hence, to reduce duties to meet the republican platform's demand would be to abolish them altogether. Of course, the republicans did not intend to demand free trade, but to construe their platform according to the known facts of manufacturing production would be to liberate trade, absolutely and finally.

Both the republican platform of 1892 and the logical republican candidate for 1896 have either lied to the American people or have exposed a singular ignorance of facts. The second supposition is a true one in McKinley's case. He is probably the most ignorant man that ever led on an economic issue in any country. He gave himself over early to commonplace generalizations and has done no more in his later career.

If he knew what he was talking about his speeches would be wretched and ghastly examples of falsehood. But he does not know. He prates and prates and prates. He never debates a definite proposition and never yet even proposed to encounter an economist.

The intelligent workingman can unhorse this prater by asking him: "You had a chance to raise wages, and why did you only raise the tariff?"—St. Louis Republic.

An Imposition on Labor.

And how long will the country permit manufacturers paying high dividends to themselves out of tariff taxes imposed upon consumers to reduce their labor to the lowest starvation point? The time is close at hand when the general government will follow its taxes levied for the benefit of labor as it follows all other taxes levied upon the people and enforce the application of those taxes for the purpose for which they are levied. In other words, if manufacturers will not pay to labor the tariff taxes levied upon their products distinctly for the benefit of labor, it is the plain duty of congress to repeal those taxes and make the products free. The people of the nation will assent to taxes legitimately levied and applied to the benefit of labor, but they will not assent to the perversion of such taxes from labor to enrich the manufacturers.—Philadelphia Times.

——Business men remember that the republican treasury management under Harrison was a continuous "skinning along," as Senator Hill puts it, and a regular system of "kiting." It had created a deficit, threatened the outstanding currency obligations with dishonor and was striving to conceal its bankrupting tactics by the artifices tricky business always employs under such circumstances. Cleveland's administration has been honest and square. The people who own the treasury have had the truth at all times. Strict and confidence-inspiring methods have quieted uneasiness. Compare Harrisonian "kiting" with Cleveland square dealing.—St. Louis Republic.

——The republicans in their platform denounce the income tax as a "tax upon prosperity." Are we to infer that if that party comes into power in the state it will levy the taxes upon adversity and look to the poorhouses, insane asylums, orphanages and the like for the revenues?—N. Y. World.

FACTS ABOUT BUSINESS.

Unpalatable Evidence for the Calamity Howlers to Swallow.

There is instruction in the record of failures for the last nine months as compared with the corresponding period in previous years.

The whole number this year, according to Bradstreet's record, was 9,251, with actual assets to the amount of $59,707,031 and liabilities to the amount of $110,674,349. During the corresponding period last year the number was 11,140, with assets of $227,373,231 and liabilities of $327,375,109. It appears, therefore, that while the number this year is still large, the liabilities are not much more than one-third as great as they were last year.

The decrease this year is not remarkable, as the comparison is made with the period last year which included the panic months. A comparison with the same period of 1891, when the country was in the high tide of prosperity under the McKinley law, according to the republican oracles, is more instructive. Then the number of failures was 8,866, with $71,811,320 assets and $138,811,510 liabilities. The number was only 365 greater this year, while the liabilities were actually $28,136,576 less, and the proportion of assets to liabilities was 3 per cent. greater.

This is a cold fact that the calamity howlers will take good care to ignore.

A comparison of this year with last by quarters will be not less instructive. Following is a statement of the number of failures and the amount of liabilities by quarters for the two years 1894 and 1893:

| | Failures. 1894. | 1893. | Liabilities. 1894. | 1893. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1st quarter | 3,969 | 3,009 | $49,085,088 | $38,424,144 |
| 2d quarter | 2,559 | 3,170 | 33,470,251 | 131,436,078 |
| 3d quarter | 2,723 | 4,901 | 28,119,565 | 156,414,887 |

The comparison shows that both the number of failures and the amount of liabilities were greater during the first quarter of this year, after the panic, than they were during the first quarter of last year, before the panic. It also shows that both failures and liabilities for the second and third quarters this year were decidedly less than for the corresponding quarters last year.

There was no panic during the first quarter of 1893, and yet the number of failures and the amount of liabilities were both greater than during either the second or the third quarter of the present year. In other words, there have been less business disasters in the same length of time since the 1st of April this year than there were during the first quarter of 1893, when, according to the protection philosophers, the country was still on the mountain top of prosperity, where it had been placed by the McKinley act.

The comparison shows that the panic had nearly spent its force by the beginning of the present year and that since the first quarter of the year failures have not been more than ordinarily numerous or disastrous.

This is another fact which the calamity howlers will keep out of sight as much as possible. It is a fact which, with many others, demonstrates that under a democratic administration and policy the country has been recovering from the disastrous effects of the republican panic of 1893.—Chicago Herald.

OPINIONS AND POINTERS.

——McKinley is delivering the same old speech—a man and a speech with one idea.—Chicago Herald.

——McKinley demands full protection. Protection got loaded in 1890. Better let it stay sober a few years.—St. Louis Republic.

——"Elect us to congress," say the republicans. "We can't do any harm because the senate and the president won't let us." Such is the platform of the grand old party this year.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

——Gov. McKinley is denouncing the democratic party for repealing the Sherman silver law. When Grover Cleveland gave it as his "solemn" option that the Sherman law should be repealed Gov. McKinley gave it as his "solemn" opinion that the president was right. Gov. McKinley ought to keep a scrapbook—if he knows how.—Chicago Times.

——It will not be in the least surprising if, long before the autumn of 1896, republican orators and republican organs should be found eagerly protesting that the tariff of 1894 must not be disturbed, practically claiming the credit of its adoption, and solemnly declaring, in the old, old fashion, that those wicked democrats are dangerous and must not be permitted to hold power.—Boston Globe.

——It will no longer do to tell the people who read the newspapers and do their own thinking that the fear of tariff revision caused the panic and hard times. The tariff has been revised and business has begun to improve. To deny that the hard times resulted from republican legislation is rendered difficult when hard times begin to disappear as soon as republican legislation begins to be undone.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

——Business men of the country will have faith in great lights in their own calling, like Mr. Depew, and Hon. W. W. Crapo, of Massachusetts, who says that "the conditions were never more favorable for a great, permanent and healthy revival of business." McKinley's predictions may terrify the gloomy and timid, but the manly intelligence of this country rejoices that McKinleyism is dead, and realizes that McKinley has dropped out of the procession.—Detroit Free Press.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Pretty wrappers to wear over dainty nightgowns for lounging in, lazy mornings in one's own room, are of thin, pale-tinted silk, made long and full from the throat, with big, loose sleeves and white ruffles either of Valenciennes lace or dotted blonde.

—Red Cabbage Pickled: To two-thirds red cabbage, chopped fine, put one-third peppers, chopped fine. To a gallon of the mixture add one tablespoonful each of cloves and ground cinnamon, two of salt, half a cup of fine black mustard seed and a few pepper corns. Mix thoroughly, put it in a stone jar and pour over enough boiling vinegar to cover. Keep in a cool place. —Boston Budget.

—Spanish Pickles: Take one peck green tomatoes and one dozen onions, slice, sprinkle with salt, let stand over night and drain off the juice. Allow one pound of sugar, one-fourth pound whole white mustard seed, one ounce ground black pepper, one ounce cloves, one ounce ginger, one ounce cinnamon; mix dry. Put a layer of tomatoes and onions in a kettle and sprinkle with the mixture, then tomatoes and more spice until all are used; cover with vinegar and let boil slowly for two hours, after which pack in small jars and set in the cellar. This is of all pickle the best and we advise everyone to try it.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

—Potato Dumplings: Pare five large potatoes and grate them raw, and squeeze out all the moisture through a coarse cloth. Let the water which was drained from them stand fifteen minutes and then pour off, mixing the starch which remains in the bottom of the dish with the grated potatoes. Have ready two large cupfuls of mashed, cold, boiled potatoes; mix them with the grated ones, and pepper and salt to taste, also two tablespoonfuls of flour and one heaping tablespoonful of butter; mix all well together and then make it into balls the size of an egg. Have a saucepan with boiling water, salted a little; drop in the dumplings and cover closely. When they rise to the top of the water they will be done. They are to be served while hot and eaten with any kind of sauce you wish. They are very good eaten with fried or roasted meats and gravy.—Ohio Farmer.

CARELESS ABOUT THE TEETH.

The Great Majority Are Negligent in This Important Matter.

Much has been and will be written on the care of teeth, because so many persons do not appreciate these valuable organs of mastication. If teeth are well cared for and regularly inspected by the dentist, decay will hardly have an opportunity to do great harm before it is stopped. Decay often has its beginning in bits of food sticking between the teeth and forming the starting point of a diseased tooth.

The toothpick should be used regularly after each meal and after eating. It need not necessarily be employed during a meal or carried like a cigar in the mouth after eating, but in the privacy of one's room the quill toothpick should search out each corner and angle between the teeth, and all foreign matter should be removed, then the toothbrush should be used, and as the spaces between the teeth are vertical in a standing person, so the toothbrush should be used up and down rather than across, so that fresh water may be scrubbed between each tooth.

The toothbrushes that shed bristles are not desirable articles of the toilet, for not only are the loose bristles a great annoyance, but they may even work in between the teeth and in the gums and cause painful points. Such loose bristles usually come from cheap brushes or those used for too long a time.

These injunctions about the care of the teeth have to be repeated again and again, because it is such a matter of every day observance that persons careful in other matters are careless about their teeth. As the teeth are not only very visible, and when in a bad state, very prominent, but are aids to digestion, and if imperfect may lead to dyspepsia and kindred troubles, they should be scrupulously cared for.—Popular Health Magazine.

FOR DUSTING DAY.

A Few Hints for the Housekeeper Who Strives to Be Neat.

Dusting a room is not the simple matter lookers-on think. It does not consist in wearing a pretty apron and an effective cap and waving a feather duster after the picturesque fashion of Phyllis in the plays. In fact, a feather duster is one of the least useful implements a woman who intends to dust could find. It merely puts the particles of dust in circulation in the air, and after awhile they all settle again on mantles and mirrors, pianos and chairs, to disconcert the housewife later when she finds callers gazing with admiration upon the silvery gray cloud that is spread over all her furniture.

A dust cloth is the proper thing to remove dust from all wood and hard material. A stiff brush should be used for upholstered furniture. It will remove dust from plush, tapestry, and the like, set it moving about in the air and as smooth surfaces have a greater attraction for dust than rough ones, it will settle again on the table and chairs. Then a soft, slightly damp rag will remove it. It is, consequently, always wise to brush the upholstered goods first, to allow a minute's intermission before dusting.

The trials of dusting day can be greatly reduced if the housewife will, during sweeping, put under cover all her bric-a-brac and books, and will as far as possible protect her upholstered furniture from dust by covering it with coarse sheets.—N. Y. World.

Oyster Dishes.

Panned and creamed oysters are both delicious little dishes that may be quickly prepared in the chafing dish. Drain the liquor from the oysters and have a pint of solid meats at hand. Rub together a tablespoonful of flour and the same quantity of butter, and stir in the chafing dish until they bubble. Add a cupful of rich milk and stir until the sauce is smooth and creamy. Then turn in the oysters and cook until they fill out or plump. Season to taste with white pepper, salt and a dash of nutmeg if you are fond of it. These oysters may be served on thin slices of crisp toast. The panned oyster should be looked over and drained and cooked in hot butter until the edges begin to curl. Put a tablespoonful of butter in the chafing dish, and when it bubbles add a pint of oysters. A minute before serving add two tablespoonfuls of good sherry to the oysters, and serve on small slices of toast. —N Y. Post

A SUMMER'S DAY INCIDENT.

The Young Man Forgot His Straw Hat Had a String to It.

The young man with the pepper and salt suit, the yellow shoes and the straw hat bound about by a varicolored ribbon was walking just ahead. He seemed to know that he was made up for display, for he kept looking in at the show windows and pulling down his cuffs. At the corner one of those sudden gusts of wind which seem to come from nowhere blew off his straw hat, the one with the varicolored ribbon.

He made a grab with both hands, but it was too late. The wind had taken it off his head.

He saw a hat rolling down the street, traveling on one edge. Of course he was after it.

"Go it," shouted a policeman.

"Hooray," yelled the corner newsboy.

The pedestrian found time to stop and encourage him in his chase. But the hat had a long start on him and the wind was holding out. Once he saw the hat topple over and lie quietly on the cobble stones for a moment. Then a puff of wind raised it and sent it wheeling along at an increased speed.

He did not hear the jeering laughter of the teamsters. With lips firmly set and nostrils distended he ran, gaining every moment. Once he was delayed. The hat rolled under a coal wagon and he had to go around. At last the hat ran into the curbstone near a corner street lamp, and with a pounce he was upon it.

All flushed and breathless, he picked it up, and then leaned up against the lamp post to rest.

A man also flushed and breathless came running up and took the hat out of his hands.

"I'm much obliged," said he.

"For what?"

"This is my hat."

"Where's mine, then?"

"Hanging behind you at the end of the string."

Practical.

Sweet is sympathy, and thrice welcome are kind words, but there are times when the heart craves recognition more substantial. In a western city, not long ago, a gentleman was surprised to recognize the face of a person who was hawking shoestrings and button-hooks on a street corner as that of one of his regimental comrades in the war. He went up to the man, greeted him warmly, and assured him of his sympathy. He was much grieved, he said, to see an old soldier in such a case. When he had expressed himself at some length in this manner, he was suddenly interrupted by his former acquaintance. "I'm much obliged for your pity," he remarked, dryly, "but how many pairs of shoestrings will you buy?"—Youth's Companion.

Small Hope.

"Do you think my daughter will ever become so proficient in her piano playing as to earn her livelihood at it?" asked the fond mother.

"Perhaps," replied the professor. "Zome tay dey may vant a pianist in a teef and tumb azylum."—Indianapolis Journal.

SHE—"Speaking of brave deeds, I once prevented a man from committing suicide." He—"How?" She—"I married him."—Harlem Life.

TO PUT ON needed flesh, no matter how you've lost it, take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It works wonders. By restoring the normal action of the deranged organs and functions, it builds the flesh up to a safe and healthy standard—promptly, pleasantly and naturally. The weak, emaciated, thin, pale and puny are made strong, plump, round and rosy. Nothing so effective as a strength restorer and flesh maker is known to medical science; this puts on healthy flesh not the fat of cod liver oil and its filthy compounds. It rouses every organ of the body to activity, purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood so that the body feels refreshed and strengthened. If you are too thin, too weak, too nervous, it may be that the food assimilation is at fault. A certain amount of bile is necessary for the reception of the fat foods in the blood. Too often the liver holds back this element which would help digestion. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery stimulates, tones up and invigorates the liver, nourishes the blood, and the muscles, stomach and nerves get the rich blood they require.

Spent Hundreds of Dollars with no Benefit.

M. J. COLEMAN of 37 Sargent St., Roxbury, Mass., writes: "After suffering from dyspepsia and constipation with untold agony for at least 18 months, I am more than pleased to say that after using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets' for one month, I was entirely cured, and from that day to this I do not know, thank God, what even a slight headache is. I paid a doctor on Tremont St., Boston, in one day (for his advice only,) the sum of $10.00 with $3.50 for medicine, and derived no benefit. I got more relief in one hour from your medicines, as far as my stomach was concerned, than from all the other medicine I used.

M. J. COLEMAN, ESQ.

If any person who reads this is suffering from dyspepsia or constipation and will use your medicine as I have done, he will never regret it."

Girls, Learn to Cook.

A girl who deliberately marries without understanding the art of cooking is committing a—well, the law of the land does not call it a crime, but the unwritten law of the home certainly does constitute it a crime. Especially is this true of those in modest circumstances, who can not employ efficient cooks. Burnt fingers, sour bread, scorched roasts, leathery steaks, wishy-washy coffee and disordered stomachs are not conducive to the happiness that one imagines the honeymoon should be filled with. There are so many reasons, logical and philosophical, why cooking should be included in the accomplishments of young girls that it is useless to enumerate them. Good cooking is the basis of happiness, health and success in the home life. One may thoroughly understand art, music, architecture, science and philosophy, be familiar with astronomy, mythology, the mysteries of evolution, politics and literature, yet if the chemistry of a loaf of bread has been neglected the education is sadly incomplete, so far as the "house mother" is concerned.—N. Y. World.

That really happened to a certain grocer's clerk, because he couldn't induce customers to take an inferior brand of washing powder in place of Pearline. The grocer said, "If you can't sell what I want you to sell, I don't want you."

Now it doesn't take a very wise woman to decide whether this was an honest grocer. And a woman wise enough for that, would be likely to insist upon having nothing but Pearline. ## DELANO DIARY

--Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

—Read over our comments on the ticket and pick out who you will vote for before you go to the polls.

—Rev. Purdy is announced to hold Episcopal services at the Presbyterian church on Sunday evening at 7:45.

--Mr. Towne, of Duluth, candidate on the Republican ticket for congress, is annouced to speak here this evening, the 26th.

—Observe the change of time in our Great Northern time table. The morning train east, now leaves Delano at 5:55; the evening train west at 8:10.

—C. W. Kerrick has the foundation and the drain to his cellar completed. People are looking for a model house as Mr. K. is a well known builder himself.

—Presiding Elder, R. R. Atchison, of Mineapolis, will preach at the M. E. church Sunday evening, at 7:30. He preaches at Armstrong at 10:30 A. M. the same day.

—The electric lights have been turned on for a short time each evening to test them. They are quite an improvement over those that have done time for so many moons.

—On Monday evening this section of country was visited by a very extensive rain. The ground was thoroughly soaked and on being plowed looks to be in as fine shape as it ever was notwithstanding the dry season just past.

—The Supervisors of Franklin and Rockford towns and committe of Commissioners on bridges met at the Samsel bridge on Wednesday and located the new bridge to be built there across Crow River. The bridge is to cost $2900. and to be 100 feet long. Mr. Drayne, the contractor has the material at Rockford Station ready for commencing work at once.

—The Eagle this week announces to her readers that the "bad boys" were out in force Tuesday evening, breaking street lamps etc., etc. We were absent from town attending a Baldwin meeting at Buffalo. Strange the Old Bird can't keep order for one night without publishing broadcast that Delano has "bad boys".

--It is expected that Delano will have a big day on Monday, the 29th, this being the day chosen for holding the grand celebration of the completion of the waterworks and electric light systems. The forenoon is to be devoted to a parade of fire companies and Delano band and a display of water-works until noon commencing about 10 A. M. Afternoon speaking, singing and other exercires at the City Hall. In the evening a dance in the City Hall. Everybody is invited to come and see the new city fixings.

—Warren Merriman and son Joe and Tiff Hitzman left on Mondav morning for Princeton, on their annual hunting tour. If they secure some game we hope we will not be forgotten in its distribution. We were on the list for a good chunk of venison last year. We have not had a piece of bear meat since old Joe Cursol, of Traverse de Sioux, brought some, along with one of the monstrous claws of the bear, into the Minnesota Statesman office at St. Peter, where we were then taking our first lessons in printing, in we think 1861. Don't forget us boys and be sure and shoot something; venison will do this time, as we read that a Polander found a pair of shoes containing feet the man being away somewhere up that way. We dont want you to take any such risks. Be careful, but remember we like venison and we dont think a deer would eat you.

—A communication on "The Judgeship" appears in another column.

—The town of Franklin registration board can be found at Swedeback & Erickson's building on Bridge Street Oct. 30. Go around and get registered so you can vote.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Young left on Wednesday for a visit in the cities.

Mrs. Joseph Cramer left on Monday for a short visit in Minneapolis.

Rev. and Mrs. Powell spent the fore part of the week with parishioners at Watertown.

Elmer Coffin, of St. Peter, has returned to Delano and resumed his position on the GAZETTE force.

W. H. Cutting, Populist nominee for Judge of Probate was a GAZETTE caller while in town on business.

W. A. Shaw, of Clearwater, Democratic candidate for the legislature was electioneering Delano friends yesterday.

Rev. Thayer, of Minneapolis preached at the Presbyterian church on Sunday evening and spent Monday visiting Delano friends.

F. F. Chancellor has, we understand, become converted to the Mainest kind of politics by hearing Tom Reed at Minneapolis this week.

Mrs. Lucy Milam, of New Brighton, is visiting this week with her friend, Mrs. Austin Cooper, before leaving for Chicago, her future home.

Mr. Elliot, of Minneapolis, was in town yesterday, settling up with the school board on his contract for building the new school house.

Emery Cunningham, of the Freshman class at the State "U" with his soldier cap, the envy of many an old friend spent Sunday with his parents and friends in Delano.

J. G. Brown of Duluth a member of the Democratic State Central committee was in town on Monday in the interest of Congressman Baldwin. He made the GAZETTE a call.

County Cullings.

It does seem strange to most people who stop to think of it that, the new bridge now being built across Crow River near the old Samsell bridge should cost nearly $10 per lineal foot more than did the Ruckold bridge which has been in use for several years.

The County Commissioners met at Buffalo on the 18th inst. and elected G. P. Boutwell chairman to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Ole Mattson. They voted to sell the old Probate safe to William Quinn for $50. This is said to be a very paying investment for the purchaser; the safe having cost the county several hundred dollars.

Times are certainly picking up. Our neighbor up street who was on the Republican Congressional committee last year informs us that he is "now taking very little interest in politics and that he has so much work on hand he cannot afford to do so." Surely Major Baldwin and the Democratic tariff reformers are good enough for him. At all events he seems happier under the new tariff dispensation.

Major Baldwin said in his Buffalo speech that in the McKinley procession at Duluth a few weeks ago appeared a banner with a strange device, "Baldwin says, 'Hungry bellies don't count.' " The very thought of it seemed to raise the Major's ire and he said, "Baldwin never said it. It's a lie." The opposition must be getting hard up for campaign arguments to come out in such style as that, surely.

Baldwin at Buffalo.

A packed opera house at Buffalo listened on Tuesday evening to what Congressman Baldwin had to say about his stewardship and other political subjects. The Major is a very plain and earnest talker; and while his flowers of rhetoric and flights of imagination may not come up to some gifted orators, for solid facts, given out with emphasis sufficient to carry conviction to all he is very hard to beat. He said his pension record had been attacked; but certainly a man that had gone through battles and prisons and drawn a blank in the death lottery while his companions, poor fellows, drew death prizes, could hardly have other than a warm place in his heart for his old comrades. We believe that few if any old soldiers who listened to him at Buffalo, whatever be their political beliefs, will feel like casting a ballot against the Major on Nov. 6.

Every business man and every man who reads and knows the necessities of a deep waterway to the sea and heard the Major explain how for fifteen years he had labored for this. And how on the first of next July the plan will have been carried out so far as to insure the 20 foot depth from Duluth to Buffalo; thereby saying to the shippers and raisers of wheat thousands of dollars annually, will certainly favor returning our present Congressman to the House of his friends, where with the aid of the Administration favorable to him and his plans he can do something toward completing the great work.

People who heard the modest Congressman explain his bill for opening up the Red Lake Reservation to settlement by homesteaders and who desire that hundreds of poor people be given a chance to make homes for themselves can hardly do better than support so hard a worker as Major Baldwin for this great boon to poor people.

The Major is a business man from the word go and any place that his friends and constituents can be aided in any way is looked after faithfully. And being in touch with the present administration which must last during the next term of congress anyway, the Major is the man for Congressman for sixth Minnesota district. Vote for him.

F. W. M. Cutcheon, of St. Paul, late chairman of the Democratic state central committee followed the Major in a speech which owing to the lateness of the hour was short but nevertheless showed an earnestness in the cause of Democratic principles.

NELSON, JOHNSON.—On Wednesday at Buffalo, Mr. Martin Nelson and Miss Hannah Johnson.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. JANE HOISINGTON.

BY E. M. MCGARY.

The monster death hath visited our circle
And taken from us one most dear;
And the shadow falleth heavily
Casting gloom both far and near.

More than thirty years our neighbor,
As the seasons went and came;
Sharing in our joys of sorrows,
Still unchanging just the same.

Sympathetic in her nature,
Kind and geutle, loving, true;
Ne'er forgetting any kindness,
Quick forgiving injuries too.

Kind to every living creature
Watchful, careful of the same;
Even looking for their comfort,
Never causing needless pain.

But she's gone, loved wife and mother,
Sleeping sweetly 'neath the rod;
Father: comfort the bereft ones
Help them bear the "chastening rod."

From her pleasant home and loved ones,
Rudely taken by death's hand;
And all is sorrow now and sadness
In that lonely broken band.

Loved ones will miss thee, sadly miss thee,
Traveling down life's toilsome way;
Miss the sunshine of thy presence,
Miss thy counsel day by day.

But the promise: O! how cheering,
If we'er faithful to our trust;
We shall meet again our loved ones,
At the resurrection of the just.

And the meeting will be lasting,
For eternal life t'will be:
For the Saviour paid the ransom,
And will clothe with immortality.

ATTORNEY GENERAL CHILDS' decision in the R. R. lands case isn't calculated to assist Bob Dunn very much, but it can't be helped.

GOVERNOR NELSON don't appear to be under General Olney's orders. At least he is out stumping for the re-election of himself with all his might and letting the governor's office take care of itself for all of him.

THE marshalship lately resigned by J. Adam Bede has been given to Wm. M. Campbell, of St. Paul. Mr. Campbell is familiar with the workings of the office having held it under Grover Cleveland's first term as President.

AFTER hearing Michael Doran's speech to the Democratic State Convention forninst Adolph Bierman for State Auditor we knew at once we were a Bierman man red hot. Could Mr. Doran but canvass the state thoroughly against Mr. Bierman he would certainly elect him.

J. ADAM BEDE laid down the honors and pay of the Marshal's office in order to help his friend, Congressman Baldwin defend himself against the attacks of those who sought to detame him and throw him out of office. Mr. Bede is able to stump against the best of them and has done a big work; the result of which will be manifest on election day wherever he has been.

IT seems by the decision of the Attorney General that State Auditor Bierman was correct about his having the authority to select the R. R. lands himself instead of allowing the railroads to take all the best pieces. And after consulting his legal advisor, Governor Nelson has signed the deed made by Mr. Biermen; the G. N. has its title to its share of swamp lands and is not caring so much now as it was before whether or not Mr. Bierman is re-elected.

DON'T let anybody deter you from voting for George L. Becker, Adolph Bierman and Major Baldwin. These men have a chance of being elected. Of course do the best you can for others but don't forget these. Don't let anybody make you believe Becker has pulled out of the race. He is not that kind of a democrat. He is in for the war. Give him your vote, sure. He cut all bridges for retreat when in his acceptance speech he said, "The Old Guards may die but they never surrender." Vote for him.

THE Representative, Donnely's organ claims that Owen will be elected by 20,000 plurality over Becker. The republicans claim that Nelson will have 20,000 over Owens. And the democratic State Central Committee gives out that Becker will get very near the vote of Judge Wilson and be elected. It is hard to tell by these claims anything about it and from the way politics are mixed this year it is impossible for anyone to predict who will be the winner. But every democrat that desires party success will surely cast his vote for so typical a democrat as Mr. Becker, and hope for the best.

THE office of State Auditor is one of the most important of all the political positions our people have to fill. You should carefully select the man for the important place. A man cannot grasp in a few minutes or a few months all the possibilities for schemers to help themselves to the State's property; to school lands, to mining lands, pine and other valuable property, but must learn it gradually and by degrees. Mr. Bierman has solved some of these questions and has been instrumental in preserving the rights of the State as against those who it appears wanted to take advantage of the State. Men in his own party have sought to get rid of him by besmirching his character; and in the attempt ignominiously failed so far as his party was concerned; the nominating convention by a handsome majority placing him again on the ticket; and the very speeches made to "down him" or to "knock him out" gave away so much of the true inwardness of the charges against him as to redound to his credit; to assist in opening the eyes of the rank and file of the convention and cause those who were before indifferent from a lack of knowledge of the affairs of the Auditor's office to become his friends and to work for his renomination. Let every voter who wishes to see the property of the State in care of the Auditor taken care of properly and to the best interests of the State and its institutions vote for State Auditor Adolph Bierman.

THE Czar of Russia died on Thursday Nov. 1. His son, Nicholas, now reigns as his successor.

THIS is the last issue of the GAZETTE before election. You must now make up your mind who to vote for as election day comes on Tuesday, Nov. 6. Be sure to find the democratic Bees, Becker, Bierman and Baldwin.

Thirty-eighth District.

A. N. Dare of the Elk River Star-News, Hon. H. E. Craig, of Orrock, and W. E. Culkin, of Wright county, are the Republicans who will take seats in the next legislature from their district—and a better trio, from every standpoint that goes to make able, honest men will not be found in the next legislative body. Many of the electors in the eastern part of Sherburne county may not have a personal knowledge of the candidate W. E. Culkin, of Wright county but he is tarred with the same stick that Hon. H. E. Craig and A. N. Dare are tarred with, so do not hesitate, but vote for him and send the whole delegation to St. Paul next winter with a strong endorsement.—Princeton Union.

The above clipping from the Princeton Union, Bob Dunn's paper, reads rather strange to Wright county people. Why, don't the republican candidate for State Auditor know that instead of a "trio" of legislators our district is entitled to a "quintet"? Isn't he aware that there are two candidates from Wright county that he has ignored entirely? Aren't they tarred with the same stick as the others; or has the tar been applied to a couple of their opponents? Bob must have drawn his information from the Eagle and concluded that it is not best for his republican friends to send Messrs. Swanson and Rice to the legislature this year. As a consequence of this bad break in Bob's own paper we would not be surprised to see a considerable slump in the vote for Auditor in the western part of our county. Perhaps Bob had learned that his opponent, Mr. Adolph Bierman was pretty strong in that part of the country anyway and did this to kind of let himself down easy like. Anyway we don't expect it will add to Bob's Wright county vote in the least.

Towne vs. Baldwin.

C. A. Towne, of Duluth, spoke at the City Hall last Friday night to a crowded house. He is a smooth, fluent talker and held his audience well. It appears to us that he did not make a very good hit for this campaign in asking people to send him to Congress at this time with a democratic administration there to veto his efforts, to correct the tariff laws back onto a McKinley basis. It seems Tom Reed's plan of leaving them alone until the democratic administration has served out its time would be better. Does Mr. Towne think the people want to have another season of the "awful suspense" through which they have recently passed while the republicans are trying to tinker tariff and then have Grover veto it? It seems as if Major Baldwin has more to go to Congress for than has Mr. Towne, at present. The Major has that pet scheme of his, "Deep water-way to the sea," that he has been so earnesty and so long working at and which he has so well under way; with his friends about him at Washington to assist him in putting through his plans. It seems a pity now to risk anything for a change to a man who would have to begin at the bottom of everything if he went to Congress and work up, delaying this and other important measures possibly indefinitely. "It is a poor time to swap horses while crossing a stream," and Mr. Baldwin should be allowed to complete this plan as soon as possible, thereby saving thousands of dollars to the farmers of our state by cheapening wheat transportation to the old countries where we are all glad to sell our grain though some object to buying goods therr. From a business standpoint it looks as if Major Baldwin could, at the present time, being in sympathy with his surroundings do vastly more for our district than Mr. Towne, who would be out in the cold with the present administration, and could not pass any kind of a measure without getting Democratic help and getting the democratic President to sign it. Remember or Tuesday to place a cross (X) after the name of M. R. Baldwin.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Oct. 26, 1894.

President Cleveland is again at the White House. He is in robust health and, like all other democrats, in splendid spirits, on account of the clearing aspect of the democratic skies. This has been a good week at the headquarters of the Democratic Congressional Campaign committee. From every direction comes news of a decided improvement in business and consequently in democratic prospects. Even in New York city, where it looked for a time as though five or six seats in the House were to be presented to the republicans by running two democratic candidates in each district, the tangle is being straightened out, thanks to the hard work of Senators Hill and Faulkner and the good advice of President Cleveland, and the election of democrats from all the city dirtricts made certain. "If the election could only be postponed thirty days," said a member of the Congressional committee, "it would add at least thirty to the democratic majority in the next house."

Postmaster General Bissell has the right idea of the postal service. Speaking of an order sent out by him this week, calling the attention of the postal employees to that portion of the civil service law which prohibits forced political contributions from Federal employees, he said: "The Postoffice is a business, not a political institution. It has been my endeavor to conduct it on business principles, so as to give the people the best possible mail facilities. We do not want the service crippled or interrupted for political advantage." Those are ideas that will make votes among business men.

Chief Clerk Daniels, of the Interior department, who has just returned from North Carolina, is regarded as high authority on the politics of that state, and his view of the situation there widely differs from that which populists and republicans are giving out. He says: "The republicans and populists have affected a fusion, so far as formality goes, but many in both parties repudiate it. Together they have 12,000 more votes in the state than the democrats, and the problem is to mass them. If it could succeed they would carry the state, but it is not universal. My own opinion is that the democrats will carry seven districts certain, and that their chances are the best in the two doubtful districts. The legislature which will elect two U. S. Senators, will surely be democratic on joint ballot. The democratic judicial ticket will, I think, be elected, although that isn't as certain as democratic control of the legislature." Members of the Democratic Congressional committee regard the predictions of Mr. Daniels as very conservative.

Mr. W. A. Croffut, a wellknown journalist, who was lately dropped from the pay rolls of Uncle Sam, has turned democrat after losing his office, thus differing from those who have pretended to turn democrat to keep their offices. He is now on the stump in Chairman Wilson's district. His reasons for becoming a democrat as told by himself, are good ones. He says, "I went to England. I found that in that country under free trade they had lower wages than here. I then went to Germany, where they have our policy of protection. I found that wages were lower there than in England. I then went to France, where they have a high protective tariff, even between different divisions of the country, and there I found wages still lower than in Germany. I began to think then. I saw that tariff did not regulate wages. I saw that something was wrong. I found that it was in the protective system, and that is one of the many reasons why I have changed my views and am now a democrat."

Commissioner of Pensions Lochren says of the bureau's letter to a postmaster, which the republicans have printed as a campaign document: "In adjusting a pension case it has always been the practice of the bureau to call on the postmasters in the locality where the affiant resides for information as to his creditability. Postmasters sometimes object to giving this information, particularly when the information is derogatory to the character of the affiant, without some assurance that their communications will be held confidential. It was in answer to an inquiry from Postmaster F. R. Sparling, at Granville, Ohio, as to whether such information would be held as confidential that the letter which is being given publicity was written. No similar letter has been sent out, unless in answer to similar inquiry." No comment is needed.

Somebody seems to have mixed those babies up in regard to the intentions of the administration in appointing Indian agents. Instead of supplanting the army officers now acting as Indian agents with civilians, as was published it is intended to supplant the civilian Indian agents with army officers as fast as vacancies occur. Quite a difference.

Among Our Exchanges.

No use to say Adam Bede, any one knows whom we mean. Adam was here last Thursday night and delivered the best speech ever heard in Aitkin, Keen, witty, logical, driving home the nail of truth with the hammer of common sense, and yet never hurting the sensibilities of any one, his address most effectually aided the good cause of the gallant old soldier Congressman he is so bravely fighting for. We have Adam's promise to come up in case the major is elected, and give us another speech which is enough to make Aitken vote solidly for Baldwin. Mr. E. C. Kiley, of Grand Rapids, also spoke briefly, and was well received.—Aitkin Age.

C. J. Buell, the candidate for state senator from the Twenty-eighth district is making one of the most courageous campaigns that the district has ever seen. He knows a whole lot of interesting things and he proceeds to tell them every time he gets a chance. It is a pity that there are not more of such men nominated for legislative offices and fewer of the cheap politicians.—St. Paul News Record

Diphtheria is epidemic in several portions of Ohio, Illnois and Kentucky and the death list is becoming appalling. It is a disease that, more than any other afflicts mankind, baffles medical skill. Neither preventive nor cure has yet been discovered. Although cures are sometimes effected, the medicines are not specific in all cases. The chief cause is admitted to be impure food and water, yet it is propagated both by contagion and infection, and seldom yields to treatment. Pure air and water are the greatest safeguards against its attacks, but these are often usless in preventing it.—Morning Call.

IN a quarrel following a game of cards in Chicago, one citizen deprived the other of his good right ear. The punishment for a misdeed of this kind should be severe, says the Tribune. A man who cuts off the ear of a fellow being spoils his looks, subjects him to pain and lifelong mortification, and causes the remaining ear to seem obtrusive and unduly conspicuous. Moreover, he can make no use whatever of the captured ear.

EMPEROR WILLIAM, of Germany, is credited with the design of erecting Alsace and Lorraine into an independent monarchy and placing his eldest son on the throne; then of creating a new Polish kingdom and placing his second son on the throne of that. William has a numerous progeny of sons, and it is possible that he will be looking around after awhile for thrones for some more of them. He might join the Japanese and cut up China. It would make quite a number of respectable sized monarchies.

ONE of the latest uses to which paper has been turned is the making of telegraph poles, says the Manchester (England) Chronicle. The paper pulp employed is saturated with a mixture of borax, tallow and other substances. The mass is cast in a mold with a core in the center, forming a hollow rod of any desired length, the cross pieces being held by wooden keys driven in on either side of the pole. The paper poles are said to be lighter and stronger than those of wood and to be unaffected by the many weather influences which shorten the life of the wooden pole.

IN the Sporting Magazine for May, 1793, appears the following advertisement, which was clipped from a country paper of that time: "Wanted, for a sober family, a man of light weight, who fears the Lord, and can drive a pair of horses. He must occasionally wait at table, join in household prayer, look after the horses and read a chapter in the Bible. He must, God willing, rise at 7 in the morning, and obey his master and mistress in all lawful commands; if he can dress hair, sing psalms and play at cribbage, the more agreeable. Wages, fifteen guineas a year."

RETURNS from the recent Belgian election show that the Catholics elected 104, the liberals 19 and the socialists 29 members of the chamber of representatives. Under the new constitution there are about 1,370,000 voters; 130,000 under the old. However, 853,000 have but one vote, including men over 25 who have lived one year in the district; 293,000 have two votes, being married men, and 223,000 have three votes, including the wealthy and educated people and the priests. The three-vote men are Roman Catholics, which accounts for their superiority over the socialists, who are one-vote men.

CAPRIVI'S FALL.

Resignation of the German Chancellor Accepted.

Prince Hohenlohe Is Chosen to Succeed Him and Is Also Selected as Premier of Prussia—Explanation of the Situation.

BERLIN, Oct. 29.—The report that Chancellor von Caprivi has handed his resignation to the emperor is confirmed. Count Zu Eulenburg, president of the ministerial council, has also resigned. Dr. Miquel, Prussian finance minister, has been appointed president of the council.

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—Prince Hohenlohe von Schillingfuerst, who was called by Emperor William to succeed Caprivi as chancellor, at first declined, but at 9 o'clock Saturday evening it was announced that he had accepted the position. He will fill also the office of Prussian premier, made vacant by Eulenberg's retirement.

The emperor's choice of Hohenlohe for chancellor is taken as evidence that his majesty does not intend to adopt the extreme view of the measures required to arrest the spread of socialism. Hohenlohe, although 73 years old, is very active physically and mentally.

Divided on Socialist Repression.

Ex-Chancellor Caprivi in an interview says the leading question upon which he found it impossible to reconcile his own views with those of the emperor and Count Botho Zu Eulenburg was the anti-revolutionary measure. The second bone of contention between the same parties, he added, was the proposed treatment of the Polish question.

The Fatal Newspaper Article.

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—The article which annoyed the emperor more than all others in the Caprivi-Eulenburg press feud was published by the Koelnische Zeitung to remove the impression produced by the emperor's reception of the East Prussian agrarians. This article said: "Chancellor von Caprivi won a complete victory over Count Botho Zu Eulenburg, and as the emperor stood behind Caprivi nothing is left for Eulenburg but soumetre ou demettre." Eulenburg, who had already decided to resign, regarded this as an offensive notice to quit, and showed it the emperor.

Disavowal Demanded and Refused.

The emperor sent Herr von Lucanus, chief of the civil cabinet, to ask Count von Caprivi whether he had inspired the article in the Gazette. Count von Caprivi replied in the negative, but expressed his sympathy with that paper's views. The emperor then summoned Count von Caprivi and demanded a public disavowal of the article. Count von Caprivi repeated that he had not inspired the article and would not publish a disclaimer, because he agreed with its views. He now had no alternative but to resign, which he did. It is now known as a fact that the emperor tried to reconcile the personal differences between the two men, but failed.

Says Caprivi's Policy Will Continue.

In summoning the federal envoys to another conference the emperor said that Caprivi's policy would be continued. This statement is taken with a grain of salt, as the emperor made a similar statement immediately after Bismarck's fall.

The envoys expressed their satisfaction with the choice of Prince Hohenlohe. The South Germans were especially complimentary to the new chancellor who, they said, enjoyed the full confidence of their governments.

WHITE CAPS AND BLUEBILLS.

They Fight a Pitched Battle in Tennessee—Three Are Killed.

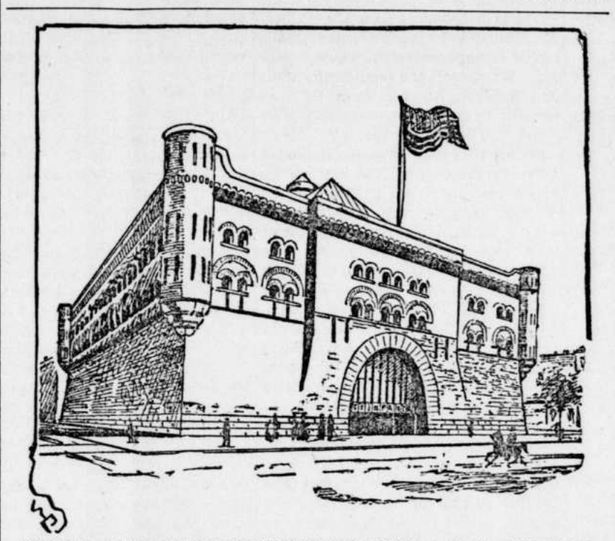
KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 27.—For two years there has existed in Sevier county a large organization of white caps. They have committed outrages on defenseless citizens especially women. Some weeks ago another gang was organized in opposition which is known as bluebills. It is said to be composed of a better element of citizens and was organized for the purpose of wiping out white caps.

Thursday night a body of white caps numbering twenty-five or thirty started out to whip a man who lives 5 miles from Sevierville. It happened that this man was a bluebill and he hastily summoned his gang together. About twenty of them went to a bluff on Pigeon river and secreted themselves in a dense thicket of laurel. Shortly before midnight they heard the approach of white caps who were passing up the road in the jolliest humor discussing plans for their midnight work. As they approached the thicket bluebills opened fire with Winchesters and a pitched battle raged for several minutes. Two white caps, Laban Latham and John Kibble, were killed and several others wounded. The bluebills lost one man, Elithnan Allen, a prominent farmer. Two or three others of their clique were badly wounded.



ARMORY OF FIRST REGIMENT OF INFANTRY, I. N. G., CHICAGO.

First built in 1889-90 at a cost of $225,000, with an additional $100,000 spent in furnishings. Destroyed by fire April 24, 1893, and rebuilt and just completed on practically the same plans. The building is 175x164 feet, inside measurement, and 90 feet high. It is built of brown granite and red pressed brick, the massive granite wall, ten feet thick, extending upward without a break, excepting the large doorway on Michigan avenue, to a height of forty-five feet. The main drill floor covers the entire building space, all of the rooms being on four balconies suspended from the roof. The basement contains twelve rifle ranges, twelve bathrooms, eight bowling alleys, an arsenal, and heating and lighting plant. The building is lighted in the daytime by an immense skylight, and at night by innumerable gas and electric lights. It was formally opened on Tuesday, October 9, by a grand military ball, at which distinguished civil and military guests from all parts of the country were present.

A DEATH TRAP.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 30.—A fire, which resulted in the death of at least sixteen persons and the injury of three others, broke out in the West street hotel, at Columbia and West streets, about 1 o'clock Saturday morning. At 3 o'clock the fire was under control and an investigation of the ruins was made. Thirteen bodies have been identified. They are as follows:

John F. Anderson, aged 28; F. Ballmam, C. Grahm, laborer; Mrs. J. H. Hancock, of Rolfe, Ia., and her three children, two girls, aged 6 and 2 years, and a boy aged 4; Mrs. J. W. Huffman, wife of a well-known farmer of Fall City, Wash.; Angus McDonald, M. McSorley, Andrew Otterman, aged 18; Mrs. Otterman, of California, his mother; C. Wilson.

A. G. Butler, brother of the proprietor, is missing. Richard Havin was badly injured about the head and back by jumping; D. B. Glass had a leg broken and his back injured, and C. B. Anderson was burned and badly bruised.

The fire was undoubtedly caused by the explosion of a lamp in the kitchen. The proprietor's son was aroused by the noise of the explosion about 1 o'clock, but before he could investigate the flames had spread all through the house. The corrugated iron sheeting kept the flames hid until nearly the whole interior was a furnace. The thin partitions were of resinous pine covered with cheesecloth and burned furiously. The sixty guests were aroused and the rush for life followed.

The arrangement of the halls of the hotel made such a labyrinth in the daytime one unfamiliar with the place would have had difficulty in finding his way about without several attempts, and as the halls were filled with smoke there was little chance for any of the victims to make their way out before suffocating. Some of the lodgers were asleep and were overtaken in bed, while others rushed into the halls and were suffocated and burned.

A MAN-KILLER.

A Holstein Bull Gores to Death His Third Victim.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Jacob Swartz, a laborer employed on the stock farm of C. H. Cook at Belle Mead, N. J., was crushed and gored beyond all human semblance by an infuriated Holstein bull Monday afternoon. Swartz had entered the pen to care for the bull. The animal was fastened to a post by a ring through the nose. When Swartz's attention was attracted in another direction the bull made a plunge and broke the ring. The enraged beast pinioned the man against the side of the stable with a single thrust of his horn. Then, backing off, he repeatedly attacked Swartz until he forced his body through a heavy board partition into the next stall. Swartz was dead when picked up a few minutes later. The bull was formerly the property of Senator McPherson, and is the largest one of his kind in this country. He weighs over 3,000 pounds. Swartz is the third man he has killed.

NEW MEXICO.

Gov. Thornton Presents His Report on the Territory.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—The annual report of Gov. Thornton, of New Mexich, has been submitted to the secretary of the interior. The governor says there has been no material change in population, but a healthy growth has set in of a desirable class of immigration in almost every county of the territory, especially in the agricultural portion. At the end of the last fiscal year there was a cash balance of $139,899 in the treasury of the territory. "The traffic in whisky," the governor says, "which has been the cause of so much poverty among the Navajos and has led to so much crime in the past, has, during the past year, largely decreased." The total school enrollment was 45,389. The governor says that the process of raising crops by the aid of irrigation ditches has been very beneficial in New Mexico, as without ditches or wells agriculture would be a failure in the territory.

HE OWNED UP.

Arrest and Confession of an Accomplice in a Chicago Robbery.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 31.—Isaac Sterberg, 15 years of age, who was office boy for Franklin & Son, picture frame makers at Morgan and Twelfth streets, Chicago, was arrested Monday by Detectives Donlan and Zellenska, the latter of Chicago. The boy is charged with being concerned in the robbery by the McGrath-Mortell gang of $5,000 worth of diamonds and a large sum of money from the safe in the office of that firm. At first he denied all knowledge of the theft, but on the way to the station he broke down and confessed his part in the robbery. He said that arrangements had been made with three members of the gang to visit the office during the absence of his employers, gag and bind him and then rob the safe. He said he only received $57 as his share in the business, although the gang promised him $500.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

A Collapsed Building.

Without a second's warning a portion of the west party wall on the old McClung building on Bridge square at the corner of Third and Wabasha streets, St. Paul, fell and carried down three floors and buried eight laborers in the ruins. For years the structure has been an eye-sore to tenants on Bridge square and the sequel proves that it was also a menace to life and limb. The building has always been known as the McClung block and stands just at the end of the Wabasha street bridge on the right hand facing the river. The structure was condemned by the building inspector and was being removed to make way for a new block to be erected by the Pabst Brewing company. The building was only two stories high on Third street, but was five stories on the bluff side fronting the river.

Frank Mullen, 750 Rice street, head crushed, eye badly injured and internally injured, and may die.

William Whalen, aged 62, living at 278 East Fifth street, head badly bruised, arm broken and crushed, may lose the arm.

Andrew Wilzah, aged 46, scalp wounds.

Jacob Schmidt, aged 43, lives on Weide street, scalp wounds.

Stephen Thiev, aged 30, lives at 737 Blair street, scalp wounds and ribs fractured.

Andrew Nelson, body bruised, scalp wounds.

A man named Stiff had body bruised, scalp wounds and hurt around the hips.

Was Not Robbed.

There was great surprise when the assignee of A. T. Peffer, of St. Cloud who made an assignment Friday, due, as Peffer clamed, to his having been robbed of $2,300 the day before, discovered the missing money on the shelf behind a box of shoes. Inasmuch as there were indications that the window had been pried open and the money taken in broad daylight, and Peffer claimned stoutly that he put it in the drawer, the affair is very mysterious and everyone is wondering how it got where it was found. On the advice of Judge Searle, the money will be included in the assets and the creditors are much relieved.

Lady Engineer.

Boiler Inspector Clarke issued the third license this year to a lady engineer, and others have probably been issued in other districts. The license issued was to a young lady in Kandiyohi county who wishes to run an engine in a creamery. Mr. Clarke says that the lady applicants generally show a remarkable proficiency in their examinations and that the neatest engine room in St. Paul is that at the home of the Little Sisters of the Poor, where there is a regularly licensed lady engineer.

News in Brief.

The firm af Foley Bros. and Guthrie, of St. Cloud, just closed a contract with a syndicate of Minneadolis lumbermen for building six miles of road for logging purposes intersecting with the Leech Lake road 20 miles this side of the Lake and extending into the recently burned region.

The state auditor has received from the general government the list of indemnity salt spring lands belonging to the state. The list is equivalent to a deed. There are 1,095.84 acres of land, and this completes the list of lands of this kind to which the state has a claim. The grant is located mostly in St. Louis county.

In three days at Rush City, 11,000 bushels of potatoes have been delivered to merchants there by neighboring farmers. The farmers averaged 40 cents a bushel net. The potato business has scarcely begun for the fall season.

The attendance at the state school of agriculture is now 122, as compared with 60 for the second week last year. Efforts are being made to secure additional dormitory accommodations at St. Anthony Park.

Mrs. P. Sullivan, of Virginia, was frightfully burned about the head by the explosion of a lamp. She may recover. Her little baby barely escaped being burned. The house was partly destroyed.

The bursting of a flume, damaged the Lincoln mill at Anoka, to the extent of $15,000.

Kenneth Clark, treasurer of the relief commission at St. Paul, had received up to Oct. 20 $76,055.80.

A letter was received at the office of the secretary of state, stating that the National Association of Agricultural Implement and Vehicle Manufacturers, at its last meeting, had passed a vote of thanks to the state of Minnesota for the liberal provision for the exhibit of agricultural machinery at the state fair.

Maggie Cain, died at the hospital at St Cloud. An operation was performed for hernia, and as the doctors were suspicious questioned the girl closely, telling her if she was pregnant death would certainly result from the operation. She stoutly denied this and the doctors proceeded with the operation, and as an indirect result she died.

Phil Capistrant, of St. Paul, the youth who was concerned in the apprehension of Ermisch and Wonigkeit, became a little excited over the possibility of attack by the gang of which the murderers were members, and betook himself to the woods on the day of the execution, after scaring his mother into a state of distraction by telling her that he would probably be killed as soon as the men were executed.

The Minnesota Iron Company has concluded to take up the option given to it 60 days ago by the Rouchleau-Ray Iron Company, on one of the busiest mines on the Messaba range, thus adding greatly to its capacity for shipping.

The 24-hour record of the "Pillsbury A" flour mill at Minneapolis of 7,003 barrels made several years ago, was surpassed for 24 hours by the Duluth Imperial mill, which ground 7,905 barrels, not including the "red dog." The conditions were never more perfect than then, the excellent quality of the grain being to some degree responsible for the large run.

A dead man was found on the highway near Mallory. From appearances he had been held up.

NEW FURNISHING EFFECTS.

Artistic Decorations and Color Schemes for Drawing and Dining Rooms.

Always in the autumn it is that the home woman studies tone and color for her best room, for in this apartment lie all her best pieces of old fashioned furniture and her choicest bric-a-brac.

At a well furnished country house, when at all seasons of the year visitors come and go, this delightful apartment is a harmony in tints of warm grays and cream white. The walls were covered with a paper resembling an old fashioned cashmere shawl; that familiar figure which suggests the palm, in which tones of different grays predominated. The frieze, of excellent depth and quite beyond the average, was in colors of a darker gray, making the combination harmonious and effective.

The floor was of curly birch, that now fashionable wood, and so well laid was it that not a seam was visible. But to insure comfort, warmth and coziness two or three Japanese rugs were thrown here and there.

The furniture, light in character and weight, was of pure white, decorated with narrow bands of gold; the most prominent piece, a Louis XVI. table, occupying the center of the room. There were small, well covered sofas, tete-e-tete chairs and a number of those convenient stools of Turkish make. In one corner was a substantial divan, broad and of good length, over which was thrown a Chili rug whose tints of dark and light delicate browns were the bit of color in this pretty apartment.

On the walls were etchings, framed, many of them in gray silk and plush, some in pleats, some in puffs, some in narrow, unobtrusive gold bands.

At the windows were inside curtains of Swiss muslin, with a pattern of gray dots. The hangings at the doors and windows were of gray silk damask in stripes, and were held in place by ebony poles.

New ideas in paper present themselves at every turn for dining rooms, and especially designs in which rich Pompeian figures. This tone for a room is one in which palms, india-rubber plants, greenery of all kinds, is a good decoration.

An artist who is a genius in the art of furnishing gives us some fine points on color tints. For this season, he declares, for the dining room, fruit in its various stages is just the thing, and if rightly done is an excellent device. For the walls proper the orange tree, with stems, leaves and blossoms, on a grayish blue background, is a delightful combination. The dado should be deep red. Between these two plans of decoration a line in black and gold should be well defined.

The ceiling for this room, if paneled in curly birch, is a superb finish, and if well treated will last for many years. Among the new departures for ceilings, where the dining room is fine and spacious, burlaps in tapestry colors are used. These gorgeous goods can be purchased for sixty cents a yard, but, of course, are above the price of the moderate decorator.—N. Y. Herald.

WOULDN'T FEEL SAFE IN JAIL.

Why a Prisoner in a McHenry County Court Wanted a Change of Venue.

Judge Goggin came back the other day from Woodstock, McHenry county, where he had been holding court, with a story he is telling with considerable enjoyment.

Just before the judge went to the little county seat there had been a jail delivery which excited the entire community. Four prisoners had with an ordinary case knife cut a big hole through what in the plan and specifications was known as the "steel plow" of the jail, and through this hole escaped. A later examination showed that the floor was only sheet tin, and the only steal about it was in the building.

While Judge Goggin was holding court a man named McSweeney, a horse thief, according to the McHenry county indictment, but accused of other and more serious offenses, came up to be tried. He was anxious to get a change of venue into Kane county, where his trial would be delayed, and he asked for one.

"Has the court any prejudice against you?" asked Judge Goggin in his most judicial voice.

"No, your honor."

"Can not you secure an impartial jury in this county?" again asked the judge.

"Yes. I am not afraid of the jury."

"Then why do you ask for a change of venue?"

"Well, to tell the truth, your honor," replied McSweeney, hesitating, "I do not think the McHenry county jail is a safe place to keep prisoners in."—Chicago Times.

A Low Water Level

In Rivers, Ponds, Wells, and other sources of drinking water threatens danger from malarial germs. This condition is usually found in the Fall, and it points to Hood's Sarsaparilla as a safeguard against attacks of disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes pure blood, and thus guards the system from all these perils. It creates an appetite and gives sound and robust health.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

"I have been using Hood's Sarsaparilla occasionally for the last three years. I have suffered from malaria fever for five years, and have tried many kinds of medicine, but found no relief till I commenced to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. I have all confidence in it, and believe it to be far superior to any other tonic." P. J. FITZGERALD, 121 Ninth St. So. Boston, Mass.

EFFECTS OF FREE WOOL.

Foreign Wools Cheaper—Domestic Wools Dearer—Higher Wages and Great Prosperity in Woolen and Textile Mills.

These are tough times for the republican calamity howler. He was dead certain before the passage of the Wilson bill not only that free wool would knock the bottom out of prices and ruin the wool and sheep industries, but that the great reductions of the duties on woolens would close up all of our woolen mills. His position is now most pitiable. Facts refuse to submit to his pessemistic theories; moreover, they stand out so plainly that he cannot possibly deceive the voters until November. While prices of foreign wools have fallen about 40 per cent.—just as the democrats promised—prices of domestic wools have advanced fully 10 per cent. over McKinley prices of three months ago. And on top of this advance the Dry Goods Economist, of September 29, says:

"The wool market in New York for the past week has shown a more active and general demand and fully sustained prices. Slight advances in prices have been paid for certain classes of domestic wools, notably in the mediums and quarter-bloods. There is a good demand for Texas fall wools and some sales of the earliest arrivals. A fairly large and diversified stock is being offered in the market, and manufacturers are showing better interest than they have evinced for a year past.

"The Boston wool market has experienced a good demand this week and prices have been fairly well maintained."

The mistaken and misanthropic calamity shrieker can get no more satisfaction when he begins to look for woolen mills closed up by the new tariff.

Never before in our history have so many woolen mills been opened in such a short time.

The Wool and Cotton Reporter, by far the greatest authority in America on textiles, devotes considerable space every week to a "Bulletin of New Enterprises.

We show in a table below the result of the first month's experiment with free wool. In order, if possible, to induce protectionists to read the whole table, we have sorted out and placed at the head of the table every "calamity" item mentioned. The record of textile mills, compiled from Wool and Cotton Reporter's bulletins, is as follows:

| Classification of notice. | 1894. Week ended Sept. 6 | Week ended Sept. 13 | Week ended Sept. 20 | Week ended Sept. 27 | Week ended Oct. 4 |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Shutting down because of low water | 2 | 1 | 3 | .... | .... |
| Repairs, usual vacation, etc.. | 1 | 3 | 1 | 4 | 1 |
| Strike | .... | .... | .... | 1 | 2 |
| Unexplained | 2 | .... | 1 | 2 | .... |
| New mills | 5 | 15 | 10 | 10 | .... |
| Enlargements and improvements | 28 | 18 | 14 | 13 | .... |
| Mills starting up | 20 | 20 | 26 | 30 | .... |

Forty mentions of new mills, seventy-three of enlargements and improvements, ninety-six of mills starting up, and only two (or possibly five) of mills idle because of lack of orders is the record for the first month under free wool. Protectionist croakers can find no such prosperous record, with so few shutdowns, during any consecutive three weeks of the years of McKinleyism.

Free wool has caused the change from idleness to activity. It is setting the old spindles to turning and bringing thousands of new ones into existence.

The Dry Goods Economist, of September 29, says: "The worsted yarn trade is in a first-rate condition. Spinners are all very busy and unable to supply yarns as quickly as users require them." Under the heading "Woolen" it mentions four new mills, eight mills starting up and one shutting down. One of the mentions says that every mill in Hudson, N. Y., started up full-handed and on full time on Monday, September 17; one mill starts up with sixteen new looms; another after being closed down "several years," and others after being closed a year.

McKinley is welcome to all the capital he can get out of the one "closed down on account of the operatives striking for a 20 per cent. increase in wages." The Wool and Cotton Reporter, of September 6, said "that Rawitzer Bros., of Stafford Springs, had settled with their dissatisfied weavers, giving them a 25 per cent. advance in wages." The operatives in the Continental worsted mills, Philadelphia, probably read of the above advance, became dissatisfied and struck for Wilson bill wages. McKinley philosophy offers no explanation for such behavior on the part of woolen mills and woolen operatives.

WAR ON TRUSTS.

Democrats Have Won the First Battle with Republican Trusts—Duties Greatly Reduced on All—Hypocrisy of Republicans.

Most of the claims and pretensions put forth by repubicans to catch votes, during the past decade, have been misleading if not actually false. Such is the claim now being made from every stump that the new tariff bill is peculiarly the work of trusts, and that no other tariff bill ever granted such special favors to trusts. Conscientious republicans who know the history of the McKinley bill would not open their mouths on this subject. They know that the trusts and protected interests practically had their own way in the McKinley bill, which is a patchwork of trust legislation. Dozens of important clauses are in the language suggested by the protected manufacturers. Duties were increased—often doubled—on almost every product sold by combines and trusts. The few reductions on trust products, such as those on steel rails and steel beams—were not sufficient to interfere with trust prices.

On the contrary, it will be difficult for the republicans to instance, with one exception, any singe trust product on which duties are now higher than before last August. In nearly every case duties have been lowered or entirely abolished. Here are a few of the trust products on which duties have been abolished:

Sulphuric acid, copper ingots, cotton seed oil, yellow pine lumber, salt, harrows, harvesters, binding twine, jute bagging for bailing cotton.

Here are trust products on which duties have been reduced 50 to 100 per cent.:

Borax, castor oil, copper sheets, white lead, lead, santonine, sponges, cement, locomotive tires, smelsers' products, soap, penknives, shot, stove-boards, zinc in sheets, teazles, peanuts, rubbber goods, cordage, brooms, buttons.

Here are trust products on which duties have been reduced 25 to 50 per cent.:

Boracic acid, ammonia, iodoform, linseed oil, coal, ultramarine, red lead, fruit jars, calomel, crockery, biscuit and crackers, starch, flint glass, window glass, plate glass, sanitary ware, freestone, indurated fiber, iron and steel beams, boiler iron, vapor stoves, steel rails, wire rods, electrical supplies, galvanized iron and steel, bolts and nuts, sewer pipe, cast iron pipe, soda water machinery, penknives (some kinds), hinges, wheels, saws, screws, skewers, type, preserved fruits, raisins, leather-board, wood pulp, oil cloth, matches in boxes, sash, school furniture, snaths, axes, barbed wire, condensed milk, spool, bobbins and shuttles.

On the following trust products duties were reduced 10 to 25 per cent.:

Cigarettes, oat meal, rice, envelopes, India rubber, paper bags, brushes, matches not in boxes, umbrellas, cartridges, caskets, celluloid, cotton duck, cotton thread, lime, lithographic prints, marble, safes, sandpaper, strawboard, tomb-stones, trunks, wall paper, whips, wrapping paper.

Reductions of duties on all these products have lowered the limit to which trusts can raise prices. McKinley raised this limit and turned millions of dollars into trust coffers.

Refined sugar is the ohly important trust product on which the duty has been increased. But the sugar trust would gladly pay $5,000,000 and perhaps $10,000,000 a year to get back its McKinley duties. Under the new law four-fifths of the duty paid on sugar will go to support the government. Under the McKinley law 99 per cent. of the duty paid went to swell the trust's profits. But the democrats are not through with this trust yet. When they get another whack at it this winter they are likely to take away the remaining half of McKinley protection.

The democrats have won a decided victory in the first battle with protected trusts. It should not be forgotten that these trusts were entrenched behind protection walls which the republicans had been thirty years in building. They were glutted with the "sinews of war" extorted from the populace on the outside of the walls. At every point the outer walls have been taken and the trusts have been driven from their position. The trust combine is broken; those trusts that have lost all their protection are no longer interested in the fight and will not assist other trusts to maintain protection. In fact they should help to defeat the other trusts, for the trusts prey upon each other as well as upon outsiders. The trusts are making a desperate effort during the present campaign to win recruits from the enemy. Thousands of trust emissaries, disguised as republican campaign speakers, are trying to deceive the people by telling them that the protection walls (behind which are the trusts) do not protect the trusts but protect the people from the trusts. They said to the people: "If you knock those protection walls down you will let the trusts loose and they will prey upon you more than ever before." They are fooling a few nervous, half-witted people, but they only make sober-minded people smile. Any man with two lobes to his brain knows that a robber's castle protects the robbers from their victims, but does not protect the people from the robbers.

The trusts are routed and disorganized. They are making some big bluffs, but they know their time is short. They will always fight to save as much McKinleyism as possible, but they expect to have but little left after a few more charges by the democrats—their mortal enemies. On with the war! Let it not stop while one protection stone stands on top of another?

BYRON W. HOLT.

AFTER THE TRUSTS.

The New York Tariff Reform Club Sends a Shaft Into the Monopolies.

The trusts have a warm feeling for the republican party. While pretending to be the enemy of trusts it rendered them the greatest possible service by passing the McKinley bill. But they hate and fear the democratic party. They know that without tariff walls they would have but little to live for and that many of them would give up the ghost. They know that it is the special mission of the democrats to rid the country of protective tariff walls; hence they are willing to contribute millions of dollars of their ill-gotten gains too aid in defeating the democrats. The Reform club has aimed a deadly shaft at this most vulnerable point of trusts. Here is a quotation from a circular letter sent to the members by the tariff reform committee.

"The immense power displayed by trusts in the recent session of congress clearly indicates the line upon which the club should continue its work of tariff reform. We propose to devote all the energies of this committee and such means as may be put at its disposal by the club to prompt and persistent attack upon the great tariff trusts which, owing to the venality of public men of both parties, still retain their injurious privileges and still blackmail the American people.

"In this work the sugar trust will necessarily receive special attention. Many of our friends may believe, and justly, that sugar is a proper subject for revenue taxation; but we confidently believe that all will agree, in view of the action of the representatives of the sugar trust in the recent session of congress, that there must be no duty allowed to remain on sugar which will give a scintilla of privilege or protection to this corporation.

"Removal of unnecessary and unjust taxation on the commodities involved is not the only reason for directing our work in the immediate future chiefly against the sugar trust and similar combinations. They are now obviously the most serious obstruction to any further reduction to tariff rates or simplication of tariff laws. Against these combinations, therefore, tariff reformers must in the future direct their attack."

Rattled Republicans.

"On behalf of the farmers of New York," said the New York republicans at Saratoga, "we protest against free wool, which means the destruction of our sheep husbandry, and which has brought the price of wool to the lowest figure recorded." If the republicans had consulted wool markets they would have found that the lowest prices ever recorded occurred about three months ago, when wool was highly protected. To-day prices are about 10 per cent. above low water mark.

IT LIES IN RUINS.

The City of La Rioja in the Argentine Republic Visited by Earthquake.

BUENOS AYRES, Oct. 31.—A correspondent at La Rioja, capital of the province of the same name, telegraphs that the city has been ruined by Sunday night's earthquake. The churches, schools and public edifices were all thrown down. The people are camping out in the neighborhood. The scene was a horrible one, women shrieking and fainting on every hand as the walls came crashing down. Two sisters of mercy were killed and many more are now entombed beneath the ruins.

The governor fears that the killed and wounded throughout the province must number at least 2,000, as many of the outlying towns also suffered. Not a house in town is without damage. It is reported that in various parts of the province the ground opened and geysers of boiling water and mud spouted forth.

Couriers continue to arrive here with news of the damage wrought in the various departments and towns. The village of Del Arbordon has been completely swallowed up in the huge gaps which opened in the ground.

South of Buenos Ayres only a slight shock was felt. The wave appears to have passed away to seaward near the mouth of the La Plata river.

The national government is sending special trains with doctors, tents, food and every kind of assistance, as well as laborers to clear away the wreckage. La Prensa has opened a public subscription list and the town of La Rioja has contributed 10,000 milreis. It is estimated that at least 20,000 persone are homeless.

[The earthquakes occurred, according to reports, in the provinces of San Juan and Rioja. The two provinces are among the most prosperous in the republic. A little over 100 miles to the south of the city of San Juan, capital of the province of that name, is Mendoza. In 1861 Mendoza was a thriving city of 28,000 inhabitants, but was utterly destroyed in that year, only about 2,000 of the inhabitants escaping death in the catastrophe. Mendoza and San Juan are almost equi-distant from the great active volcano of Aconcagua. The regions in the plains along the foot of the Andes there are all subject to frequently recurring earthquakes and the buildings in the cities have to undergo constant repair from the damage from that source. San Juan and Rioja are important cities, the latter being the center of the wine industry. The two provinces are devoted to fruit-raising, canning and wine-making. As many as two earthquakes a week not unfrequently occur in these provinces.]

ROUTED THE CHINESE.

YOKOHAMA, Oct. 29.—Later dispatches from the Yalu river show that in the battle fought Thursday between the Chinese and Japanese 3,500 Chinese troops of all arms were utterly routed.

CHEMUPLO, Oct. 29.—Dispatches from Wi-Ju give additional details of the battle fought between the Chinese and Japanese across the Yalu river. Gen. Nodzu, the Japanese chief of staff, it appears, succeeded in getting the main body of the Japanese army across the Yalu river without mishap before daylight on Thursday. Then Col. Sato was sent forward at the head of a flying column on a reconnoitering expedition. He discovered the enemy occupying a fortified position near the village Fushang on the right bank of the Yalu. In spite of the fact that he had no artillery at his disposal, Col. Sato immediately commenced an attack upon the Chinese and a fierce fight followed. The Chinese fought desperately and stubbornly. The attack began at 10 o'clock in the morning and lasted until noon, when the Chinese began wavering, broke, and eventually retired in great disorder, falling back upon Kulienchas.

The troops commanded by Col. Sato, after the Chinese had retired, set to work upon the demolishment of the fortifications of Fushang. Inside the fortifications they found 200 Chinese dead. The Japanese also captured a number of prisoners, among whom was a Chinese officer who stated that the position was held by eighteen battalions of Chinese troops. The Japanese, escorting their prisoners, then marched in the direction of Gen. Nodzu's main body with the intention of rejoining it. The number of Chinese wounded is not known. The Japanese lost five officers and ninety men killed and wounded.

Later dispatches said that the Chinese outposts were falling back upon Kulienchas, where it is expected that the only really determined stand of the Chinese in Manchuria will be made.

A LOSS OF $500,000.

Transfer Sheds of the St. Louis Terminal Railway Burned.

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., Oct. 29.—Fire Sunday night destroyed 200 freight cars and the large transfer sheds in the bridge yards of the St. Louis Terminal Railway association. The total loss is placed at $500,000. The building was one of the largest transfer sheds in the country and was worth $60,000. The contents—hay, cotton and merchandise—amounted to probably $100,000. About $25,000 worth of merchandise was consumed in the cars. The cars were so situated that the city engines could not play upon the flames. The fire was started in the shed by a spark from one of the engines at work in the yards.

FOUL PLAY SUSPECTED.

A Woman and Her Former Lover Accused of Poisoning Her Husband.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Oct. 27.—James Drummond, a land-owner and stock raiser, who resides near Elizabeth, died here with every symptom of poison. Mrs. Drummond, who was a widow before she married Drummond last August, and a young man named Hamrick, a former lover of the woman, were arrested on warrants charging them with poisoning the woman's husband. Drummond had objected to Hamrick's attention to his wife, but they continued to meet until the husband put a stop to it, when it is believed they gave him poison to get rid of him.

THE GUN EXPLODED.

A Distressing Accident to a Newton (Mass.) Family.

NEWTON, Oct. 30.—Philip Raymond was attempting to shoot a muskrat at West Newton Sunday afternoon when the gun exploded, mortally wounding his wife, probably fatally injuring his son Raphael, aged 9, and seriously injuring himself. Two younger children were in the room, but they escaped injury. The weapon was a cheap and poorly made double-barrelled shotgun, heavily charged. Mrs. Raymond is dead.

The Count Was Dreaming.

Midnight.

The Countess Gesundheimer (nee Porkingham) was listening intently.

The count was talking in his sleep.

True, when she had exchanged her millions for his title she had waived all thoughts of his past, but with a woman's natural curiosity she wished to know for the sake of knowing.

Breathlessly she hearkened. From the finely chiseled lips of her aristocratic spouse came the words:

MOTHERS

and those about to become mothers, should know that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription robs childbirth of its torture, terrors and dangers to both mother and child, by aiding Nature in preparing the system for parturition. Thereby "labor" and also the period of confinement are greatly shortened. It also promotes an abundant secretion of nourishment for the child. During pregnancy, it prevents "morning sickness" and those distressing nervous symptoms from which so many suffer.

DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.:

Dear Sir—I took your "Favorite Prescription" previous to confinement and never did so well in my life. It is only two weeks since my confinement and I am able to do my work. I feel stronger than I ever did in six weeks before.

Made Her a New Lip.

Dr. Berger, the French surgeon, recently presented to the Paris academy of medicine a young woman to whom he had supplied an entire under lip, she having accidentally lost the one nature gave her. He managed to make good the loss with a piece of flesh cut from her arm. The substitution was accomplished with wonderful skill, the mouth not being at all disfigured, and there was a red lip which looked almost natural.

Gen. Lew Wallace, the renowned soldier, statesman, traveler and author, pays this compliment to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway in the St. Paul Evening News Record, Oct. 6, 1894:

"I have traveled all over the United States and Europe, but never before have I seen such magnificent train service as I enjoyed on 'The Milwaukee' between Chicago and St. Paul. The private compartment cars are superior to anything of the kind I ever saw."

The trains referred to by the author of "Ben Hur" are vestibuled throughout, heated by steam, lighted by electricity and arranged with the famous electric berth reading lamp.

DELANO DIARY

--Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

—Be sure to come to the polls on Tuesday early in the morning and get in a ballot for the Democratic Bees; Becker, Bierman and Baldwin.

—Presiding Elder R. R. Atchinson preached at the M. E. church on Sunday evening to a good sized audience. He is a good sermonizer and was attentively listened to. He is to be here again in December.

—Mayor Strobeck, of Litchfield, has promised when we get our park ready for dedication to come down and help us do the job. This is a sufficient guarantee that it will be well dedicated. Let us have it ready as soon as possible. Like everything else land is cheap now; let us buy now and get our pick of several localities before it is too late to get any.

—Our people, and especially the village council and electric light men were much mortified that after our visitors coming to see our improvements the street lamps would not work. On Tuesday it was found that they had been thrown out of fix by a wire which was carried behind a pile of wood and attached to the bottom of M. A. O'Hair's barn by some mischievous boys.

—We understand that Rev. J. W. Powell has been corresponding with Archbishop Ireland concerning the movement in the Catholic church to advance the cause of temperance in our midst and has concluded to assist in the movement to the best of his ability. He has some literature on the subject, sent him by the Archbishop and is going to work to distribute it. He also has an article written by that eminent apostle of temperance which he designs reading to his congregation soon. That's right, when all join hands on subjects of this kind something will be accomplished. Public opinion will do more to rid our land of intemperance than all the statutes that can be made.

—Nothing can do more to bring trade to a village than good roads in every direction. When people have loaded their wagons for market they will drive quite a distance to sell their produce to advantage if the road is good rather than to go a few miles over a very rough or muddy road. A road should be made from Elm street to the Hennepin county line to accommodate several farmers who live out that way and are obliged to travel about twice as far to go to town as they ought to. Several other roads could be considerably shortened and otherwise made more pleasant for the traveling public. These things should be looked after by the proper authorities and our town would feel the difference soon in increased trade.

—Gradually our village begins to assume city airs in street grading; we notice with a great deal of pride that a portion of Third street has been put into something like city style. Also that a new crossing has been built across Bridge street from Miss White's corner to Swedeback's corner and places left at each end of the crossing, actually left on purpose, for the water to run off down the hill; and Bridge street rounded up and a gutter on either side made for carrying off the water; just like a real city street. Surely some of our authorities have been some where, and seen something "onst". Let the good work go on until our village is what it should, and can so easily be made to be, the best drained city in the country. And then will our streets be models instead of mud holes.

—George P. Schaffer has another large lot of new goods. It just beats all what becomes of them.

—On Wednesday evening an extra police force was put on and three small boys who were out for "Halloween" captured, and the larger ones scared so that they did not commit such depredations as those of last year. Let the good work go on. Let our City Fathers bring laws to bear on our law breakers and have a respectable town. Let the business houses and stores close on Sunday, drunkards disappear from our streets and so on.

Celebration of the Completion of Water-works and Electric Light Plant.

On Monday our citizens with many visitors celebrated the completion of our waterworks and electric light plant. The day was damp and cold and not calculated to bring out the largest crowd, but those present celebrated in good style.

The Delano Cornet Band, led by Prof. Beck, discoursed some of its finest strains; and the fire companies gave an exhibition of their ability to turn on the water, in case of fire, in the forenoon.

At 2 P. M. the City Hall was the center of attraction and was soon packed to everflowing with an intelligent audience, who quietly listened until 5 P. M. to the exercises and speeches of the occasion.

Mayor W. F. Kohler, made a short address of welcome, welcoming our visitors and turning over to them the keys of the town.

F. H. Lindsley gave an interesting historical discourse citing some of the principal points of interest that mark our pathway through the past since 1876 when the village was first incorporated under a special act of the Legislature. He spoke of our churches, schools, cattle fair, newspapers, village government, fire companies, secret organizations and other things and rejoiced that we had now made a stride to the front.

M. A. O'Hair, gave a discription of our present improvements. He spoke of the fine engine and power house, the duplex pumps, with a capacity of 500 gallons per minute, the Holly and tank systems of water-works, the Edison three wire systen of electric lights, the newest and the best yet invented, and was glad that we have got them.

F. A. Barth, of Watertown, felt himself almost at home with us, having been an old settler in our county. He claimed considerable credit for his own town and thought we copied some after them and owed some of our enterprise to our importation from Watertown of a Mayor. He thought Watertown, too, would soon have electric lights.

Mayor Strobeck, of Litchfield, warmed right up to the occasion and made a good speech, rejoicing that we were coming up toward our younger sister, Litchfield, in the way of improvements and advised everybody to hold up the hands of our council in making improvements in every direction. He also said that for twenty-five years Litchfield had been planting trees on the prairie and striving to get a park, and here we could get a fine one with the natural trees on in as many days. He advised us to get it at once. He suggested the picnic grounds across the river and hoped no time would be lost in purchasing that or some other spot for the purpose. He complimented our Band and said Litchfield's Band had a tender feeling for them and felt it was by the skin of their teeth that they won a prize at Hutchinson from them.

Dr. Catlin said that without water and light nothing grows. All vegetable and animal creation must have both light and water to thrive, and now that our town has both up to the latest improved methods she must grow as she never yet has, even to catching up to her younger but larger sister, Litchfield. Owing to the lateness of the hour and the presence of visitors from Rockford, where the people do not sit idly by and see the waters of the Crow run to waste but have pressed them into service to grind their flour and to weave the woolen goods we all like so well to wear on cold days; and from Waverly, our enterprising neighbor that has recently built a City Hall and shown other symptoms of thrift; and from Montrose, though younger, a competitor for the trade of farmers living in that direction I will give way as you can hear me on any occasion, to our visitors to say whatever they may choose to say.

D. R. Farnham, mayor of Rockford, rejoiced with us, and hoped Rockford might catch the inspiration and have electric lights soon. His hobby is good roads and he hoped we would soon have such good roads that we could go to Rockford in 15 minutes, or to Watertown in half an hour instead of an hour and a half as at present.

John Kelly, of Waverly, was sorry the weather was not more pleasant, as many Waverly people had intended being present to rejoice with us on this occasion, but was glad himself to thank us for the invitation to come.

John Belden, of Montrose, rejoiced with us and hoped to see us still further prosper.

The Delano Cornet Band and the Delano Choral Society furnished splendid music for the occasion.

In the evening a dance was given by the city and a large number of young people "tripped the light fantastic toe" until the wee sma' hours of the morning.

This will long be remembered as one of the grandest days in the history of our village and be looked back to with pride not only by our citizens but by our visitors who helped us to celebrate and to whom a vote of thanks was given for so doing.

Personals.

T. J. Terry was a Delano visitor on Monday.

Roy Mulford attended the celebration Monday.

Will Sleight and Les Ball were in town this week.

Otis L. Billings, of Minneapolis, was in town yesterday.

J. W. Mount-, one of Rockford's staunch Becker men was a caller yesterday.

George B. Alton, Inspector of State High Schools, is visiting our schools today.

Weed Munro, of Minneapolis, candidate for District Judge on the populist, democratic and prohibitionist tickets was in town Monday.

Dr. Catlin and O. Styner represented this place and Armstrong at the M. E. District Stewards' meeting at Litchfield on Wednesday.

County Cullings.

Judge Alley is bound to be elected County Attorney. No help for it now.

J. E. Madigan has a strong hold on the young voters of the county. He stands as good a show of election as either of his competitors. Jim's a workin'.

David Murdock will speak on the political issues of the day, at Delano, on Saturday evening. He seems to be making things rather lively for "Billy" after all.

For District Judges it looks now as if the democrats, populists and prohibitionists would elect Brooks and Munro while it is not very clear just yet who the other two will be.

If the ladies turn out in force enough to support A. P. Ritchie for Superintendent of Schools to offset those that will vote for Mr. Lee, there is little doubt but he will win in the race. Mr. Ritchie is a rustler.

The Wright County Times prints a list of 50 old soldiers, who, it claims, have signed an agreement to support Mr. Towne for Congress against Major Baldwin, an old soldier, who has suffered far more hardships than the average old soldier, having been wounded in battle, served seventeen months in Southern prisons, drew a blank in a death lottery, and did what he could to preserve the Union; and now when he seeks a re-election to Congress his veteran friends at that place have been prevailed upon to go back on him; to use their names as old soldiers earned in the army with him to knock him out. Not content with voting against an old comrade they parade to the public gaze their names to assist in keeping a comrade from enjoying the privileges for which he suffered and fought. But a few years since some of the signers of the document were canvassing democratic old soldier's votes because they were comrades; now they are using their names, as old soldiers, to down an old comrade. It don't look well, boys; it don't look well.

M. E. District Steward's Meeting.

The first District Steward's meeting for the Willmar District, of the Minnesota Northern Conference of the M. E. church was held at Litchfield, on Wednesday, Oct. 31, with Presiding Elder R. R. Atchinson in the chair.

Dr. T. J. Catlin, of Delano, was elected Secretary.

On motion of J. Q. Andrews, of Litchfield, seconded by R. F. Clough, of Willmar, the salary of the P. E. for the year was estimated at $1200.

It was voted to raise the claim by basing assessments on last year's apportionments.

It was left with the P. E. to arrange the apportionments according to the plan voted.

It was voted that the P. E. also apportion beneyolences on the basis of last years apportionment.

It was voted that an explanatory circular letter be drawn up by the committee for distribution in each circuit. Adjourned.

CORRESPONENCE

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

Plenty of rain and mud just now. Roads are in very bad condition for hauling heavy loads.

The town board was in session all day yesterday.

Quite a good many fellows are out in the country looking for the loaves and fishes nowa-days.

There will be a political rally at the school house in Maple Plain Saturday evening.

Messrs. Richards and Hall arrived here with their families from Montana the first of last week.

Ben. and Wm. Hoisington are selling off their personal effects. They intend to look for greener pastures somewhere in the far west.

Rev. Copp, the Methodist minister who will preach at Rockford, Mound City, Oakland and Armstrong, will live in the village of Armstrong. He is an old war veteran of '61.

Some people have made a discovery. They say times are improving. So are Maple Plain and Armstrong; the buildings and population are increasing but the banks are hard up.

Enos Alger is building a new house; chas. Omera is building a new barn.

General George Washington has a housekeeper; and for improvement on the farm has built a new hen-house, burglar proof, no chicken dealers need apply.

School Dist. 102 has been compelled to enlarge their seating capacity. Surely our country is growing.

Leon D. Brown, the candidate on the people's ticket for Superintendent of Schools of Hennepin county was in our town one day last week looking over his interests.

What a fine thing it is to be a politician especially after election when you find out the other fellow got there and you didn't. How small the world looks then, when in reality it's just as big as it ever was.

JOHN H. MCGARY.

In 1890 3 Cities In United States had population over a million—New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and The North-Western Line is Best Line Minneapolis and St. Paul to these Cities.

The above cut was intended to represented C. W. Kerrick, Delano's only representative on any ticket this year; but it does not flatter him a bit; he is a pretty good looking man himself.

Mr. Kerrick is a democrat, and his nomination was thrust upon him by the convention against his wishes.

He is a Hoosier, having been born in Ind. in 1847. He is a contractor and builder and a man able to take care of our interests if elected.

His grandfather, Kerrick, lived at Harpers Ferry, Va., and worked on the old White House at Washington ween it was being built.

His maternal great grandfather was the first butcher in Cincinnati.

Mr. K. will doubtless get about all the votes of both parties in this immediate vicinity and if he gets a good vote over the balance of the district will be one of our next representatives.

Recommend's Ritchie.

The following letter speaks for itself. Mr. Ritchie used to attend Hamline University and this letter is a credit to him of which he may well be proud.

HAMLINE, Minn.,
Oct. 29, 1894.

Mr. A. P. Ritchie,
Annandale, Minn.

Dear Sir:—I am glad to learn that you have been nominated for the position of Supt. of Schools for Wright Co. and I hope you may be elected.

I consider you well qualified for the position and believe you would perform the duties of the office with credit to yourself and with satisfaction to the people.

I am yours sincerely,
G. H. BRIDGMAN,
Pres. of Hamline University.

Senatorial Candidates Compared.

EDITOR GAZETTE.—I would ask space in your paper for comparison of a few points between our two candidates for State Senator:

David Murdock is the democratic nominee; his character as a man stands so high that the populists and even the prohibitionists are supporting him. No one can find ought against him. His political opponent seeks to belittle him because he is a temperance man. We would like to ask the voters to decide before election day as to which man they want, the man whose character is unassailable and who is endorsed by honest people everywhere; or a man who, as county attorney, for $84. will allow a murderer discharged. For further information on this subject we would refer the readers to Bill Watson. We would prefer a man to make our laws who can do so for what the state pays him.

MARTIN BLAND.

Democratic County Resolutions.

BE IT RESOLVED, that we the Democrats of Wright County assembled, reaffirm the principles enunciated by the National Democratic convention of 1892.

That we heartily approve of the courageou course pursued by President Cleveland and the House of Representatives in endeavoring to secure such tariff reform legislation as would relieve the toiling masses from the burdens heaped upon them by the so-called protective tariff.

And that we pledge to these principles of

From The Evergreen State.

EDITOR GAZETTE.—Our early rain has set in and things that were parched and dry are beginning to look green and fresh again. Our early rain is quite beneficial to this country for we get our best feed for our cattle in fall and winter. With the fall rain has come the bum, bum, bum of the political drum; first the Reps, then the Pops, then the Dems and last but by no means least, the Prohis. One gets tired of nothing but political roasters who boast of honesty and war and glorious achievements; who promise but never fulfil, while they let the baser things hold complete sway over our country. May God quickly open the spiritual political eyes of the leaders and ringsters to the fact of right doing.

Well we are now nicely started in the Home and God has looked upon us in mercy and favor thus far. Our trip to Kalama, where my son is pastor, brought us the neat little sum of $27. besides some household goods in the way of furniture, some fruit and clothing. My wife and myself visited Seattle for about two weeks in the interests of the Home and the people opened their hearts and pockets. First church of which Dr. Shanklin is pastor invited me to present the Home and right nicely did they respond. I preached in Madison street church Sunday morning and at Grace in the evening and both places came to the rescue grandly. I visited Trinity church where Dr. Tedrick feeds the flock and though it was Thursday evening eleven dollars came very quickly. After the political jamboree has cooled off I shall visit most of the churches in this conference and some of the conferences beyond and if the good Lord will grant it I will put the home upon its feet. We now have seven children. I think them very interesting and already I am beginning to love them. One lady just sent us a cow so we now have milk of our own.

I wish some brother or sister whom God has blessed with plenty of means could find it convenient to endow the Crown Jewel Home with a thousand or two. How they would rejoice when they come to the end of life and look back and see noble men and women in the active duties of life, hopeful and useful, who have received a start in life through such a gift. May God help some noble hearted person to give of what they can spare for this purpose and surely we have some people who will never use all they have. May the good Lord help them to give. Someone send me $5.00 now to purchase school books for our seven children, someone send us one dollar or even 50 or 25 cents. O! how much it will help us when we are so young. May God fire the hearts of Methodists and all other Christians to lift on this institution for homeless children. Some Epworth or Junior League send along a Thanksgiving offering. Someone take a room to furnish and name it after some one who has gone to Heaven. This may meet the eye of someone who has holy zeal for home missionary work. If so ask God what to do about it and then go and you will be able to send us an offering, be it ever so small; it will help. Remember we have seven children who have no home only at this place prepared for them. I will make this appeal to all who read the GAZETTE. If one hundred people could and would respond with $5.00 each what a blessing it would be. Our Home belongs to Methodism because it is operated by the Methodist church but all Christian bodies are treated alike. We have children from several denominations and some from none. Now I pray God's blessing upon this letter that it may find its way into the hearts and wealth of Minnesota people and friends.

May God bless you all,
W. H. WILSON.

LYRIC OF ACTION.

'Tis the part of a coward to brood
O'er the past that is withered and dead.
What though the heart's roses are ashes and dust?
What though the heart's music be fled?
Still shine the grand heavens o'erhead,
Whence the voice of an angel thrills clear on the soul,
"Gird about thee thine armor; press on to the goal!"

If the faults or the crimes of thy youth
Are a burden too heavy to bear,
What hope can rebloon on the desolate waste
Of a jealous and craven despair?
Down, down with the fetters of fear!
In the strength of thy valor and manhood arise
With the faith that illumines it and the will that defies.

"Too late!" through God's infinite world,
From his throne to life's nethermost fires—
"Too late!" is a phantom that flies at the dawn
Of the soul that repents and aspires.
If pure thou hast made thy desires,
There's no height the strong wings of immortals may gain
Which in striving to reach thou shalt strive for in vain.

Then up to the contest with fate,
Unbound by the past, which is dead!
What though the heart's roses are ashes and dust?
What though the heart's music be fled?
Still shine the fair Heavens o'erhead,
And, sublime as the angels who rule in the sun,
Beams the promise of peace when the conflict is won. —Paul H. Hayne.

Republicans Claim Everything.

Tuesday's election was another landslide. The pendulum swung back to the G. O. P.'s side. They claim to have carried New York by 150,000; Ohio by 125,000; Pennsylvania by 250,000; Illinois by 175,000; Wisconsin by 50,000; and North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Colorado and Kansas, and probably Tennessee by lesser pluralities. If Tennessee joins the G. O. P. ranks it will be a good thing for the country as it will stop the howl about the solid South.

PEOPLE who howl the loudest about the poor tickets nominated, and about the men elected to office, as a rule, are the men who did not attend a caucus, and in some instances did not even go to the polls to vote. Every true citizen of the United States who favors the continuance of our form of government should be careful to exercise his rights in this direction whenever opportunity is presented.

THE result of the election in New York seems quite satisfactory to a good many democrats as well as to republicans. David Hill is snowed under by a big majority and his chances for the Presidential candidacy two years hence effectually banished. We with some others have long been of the opinion that if the democrats would devote less of their anxiety to New York and place men from other states at the head of the ballot they would be more easily successful in the political race.

IN looking over the vote of Minnesota we find that people like straight business. They like to know what they are voting for; even though they don't quite like everything on the ticket they vote. The people's party put up men, necessarily from one of the old parties; because their party is new and draws its material from the old parties. They had a platform which few, even of their followers, could swallow in its entirety. They did not, and could not, agree on everything at once and there was a great deal of uncertainty as to what they would do if they were elected to run our state government.

The Democratic party foolishly followed after the populists and their vague and uncertain ideas about governing the state, just enough to discourage the best men in their own ranks, to make them indifferent as to the outcome. Some of them joined reluctantly with the fusionists and said, "Anything to knock out the republicans;" others said the populists, and the miserable surrendering of principles to join with them, for the simple purpose of killing off the republicans, is more than we can go, so went straight for the republican candidates, saying "we have had enough of uncertainties." Many were so thoroughly disgusted as to remain at home; allowing the election so far as they were concerned to go by default to the republicans.

The republicans ever on the alert to make the most of everything are doing lots of shouting because of their great victory; which some of their papers admit was simply a surrender of Democratic leaders.

Pure Primaries.

Now, before the smoke of the great battle of ballots has cleared away, while the events of the late campaign are fresh in the minds of all is the time to agitate this question. From the light vote in country districts we see that voters did not take the interest in the election that citizens of this great Republic should take. The question comes up to the mind of every thinking man, Why do not men vote? Why do they not attend elections and cast their ballots, the right to do so having been so dearly bought and sacredly guarded by our forefathers? Is it not because of their lack of faith in the honesty of the management of affairs? Is it not because of their knowledge of how leaders of politics manipulate wires to nominate men the people do not want; to fuse and trade with other parties, even those they profess to desire to "down", to "knock out", to defeat? Some steps should be taken at the coming term of the Legislature to rectify these matters so far as possible. It seems to us that if the people could be brought to their duty, to take a lively interest in the welfare of the country; to do their share as a part of the government in helping to elect men and to make laws for the country that they would be better satisfied. As it is now half a dozen men in each voting precinct get together and delegate men to act for the precinct in selecting a ticket. Every voter in the precinct should express his convictions by ballot at a primary election as to who he will have for candidates to run on his respective ticket for every office. There should be enacted by this winter's legislature a law making it illegal to hold a caucus and elect delegates to a convention in any other manner than by ballot, and we are not sure but it would be a good plan to add to a man's taxes a small sum if he neglects to vote. Some individuals would lose hundreds of dollars by neglecting to vote, so long as they did not have to take the cash out of their pocket, while they would go miles to vote in order to save paying a small amount of tax additional to what they already pay.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 2, 1894.

In assuming that members of the cabinet are not interested in the campaign because they are attending to their official duties and are not making speeches, some people are making a serious mistake. The two New York members—Secretary Lamont and Postmaster General Bissell—are registered and both of them say they expected to vote the straight democaatic ticket; Secretary Gresham is registered and says he will go to Chicago and vote the straight democratic ticket; Secretary Morton, who has just returned from Europe, found so much business awaiting his attention that he paired with a Nebraska republican and will not go home to vote; Secretary Carlisle is so busy that he will not go home to vote, but he would if there was any doubt about the result in Kentucky; Secretary Smith and Secretary Herbert both expect to vote the straight democratic ticket, but nobody seems to know Attorney General Olney's intentions.

The annual report of Pension Commissioner Lochren says of the notorious Long pension which was reduced by the Bureau of Pensions, that under honest but mistaken interpretations of pension laws Judge Long has obtained more than $7,000 to which he was never legally entitled, and adds the belief of the Commissioner, that should Long ever take the matter to the U. S. Supreme Court, as he has said he would, the decision may impel him to consider the propriety of refunding this money to the government.

Public printer Benedict has gone to New York to take part in the closing work of the campaign. He is regarded as high authority on the politics of that state, and just before leaving Washington expressed himself as follows on democratic prospects: "My correspondence assures me that the party in that state is united and enthusiastic for success. The newspaper accounts further convince me of the fact. I know the active men in most of the counties of the state within the party. I have met them often in their localities in matters political. I know how much they have been divided of late. I am sure they are now working for victory in the common cause. While this place is not favorable for political prognostications, I am very hopeful of success, and I am sure of a united democratic party in the state hereafter as the result of Senator Hill's splendid canvas." Mr. Benedict said of another matter in which democrats are much interested: "I know that Secretary Carlisle is anxious to see the democratic tickot elected, but of course, as Assistant Secretaries Wike, Hamlin and Curtis are out of town, making speeches for the party in different sections of the country, he is unable to leave here on account of his official duties, and I believe the New York democrats will appreciate that fact."

The Post Office department, in order to enlist the assistance of private citizens in the protection of the U. S. mails, both in transit and in post offices, has offered a series of rewards, $1,000 for the conviction in any U. S. court of any person, on the charge of robbing the mails while conveyed in a mail car attached to a railway train; $500 for a conviction on the charge of robbing the mails while being conveyed over any post route, other than a railway; $250 for a conviction on the charge of attempting to rob the mails, and $150 for a conviction on the charge of breaking into a post office and stealing, $200 when the amount stolen exceeds $500.

Ex-Secretary of the Treasury Foster must have lost his political cunning along with his fortune, or he would not have been so foolish as to write a positive denial of his having during the closing days of the Harrison administration ordered the Bureau of Engraving and Printing to prepare plates for the printing of bonds, so that they would be ready for a bond issue at a day's notice. His official order for the preparation of the bond plates is on record at the Treasury department, and a copy of it was this week published. "Tell the truth," is the best rule, in politics as well as in everything else.

Minnesota Slumps Back.

Knute Nelson is governor again, thanks to the democrats. The asininity of 1890 and 1892 has been repeated and doubled

With the game in their own hands, they have given it away. The party has been the victim of two kinds of Democrats-one asses, the other knaves.

There were two kinds of asses. One sort thought the main thing was to whip the republicans, and that it could only be done by joining the Populists. The other sort were those who got scared at the braying of the republican donkey, and cast their votes for Nelson so as to save the state from the bugaboo of a populist governor.

The knaves are those to whom we have alluded and to whom we propose alluding to hereafter more specifically. They are those who wanted Nelson elected because they found their profit in republican ascendency. It was they who procured the reluctant assent of Gen. Becker to run, pledging him their aid, and then left him and his committee in the lurch. Where candidates themselves for office they traded, as far as they could, votes for Nelson in return for votes for themselves.

Then there were others who, knowing this recreany, knowing that Democrats asinine and knavish were voting for Nelson, sought to neutralize their votes by voting for Owen. And between the three classes the magnificent opportunity of electing the entire ticket was frittered away and lost, and by the grace of the democrats only, Knute Nelson and his kind rule for another two years.—St. Paul Globe.

Likes Minnesota.

WEST FERNDALE, Wash., Oct. 29.

EDITOR GAZETTE.—As the dark clouds of the rainy season, or winter of the Evergreen State hover over us and we already hear the splash, splash of the mud as trains pass the parsonage. We think of the winter sunshine of Minnesota and if it was the will of our Master we would almost wish we were there. However, we should not complain. The year has been exceedingly fine for this part of the country, so far as the weather and climate are concerned. A beautiful summer and autumn, but now, you see, we are prone to selfishness, and would have the weather to suit ourselves if we could.

The Lord's work is going forward in this part of his vinepard, and sinners are being saved. The Church (through Christ) is bound to win, and the sooner people seek salvation the better it will be for them. Our own charge is fairly prosperous and the society is gradually becoming stronger in membership and spiritual power.

Dr., you will be glad to know that the hopes you entertained four years ago in regard to your humble servant have not been altogether disappointed. The class of which I was a member were successful in passing examinations and were ordained deacons by Bishop Joyce at the Puget Sound Annual Conference.

Mrs. P. and Bennie are well and I am the same as ever, only this heavy atmosphere makes me feel dull at times. The GAZETTE is a welcome visitor.

We observed Good Tidings Day in our church and had a good time. The church was decorated with all kinds of fruit and vegetables, and the collection was in excess of the claim.

Will send you a journal of the annual conference and from the report of pastor's salaries you can judge something of the financial condition of these parts. We have plenty to eat but money is not to be had.

Your friend, Rev. W. H. Wilson, is prospering and doing well in this country.

This is a long letter; did not intend to write so much; must close.

Yours as ever,
J. L. PARMETER.

"I Think Very Hard" That the Buffet-Smoking Library Coach on the North-Western Limited between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Chicago is the greatest institution in modern railway travel I ever ran across—or rather rode in—and I have traveled a few miles myself since I was able to go it along. That Coach means solid comfort to a fellow and makes a long journey a delightfully short one. By all odds it is the best feature of the best train I ever rode on.—The Globe, St. Paul.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill

Among Our Exchanges.

Democrats, be not discouraged. We have truth and justice on our side, and they must and will conquer.—St. Cloud Times.

The election of Mr. Nelson as governor is assured, and that by an unusually large majority. The credit for this result is largely due to the patriotism of democrats. They realized that success of the populists meant ruin to the industrial interests of the state, and having more regard for the popular welfare than for partisan success, voted for the republican candidate.—St. Paul News Record.

Cause of the Slump.

The desertion of the half-hearted democrats to the populist ranks has been the chief cause of the great slump in the democratic vote in the city and state. It not only reduced the democratic ranks but drove the best representatives of that old party over to the republican side. To save the state from populist rule they were loyal enough to stand shoulder to shoulder with the republicans to defeat a common foe. This has also been a year of conversions, and thousand probably were induced to vote the republican ticket on account of national reasons. —St. Paul Dispatch.

THE construction of aluminum boats for the navy has received a set-back through the recent report of experts that the new metal is exceedingly susceptible to the corrosive action of salt water and just as liable to have barnacles adhere to it as other metals. # HAPPY REPUBLICANS.

They Sweep the Country From Ocean to Ocean.

Nelson Elected in Minnesota. Morton Defeats Hill in New York by 150,000 Plurality. Tammany Hall Snowed Under.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The Republicans have carried New York state by estimated pluralities ranging from 130,000 to 150,000. Those figures represent the probable plurality of Levi P. Morton (Rep.) for governor over David B. Hill (Dem.) based upon the vote of New York city and Brooklyn complete, and returns from more than one-half of the election districts above Harlem river.

The total vote for the two leading candidates is considerably in excess of that polled for Flower and Fassett for governor in 1891, in addition to which are the votes cast this year for Wheeler (ind. Dem.), which will exceed 20,000. The tremendous Republican sweep in the city and state, it is estimated, has elected 23 Republican congressmen, a gain of eight over the present representation in congress.

From the plurality ranging from 85,000 to 125,000 in the district below the Harlem for the Democratic party, the Republican party turns the city vote into 20,000 plurality for its state candidates. In all the Democratic estimates given on the eve of the election it was contended that the Democratic plurality below the Harlem would be at least 35,000. The surprises are not confined to this change of vote, but an analysis shows that Senator Hill will run behind even the vote of Maynard, while in the state he fell below the vote cast for governor Flower in 1891. Strong (Rep.) for Mayor of New York is elected by at least 10,000 plurality.

Minnesota.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 7.—Minnesota has gone Republican. Gov. Nelson is elected by at least 20,000 plurality.

It is probable that seven Republicans have been elected to congress in the state.

Towne, without doubt, has defeated

KNUTE NELSON.

Baldwin in the Sixth district. Fletcher is elected in the Fifth, Kiefer in the Fourth, Tawney in the First, McCleary in the Second and Frank M. Eddy in the Seventh. Meagre returns have been received from the Third, but the little from that district indicates Heatwole's election. Two or three counties give him a ratio gain, which, if carried out, will land him safely as congressman from his district.

Chairman Bixby, of the Republican state central committee, claims that Gov. Nelson has carried the state by from 20,000 to 25,000.

At 12:30 a. m. Tams Bixby closed his headquarters in St. Paul and went home, satisfied that the result was all right and would keep until the fuller returns. His last work was to wire Senator Washburn that the legislature is Republican, and a majority of 20 is assured on joint ballot for United States senator. This estimate is not based on returns from a single legislative district, but is on an estimate that the strength Gov. Nelson has given the ticket will assure Republicans for the house and senate to reach that figure. It is the same with the congressional districts, which are confidently claimed to be a clean sweep for all seven.

The indications are that every northern state has gone Republican by safe majorities. The Republicans will control the next house of congress. This is admitted by the Democrats, while the Republicans claim the election of at least 218 members.

Wisconsin.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., Nov. 6.—Returns from the interior state show Republican gains everywhere and indicate that the Republican state ticket will be elected by a majority of from 35,000 to 40,000. The average Republican gain in precincts thus far received is 37, and it is steadily increasing. Chairman Wall, of the Democratic state central committee, concedes the election of Upham and the entire Republican state ticket. Chairman Thom, of the Republican state central committee, claims the state by 50,000, and Henry C. Payne coincides with his estimate. Returns from the congressional vote come in slowly, but those received thus far indicate that the Republicans will carry nine out of the ten districts. The second district, Barwig's being somewhat in doubt.

North Dakota.

FARGO, N. D., Nov. 6.—Returns coming in unusually slow. Returns so far shows Allin (Rep.), for governor running ahead of ticket.

The Republicans gain in Fargo, Grand Forks, Bismarck and all other large towns, while in some country precincts the Populists gain slightly. Allin's election by 5,000 plurality is claimed by the Republican central committee. The Democrats concede it by 1,000. M. N. Johnson (Rep.), is reelected to congress. The average Republican gain in country precincts heard from is 10 per cent over the vote of 1892.

Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS, NOV. 6.—Full returns from many congressional districts have not been received here. Indications point to an overwhelming Republican state. The Republican state committee claims for Owens from 30,000 to 50,000 majority over his opponent, Myers, for secretary of state, 13 congressmen and both branches of the legislature. Democrats concede 20,000 Republican majority, but think they will save four congressmen, Bretz, in the Second; Stockslager, in the Third; Holman in the Fourth and McNagny, in the Twelfth.

South Dakota.

YANKTON, S. D., Nov. 6.—Political information concentrated at the Democratic state committee headquarters in this city tonight is to the effect that Robert D. Gamble and John A. Pickler, Republican candidate for governor will be elected by over 5,000. The legislature will contain 84 Republicans, a majority of 17 on point ballot, insuring the re-election of R. A. Pettigrew, Republican, to the United States senate. Returns are coming in very slowly.

Ohio.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 7.—Ohio has broken her word on Republican pluralities.

While the Republicans claim a plurality for Secretary of State Taylor of 125,000 to 130,000, the Democrats concede that the Republicans have made large gains over the McKinley vote of last year, and possibly beaten the Brough high-water mark of 1863.

On the basis of the state vote, the Republicans claim 17 of the 21 congressmen, the present Ohio delegation in congress consisting of 11 Democrats and 10 Republicans.

Iowa.

DES MOINES, Iowa—Indications point to the election of the entire republican state ticket by 50,000 with the exception of Judge Granger and B. I. Sallinger for the supreme court, whose opponents were indorsed by the populists. The republicans elect ten congressmen. In the Second district Walter L. Hayes, democratic, wins by 1,200.

Michigan.

DETROIT Mich., Nov. 6.—Michigan has gone Republican by about 60,000 plurality. The Republican state central committee claim it will exceed the figure, while Secretary Howard of the Democratic committee concedes the Republican plurality to be 50,000. The Republicans have also elected every one of the 12 congressmen.

Pensylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—3:30 a. m.—Returns from the entire state give Hastings an estimated plurality of 211,664, the greatest Republican majority ever achieved in this state.

EVEN THE KING

Had to Make a Return Like a Common Citizen.

Of all the extraordinary communications that have ever reached King Humbert since he ascended to the throne, says a Rome letter, one which he received the other day for the purpose of inquiring in all seriousness whether he could read or write was perhaps the most extraordinary. And, to make matters worse, he was informed that he was required to give proof that he possessed a certain amount of education to do so. The letter in question was not the work of some irresponsible crank, but was a full-fledged communication bearing the signature of the burgomaster, or mayor, of the little town of Rheme Notre Dame, in Piedmont, where King Humbert happened to own some landed property.

As a land owner of the district the name of the king figures on the electoral register, and every citizen, before he is permitted to cast his vote, is obliged to furnish satisfactory evidence that he can read and write. Of course King Humbert has complied with the demands of the burgomaster, and has set an example to his subjects by performing his duties as a citizen.

Italy is about the only country where such an incident could occur, since in other monarchical countries, particularly England, the sovereign and the prince of the blood are subjected to the same restrictions as the peers of the realm, and are debarred from casting votes at the polls for the lower house of the legislature, the theory being that, possessing by virtue of their birth seats in the house of lords, it is not proper that they should in any way influence the elections to the lower chamber.

THIS MAN'S SIN.

His Single Aim Was to Get an Advertisement and He Succeeded.

Stand in the public thoroughfare gazing at anything real or imaginary and the dozens who gather round you will multiply soon into hundreds, and, if you stick to it, perhaps thousands. A crowd as big as the street could hold for a block gathered round a sign painter. They rallied in curious excitement and dispersed in disappointed disgust.

"My Sin," in huge flaming letters, was what the painter had already printed. If ever a crowd was bent on anything it was on the discovery of what that sin was. They asked each other what it might be and hazarded guesses while the man laid by his red paint pot and brought forth a green instead.

What would the next word be?

The crowd grew so excited they called to the man: "What is it?" "Tell us." "Go on." "Hurry." "Paint quick if you won't talk," until it seemed he might grow too bothered to print anything. But he did.

He printed out in small green letters, added to the gigantic "Sin," the syllable "gle," and when the sign was done it read: "My single aim is to sell at a nominal profit."

SAWED A SALOON IN TWO.

Straddling a State Line, It Made a Lot of Trouble.

Bill Lewis, one of the first to settle in Kansas City, and one of the wickedest men that ever lived there, died a few days ago, says a western exchange. Since 1866 he has been known as the king of Toad-a-Loup, a district which harbored about all the known criminals in town. The saloon he kept in Toad-a-Loup was hardly less notorious than himself. It was built exactly on the state line between Kansas and Missouri and was furnished with a movable bar. Lewis paid no license, and when the Missouri tax collector called upon him he moved his bar over in Kansas. When the authorities of the latter state attempted to arrest him he transferred his business in a minute to Missouri. He was arrested many times, but had to be released. Concerted action on the part of the authorities of both states finally ended the career of Lewis' barroom in Toad-a-Loup. The direction of the state line was chalked off on the saloon and the structure was sawed in two from roof to cellar with an immense cross-cut saw.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Adverse to the Governor.

Atty. Gen. Childs advised Gov Nelson that it was his opinion that the stand taken by Auditor Bierman in the controversy as to whether or not the Great Northern railroad had a legal right to select the lands with which to fill its grant was the correct one.

This controversy between the governor and Auditor Bierman has been a very bitter one and considerable correspondenee has passed between them in regard to it. The auditor made the selection himself, as he claimed he was instructed to do by the statute, and presented the deed to the governor for his signature.

The governor, probably basing his conclusion on the fact that the previous administration had permitted the opposite rule to obtain, evidently assumed that it was in conformity with the requirements of the statute. This is evidenced by the language of his letter to the auditor, in which he declined to sign the deed.

Relief Work.

At a meeting of the state fire relief commission held at Minneapolis, the report of work done thus far was submitted.

The total amount contributed to the fund was $91,000, and there was a total registration of 833 cases of destitution, including 2,089 people. The commission has erected and presented to the fire sufferers 131 houses and has furnished the lumber for 23 shacks, making a total of 154 homes. Five more houses are to be erected at Hinckley and 30 more at Sandstone. Considerable fall plowing is now being done by the commission for the farmers who lost their horses and cattle, and about 30 cows are to be purchased to be distributed among the needy families. Hereafter Kenneth Clark will be the head of the commission in the absence of C. A. Pillsbury, who soon leaves for Europe.

Burned to Death.

Myrtle Morrisy, aged 10 years, met a sad death at her home in Minneapolis. While attempting to kindle a fire with coal oil the flames reached the can and she was frightfully burned about the face and body, dying four hours later in great agony.

The little tot had used coal oil in starting the fire time and time again. But this time she attempted to pour the oil from the can direct to the fire. The flames burst into her face, and in a moment her clothing was on fire. Before help reached her, both eyes were burned from their sockets and her clothes were literally burned from her body. She writhed in agony until death brought relief.

Accident to O. M. Hall.

After the Democratic rally at the court house at Hastings, Congressman O. M. Hall, of Red Wing, went to the depot to board a midnight freight for home, being escorted by a number of prominent Democrats, including R. C. Libbey, of Hastings, a well known lumber merchant. The party started for the railroad drawbridge, and endeavoring to reach the caboose stepped off the trestle in the darkness, falling a distance of 20 feet. Mr. Hall was badly bruised about the face and head and sustained an injury to his hip. Mr. Libbey received a severe shock and injury to his back.

Held Up.

When returning home from Lester Prairie, Frank Sexton, a farmer living four miles from there was stopped by two men and ordered to throw up his hands. Mr. Sexton reached for his revolver, but the robbers shot him through the arm and relieved him of $250. The robbers made good their escape. Sexton had been on a collecting tour.

News in Brief.

Stephen Benedict, a wealthy farmer near Moorhead, was found dead about a mile from his home. It is presumed he died from heart disease.

The municipal debt of the city of St. Paul is $9,831,250.

The contract for building the waterworks at Wells was given to O. H. Olson & Co., of Stillwater, for $15,225.

The insurance commissioner collected in fees during the quarter ending Oct. 30, $681.

The state university has filed with the state auditor expense lists amounting to $15,490.59.

The quarterly receipts of the state university for the quarter ending Oct. 31 amounted to $24,732.29.

Charles Plym, a carpenter, fell from the third story of the Loverne block in St. Paul and instantly killed.

Henry Kophusmann, a drayman, while unloading freight at a hotel in Winona, fell down an elevator shaft and fractured his skull. He died in a few hours.

Another body has been found near Hinckley. It was near the spot where the limited train was burned and is supposed to have been one who took passage on the train.

A man named Harry Dugan, from St. Paul, committed suicide in the bar room of the Cleveland House, at Fergus Falls. He drank an ounce of carbolic acid.

Julius Kriz, a well known Duluth plumber, was drowned in Carilon lake. He was the last of four brothers, all of whom met violent deaths.

Wilson Barst, an attorney of Fulda, has secured a verdict of $2,000 against J. M. Dickson and Dr. L. L. Bewalt. Barst was indicted and acquitted in the federal courts of sending an obscene letter through the mails. He then claimed that several persons had conspired to ruin him, and accordingly began suit for damages.

The large elevator at Hager City, owned by P. Heffler, together with about 20,000 bushels of grain, were entirely destroyed by fire.

Michael J. Kelly, a switchman in the Milwaukee yards at Minneapolis, was caught between the bumpers of two freight cars and killed.

Miss Florence Cone got a $20 bill changed at the postoffice at Madelia and started for home. When about four blocks from the postoffice, within the residence part of the village, she was struck on the head with a club. She fell against a tree, but screamed, and the robber ran away.

Henry Weiby, an employe of the Interstate company at Kenyon, was found hanging from a beam in the warehouse. No cause can be assigned for the suicide.

John Sheehan got his foot caught in a cattle guard at Carlton and a train ran over his right leg, cutting it off.

OUR CELESTIAL SPHERE.

In Almost Every Blank Space are Countless New and Distant Worlds.

Galileo, in his "Sidereal Messenger," made a map of eighty new stars which he had discovered in the constellation of Orion's belt and the "Sword;" and since then astronomer after astronomer, as is well known, has added various groups and galaxies to the two or three thousand conspicuous stars of the first six magnitudes which can be always seen with the naked eye.

It is curious and not complimentary to the good sense of mankind that those stars should have been looked upon as merely intended to spangle the sky and give light at night. As lamps they were always a failure.

Sixty times the total starlight on the clearest night would not equal the illumination given by the moon, and thirty-three million times their radiance would be required to equal sunlight. Yet the stars which are seen by a powerful telescope are now known to be only an insignificant proportion of those actually existing inside "visible space."

Telescopic photography, as practiced to-day in all the observatories, reveals, in almost every apparently blank region of the celestial sphere, countless new and distant worlds, lying far beyond all methods of mortal computation and measurement.

The only foot rule with which we can at all estimate the scale of distances in the "visible universe" is light. This travels along the ether at the rate of 186,000 miles in a second, so that the ray which we receive from the sun left his service eight minutes before it has reached our eyes.

By ingenious processes based on complex arithmetic, astronomers have determined the distance of about eighty stars, and the nearest of all of them to our system is Alpha Centuari.

The radiance of this star takes, however, about four years to reach human vision, while that which we perceive from Alpha Tauri or Aldebaran was projected from its glittering source twenty-seven years ago, and most of those seen deeper in the night sky are so far off that their present light left them three hundred or four hundred years back.

Many are to-day visible whose beams have traveled to our gaze only after a lapse of thousands of years, and there must be radiant streams now on their way from heavenly bodies in the empyrean which will only reach the eyes of our very far off posterity.—Sir Edwin Arnold, in North American Review.

SHE HAD HER REVENGE.

"IT'S downright injustice!" exclaimed Ethel Dacre, throwing herself on a lounge in her sister's pleasant sitting-room. "Just read that!" she added, tossing a letter into Mrs. Mull's lap. "I wish I—oh, I don't know what I wish!" And, covering her flushed face with her hands, she burst into tears.

Mrs. Mull slowly unfolded the letter and read:

"'Daisy has asked our opinion concerning her ability as an authoress. We advise her to think no more of writing, but turn her mind into some more useful channel where, perhaps, she may excel. Her talent for writing is not apparent.'"

"Well!" said Ethel.

"Why, that's a very nice little note," returned her sister. "He thinks you may excel in some other way. He could not have softened his opinion more kindly."

"Louise, you don't sympathize with me a particle! You know how many years I spent on that last story—how I worried over my hero until my head ached. How many nights I ran the risk of spoiling my good looks by sitting up late to copy the manuscript! And what did it amount to? All my work for nothing! I know it was worthy of publication. Either the man hates southerners or he does not understand his business."

"Well?"

"Aunt Carlton has been writing for me to spend the coming winter in Boston. I'm going!"

"Has this anything to do with your editor?"

"Everything. He lives in Boston—and I'll have my revenge!"

"Do you intend to assault the lion in his den?"

Ethel rested her face in her hands and turned her laughing eyes on her sister.

"Yes," she answered. "I'm going to write two letters this evening, one to Aunt Carlton and the other to that crabbed editor." And with light steps she left the room before her sister could answer.

A few minutes later saw her seated at her desk, around which she had woven so many love stories and dreams of future success. Before her lay two letters. The first one ran thus:

"R. A. Moss—Sir: Many thanks for your note declining my last story. No doubt you, being a northerner, think a southern girl needs only a few words of discouragement to quench her ambition. You are mistaken. The time may come when you will desire a few lines of my writing; but neither love nor money will then purchase them. DAISY."

"Now," exclaimed Ethel, giving the envelope a little tap as she sealed it, "he'll see that the little southern daisy is not so easily trampled upon!"

"A penny for your thoughts, Miss Dacre!" exclaimed Ray Moss, approaching the corner of Mrs. Carlton's drawing-room where Ethel held court.

The girl started and blushed.

"First produce your penny, Mr. Moss. No credit given here," she saucily rejoined.

"And yet they say the commercial instinct is dormant in the hearts of southern girls!" he retorted.

"It soon springs to life when fanned by northern winds."

"Yes? I'm afraid you haven't a very high opinion of the north."

"On the contrary I am delighted with it."

"I'm glad to know that. I have an idea that southern maids do not regard us with too much favor."

"And upon what do you found your opinion, pray?"

Ray laughed.

"I had the oddest little business episode not long ago," he answered. "Shall I bore you by relating it?"

"Not at all," Ethel said, with a presentiment of what might be coming.

"You know I edit the Star. Well, one day I received a little love story from the south—by the way, it came from your own city."

Ethel coughed behind her fan and bit her lip furiously.

"The article," continued Ray Moss, "was not available—in fact, was so far from what it should be that I wrote the fair author a few words of advice—in the kindest possible spirit, I assure you. A few days later I received a tart little note from her, in which she implied that I refused her story because she was a southern girl."

"Well, didn't you?"

"Certainly not!" Ray answered, in evident surprise at the question. "Stories stand or fall entirely on their own merits, Miss Dacre."

"And this particular one—was it so very, very bad?" Ethel asked, her cheeks crimsoning in spite of herself.

"My dear Miss Dacre," replied Ray, his blue eyes dancing with merriment, "I assure you that it could not have been worse had it emanated from the brain of a lunatic!"

Ethel almost gasped; then, remembering herself, she joined in Moss' laughter, and quickly changed the subject.

"After all," she thought, when alone in her room that night, "he does not know that I am Daisy and need never know it. It was very foolish of me to write that note—oh, I wish I had never met him! I hate him—I know I do! How he laughed at Daisy's attempt! But he shall do me justice. I'll write another story, have it copied by a typewriter, assume a man's name and send it the Star. Then, when it is published, I'll reveal my identity to this supercilious youn man and have my revenge."

The weeks sped by, and Ray Moss was a frequent visitor at Mrs. Carlton's house. It was plain to see that he was in love with pretty Ethel, who tried hard to fight against her growing love for the audacious young man who had so wronged her.

She had carried out her intention and sent another story to the Star. This time it was returned without delay, branded with the word "Trash!" written in red ink. Evidently the editorial decision was not to be reversed by subterfuge in her case.

Strange to say, the fate of Ethel's second story softened her feelings toward Mr. Moss; she saw that he had been especially kind in his treatment of "Daisy," and suspected that he had good reason for his adverse opinion.

One evening she was walking with Ray in her aunt's garden. She had been unusually gracious to him, and he was in a hopeful mood in consequence.

"Do you know, Mr. Moss, I am going home in a few days?" she said. "Sister Louise has written for me."

"Going home!" he exclaimed. "Don't say that, Ethel!"

She turned and looked at him, the fair face flushing. It was the first time he had called her by her first name.

"Mr. Moss!" she exclaimed.

"I beg your pardon, Miss Dacre—I forgot myself. Yet I should not object if you called me Ray," he added slyly.

She tossed her head, but made no answer.

"Ethel—Miss Dacre—won't you write to me when you leave us?" he asked, for some reason dismayed by her manner.

Ethel remembered the words of her note: "The time will come when neither love nor money will purchase a few lines of my writing." She almost laughed. She knew she loved him, though she had fought against the knowledge. "He will never know that I am Daisy," she argued to herself.

"You will be too busy to write, Mr. Moss. Your magazine must consume all your time."

"Oh, Ethel, don't tease me!" he cried. "You know very well that I love you—I have made no secret of it. Won't you be my wife, dear?"

She hung her head and was silent. He drew the white hands into his own, and she did not resist him.

"My little Daisy," he continued, softly, "you will not punish me for the advice I once gave you. You cannot write love stories, dear, but you can be the heroine of one if you will. Be my wife—won't you say yes, my little southern Daisy?"

SHE WAS WALKING WITH RAY.

Poor Ethel! Her face was scarlet. Tears rushed to her eyes as she faltered

"Oh, Ray, how did you find me out?"

He lifted the flushed face and kissed it.

"Quite easily, darling," he replied. "Here is Miss Daisy's tart little note, and here are Miss Ethel's replies to my invitations. Are they not written exactly alike?"

Ethel laughed rather ruefully. Then, clasping both hands behind her, she said:

"Very well, I must execute my threat. Now that you really desire a few lines of my writing, I shall refuse them."

"Don't say that!" pleaded Ray. "Will not love avail! Ethel, you can't be so cruel? But I shall not request the few lines—I'm going south with you, if you'll let me."

She turned to run away, but he caught her in his arms.

"You have not answered my question yet," he said.

"I cannot," declared Ethel.

"Why?" demanded Ray.

"Because—because I ought not to forgive you. Daisy's wrongs cry for vengeance."

CARMEN SYLVA'S HEART.

It Is Very Tender, as a Little Roumanian Girl Has Reason to Know.

Here is a pretty little story about Carmen Sylva: A few years ago, when she was in the zenith of her popularity and health, she visited a small village school incog. and asked permission to put the children through their "paces." The schoolmistress was highly delighted. Although she was unaware of the high rank of her visitor, she guessed from outward appearances that the latter was of no common order. The children did their mistress credit, answering with great promptitude all the simple questions the queen put to them.

Just before leaving the queen noticed one little tot in a far corner of the room, with her tangled head of hair bent over some book. The child was so deeply engrossed in the reading that she took no notice whatever of anybody in the room. The queen asked the reason of her silence; was she deaf or otherwise afflicted? "Oh, no," was the answer, "but she is stupid and never attends to her studies, but seizes every opportunity to read story books." Carmen Sylva walked quietly up to the little reader, and putting her hand on the curly head asked gently what the child was reading, and the latter held up the book to the strange lady. It was "Fairy Stories and Poems" by Carmen Sylva. "And do you like these tales?" asked their author. "Like them, madame? Oh, I love them!"

And Carmen Sylva took the child in her arms, kissed the little flushed face, and departed. About a week afterward the child's aunt (for the little maiden was an orphan) received a letter from the queen offering to educaet and bring up the child. The offer was gratefully and thankfully accepted, and now the little one is in one of the best schools in Roumania.—N. Y. Advertiser.

—Nero was mentally and morally a pervert. He was unspeakably degraded in his vices, and his cruelties were of the most atrocious character. He seemed to delight in viciousness purely for its own sake. He butchered all his best friends, including his mother, and finally committed suicide on learning that the senate had issued orders for his arrest.

A NOBLE FIGHT.

An Eminent Southern Lawyer's Long Conflict with Disease.

Twenty-Five Years of Prosperity, Adversity and Suffering. The Great Victory Won by Science Over a Stubborn Disease.

[From the Atlanta, Ga., Constitution.]

Foremost among the best known lawyers and farmers of North Carolina stands Col. Isaac A. Sugg, of Greenville, Pitt Co., a man who has been on the edge of eternity and whose life had been measured by minutes.

"It has been twenty-two years since I became a resident of this town," said Col. Sugg, in telling his story to a reporter, "even then the first symptoms of Gravel were asserting themselves but were slight. Gradually, however, my disease developed, and fight it as I would it seemed to gain a stronger foothold day by day until my misery was complete. For sixteen years I never knew what it was to be free from pain, not pain as an ordinary man thinks of it, but agonizing, excruciating, unendurable pain. Tortured from head to foot, at times thrown into spasms when it would require the united strength of four men to hold me until I was stupified with stimulants and opiates. I could not sit, lie or stand in any one position but the shortest time. Sleep was out of the question unless brought about by the strongest stimulants or opiates. Oh how many, many times have I thought of putting an end to that life of suffering. But then my mind would revert to my wife, my children, my home, and I would restrain my hand with the hope that some other means of escape would be offered. I searched the archives of medicine for relief. Doctors were consulted, lithia waters, mineral waters, drugs, opiates and stimulants of all sorts were tried without avail. Why I sent clear to the West Indies for medicine and yet the result was the same.

"I kept at my work as long as I could but nature gave way at last and I succumbed to the inevitable. My entire nervous system had been shattered by the stimulants and opiates I had taken, my blood had actually turned to water, my weight had dropped from 173 pounds to 123, and it seemed to everybody that the end was in sight. Why I could not bear the gentle hand of my wife to bathe my limbs with tepid water. I was simply living from hour to hour. I had made my will, settled my business and waited for the last strand of life to snap.

"It was at this time that a somewhat similar case as my own was brought to my notice. This man had suffered very much as I had, his life had been despaired of as mine had and yet he had been cured. Think what that little word meant to me—CURED. The report stated that the work had been accomplished by a medicine known as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I investigated the report thoroughly and found that it was true in detail. Then I procured some of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and began taking them and began to get better. I began to sleep like a healthful child, sound, calm and peaceful. My appetite came back and my nerves were soothed and restored to their normal condition and I felt like a new man. But the greatest blessing was the mental improvement. I began to read and digest, to formulate new plans, to take interest in my law practice, which began to come back to me as soon as my clients realized that I was again myself. After a lapse of 10 years I ride horseback every day without fatigue.

"That Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life is beyond doubt, and I am spreading their praise far and wide."

Inquiry about the town of Greenville substantiated the above facts of Col. Sugg's case, and that many others are being benefited by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are considered an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, that tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration; all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities, and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box or 6 boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

LOVER OF FLOWERS.

Mr. Buppum Dilates on the Advantages of Flowers in the House.

"Flowers are very beautiful in a house," said Mr. Buppum, but they are useful, too. Now my wife had last winter several pots of plants in our dining-room. These pots and those flowers were invaluable to me.

"The butts of my cigars, placed carefully in the pots, I am certain keep insects away. Many and many a time have I half emptied my glass upon the flowers, that the qualification of my liquor should not be too great.

"I would sharpen my pencil over the flowers, knowing that the chips would not fall upon the floor. If my pencils were missing from my desk I had only to take a stick from a flower pot, knowing that Mrs. Buppum's plants had supporters which they could sometimes go without.

"I am not saying," concluded Mr. Buppum, "that my attentions were good for the plants; but they saved me much trouble, and I shall co-operate with Mrs. Buppum in keeping flowers in the house this winter."—N. Y. Sun.

INDIVIDUALITIES.

GEN. WILLIAM BOOTH, of the Salvation Army, is sixty-six years of age, and is as active and vigorous as many men of thirty.

DR. JAMES R. COCKE, a successful Boston physician, is perhaps the only man in the country who, though blind from infancy, took up the study of medicine and excelled in its practice.

SIR ARTHUR SULLIVAN, at fifty-one, is portrayed as a short-necked, thick-set, beetle-browed man, with curly black hair, mustache and side whiskers. He is somewhat stilted in manner and has been composing for thirty-five years.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN is a most painstaking and untiring speaker. Not infrequently he writes every line of a speech occupying, perhaps, four or five columns of a newspaper the next morning. He then learns it off by heart, word for word.

REV. SABINE BARING-GOULD is now sixty years old, and has written fifty books. He lives in the same beautiful old manor-house which has been the home of the Gould family ever since the time of James I.

OF GENERAL INTEREST.

—James K. Polk was born on a farm, and even when very young helped his father in the latter's work as a surveyor.

—Thomas Sheridan, the father of Lady Dufferin, once displeased his father, who, remonstrating with him, exclaimed: "Why, Tom, my father would never have permitted me to do such a thing!" "Sir," said his son, in a tone of the greatest indignation, "do you presume to compare your father to my father?"

—The Viscaya, the belted cruiser recently completed at Bilbao for the Spanish navy, attained in her trials under natural draught only a speed of 18.6 knots. The shipyard where she was built is in a remarkably favorable position, for the raw ore can be brought in at one end and a fully equipped war vessel turned out at the other.

—The improvement in axes during the last fifty years has been almost as great as in any other lumbering implement. A variety which is very popular in camps is the double-bitted ax, one blade having a keen edge which will sink deep into the wood, while the other is kept blunt for the purpose of trimming the tops of trees, or where it is necessary to strike into knots which would damage a thin blade.

—A pamphlet containing full details of the death of President Carnot, the funeral and copies of the addresses of sympathy sent both to the government and to Mme. Carnot, has been printed by order of the minister of the interior for distribution to all the municipalities in France. The little book also has in it a portrait of President Carnot and several photographs of the Elysee in mourning and the funeral procession.

—The United States has lost Mt. St. Elias to the British, as the result of the joint boundary survey of Alaska; and more than that, the British have two or three other mountains in the neighborhood which are even higher than this, which had been supposed to be the highest peak in North America. Mt. St. Elias is calculated to be 18,053 feet high, while Mt. Logan is 19,534, and, so far, heads the list of North American mountain peaks.

—The funeral usages of the native Australians before civilizing influences were brought to bear on them were very peculiar. When a native fell ill he was removed to a small hut or inclosure at some distance from the village, was provided with fire-wood and food and left alone. When found to be dead his remains were allowed to decompose until the flesh had fallen from the bones, when the latter were collected, cleaned, painted red, made up into bundles and carried about with the tribe for a certain length of time, when they were either buried or deposited in a hollow tree or cave.

—If a deceased Roman had not a large assortment of female relatives to weep for him, female mourners were hired to attend to that part of the business, and gradually they acquired a monopoly. Their fees depended on the service. If they simply followed the bier in silence, they received about four cents; if required to weep, their fee was six cents; shrieking and loud outcries or lamentations, together with tearing the hair, beating the breasts and other signs of extreme grief, cost the afflicted relatives fifteen cents for each industrious mourner. At the funeral of Titus there were fifteen hundred of these professionals employed, all at the highest rates.

MAKING OF A MAN-OF-WAR.

Built on Paper First, Then of Wood and Finally of Steel.

A man-of-war is built upon paper before a single plate of steel is forged. Not only is the design and model made, and a sketch to show how she will look when she is floating on the foamy deep, but every piece that enters into her construction, whether it be of iron or wood or steel is measured and drawn out with even greater care than an architect exercises in designing the details of the mantels and door-jambs and plumbing of a house. Not only is the length and breadth of a ship decided upon in advance, but the naval constructor will tell you to an ounce how much water she will displace when her armor and guns are placed upon her; how many times her propellers will revolve in a minute with a given pressure of steam, and how many tons of coal an hour must be consumed to drive her at a certain rate of speed.

The science of shipbuilding has reached such perfection that of the forty ships that compose the new navy of the United States only two have not fulfilled or exceeded the plans and promises of the men who designed them, with reference to horse-power, speed and other qualifications. The Atlanta and Monterey did not develop quite the horse-power that their engines were designed to give, and their builders had to pay a forfeit. The Castine and the Machias were found to be top-heavy when they got all their armor on, but that was an error of judgment. They were given too many guns for their tonnage, but the defect was easily repaired.

When the plans of a ship are given to the contractor the first thing he does is to reproduce the design, or at least a cross-section full size, with chalk on the floor of his loft, and wooden patterns are made from the chalk marks for the use of the founders in casting her ribs and beams. Then a wooden plate is made for every steel plate that is needed and marked with white paint to correspond with that it represents on the pen-and-ink design. Then the keel is laid and the skeleton riveted together until it stands out in the air like the steel buildings that are now being constructed fifteen and sixteen stories high before a brick or a stone is laid for the outside walls.

When it comes time to put on the plates, the wooden pattern is used first to see if it is a perfect fit and to mark where the rivet holes must be made. The steel plate is then laid upon it, the places for the rivet holes are marked and then drilled, and finally it is fastened by red-hot steel bolts where it belongs. In a ship of five thousand tons there are over seven or eight thousand different pieces of steel and fifty or sixty thousand steel rivets.—Chicago Record.

Curtailed Her Message.

This is the message the telegraph messenger handed to him: Come down as soon as you can. I am dying. Kate." Eight hours later he arrived at the summer hotel, to be met on the piazza by Kate herself. "Why—what did you mean by sending me such a message?" he asked. "Oh," she gurgled, "I wanted to say that I was dying to see you, but my ten words ran out and I had to stop."—Indianapolis Journal.

MARRIAGE IN TURKEY.

The Businesslike Methods Employed in Obtaining Wives.

While we American women are thinking and talking of higher education and emancipation we often forget that there are women in the world who, besides not having the numerous advantages which have become part of our daily lives, have to labor under many a disadvantage and are kept down by many a weight which we have never known. Few of us have any knowledge of the life and standing of the Turkish woman; in fact, there is no class of women in the world of whom, for obvious reasons, so little is known.

The seclusion in which she has to live has effectually screened her; travelers get as small a glimpse of her life as they get of her features under the folds of her yashmak. Hence the exaggerated idea that the Turkish woman is either a pampered creature living in lazy luxury or a slave at the beck and call of a relentless master.

During a long residence in the sultan's dominions I have had the opportunity of becoming acquainted with a large number of ladies of all classes, and have found them in very few respects as I had expected to find them. In the first place, it is not a fact that the religion of the prophet denies woman a soul. The superiority of man over woman is distinctly taught, but she is exhorted to lead a righteous life and the same promise of future reward is made to man and woman alike in the koran.

The Mahometan scriptures permit each man to have four wives; his first wife is chief of the household and above the other wives As a rule marriage among the Turks takes place at an earlier age than it does with us. The arrangements for a betrothal and marriage are not made by the young man himself. In fact, he plays almost as passive a part in the matter as the girl does.

When a young man is deemed marriageable by his family his mother or nearest relatives look about them for a suitable bride. All their friends tell them about this girl or that, and the mother of the young man and other female relatives make a round of calls upon the different eligible maidens, one of whom is chosen if she finds favor in the eyes of the critical visitors.

In anticipation of this visit the young ladies are dressed out in their prettiest, decked out in as many jewels as the family possesses, and sit demurely by while their mothers discuss the weather and other equally interesting and appropriate topics; of the actual cause of their visit no mention is made. After sampling the goods, so to speak, the mother decides which girl her son shall marry. A formal proposal is sent to her parents, and if they are willing the match is made.

Then, and not till then, may the young lady see her betrothed, but always in the presence of her mother or some other old haanum. According to law a woman of age may refuse to marry a certain man, but it is very seldom that such an objection is made. This system has so long been an accepted institution that a girl no more thinks of refusing a husband chosen for her than she thinks of choosing one for herself, and that would never enter her head.

After the engagement the family jointly agree as to the time of the wedding, and great preparations are made for the important event, especially if it is the young man's first venture in the matrimonial field. As the important day approaches the house is decorated according to the means of the families; furniture and ornaments, rugs for the floor and illuminated texts from the koran or the walls are brought in from various sources.—Philadelphia Press.

We Pay for Ideas

We need TWENTY or MORE original and striking designs for Newspaper Advertisements of SANTA CLAUS SOAP. The manufacturers, The N. K. Fairbank Company, authorize us to pay TEN DOLLARS EACH for approved drawings with appropriate reading; or $5.00 each for designs or reading matter only. This offer is open to all. The competition will close December 1. As soon as possible after that date we will pay for accepted designs and return the others. Remember, for complete, acceptable advertisements we pay

$10 Each

Directions.—Make drawings with black ink on heavy white paper, or card board. Do the work in outline. Elaborate shading will not print well. Space in papers will be four inches square. Draw to larger scale if you prefer, but have design square. The idea is most important. If that is good we can have it redrawn and still give you credit. Avoid poetry. Get up an ad. that would make you buy the article.

Points.—Santa Claus is a pure, high-grade Soap—made for laundry and general household use—a favorite wherever known. Merits generous praise. Sold by all grocers, wholesale and retail.

Do your best, and send results promptly. Address (only)

The Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, of ROXBURY, MASS.,

Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston. Send postal card for book.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Sold by all Druggists.

DELANO DIARY

--Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

—A basket sociable will be held by the Ladies Aid Society in the City Hall tonight. Everybody is invited to be present.

—Remember the Literary Society at the City Hall tomorrow evening. Be on hand and help organize or a good winter's work in this line.

—Johnny Siebel met with a painful accident on Monday while engaged in putting in a well at Waverly. In some way the machinery struck him on the leg, breaking it near the knee. He will be laid up for some time.

—Our extra police on election day ought to have been able to have earned their wages by running in drunks and by discovoring the source of drunkenness so prevalent notwithstanding the closing by law of saloons on election day.

—Now that election is over people will again settle back into the even tenor of their ways; and the world will jog along in its accustomed sphere just the same as if about two thirds of the candidates had not been defeated at the polls.

—Milton Muckey, the engineer in the new power house, who unfortunately got his thumb into an unsafe place about the engine and had the end of it mashed off, is recovering as rapidly as possible. He still carries his hand in a sling.

—Uncle Joe VanEman came into the office the morning after election, announcing his arrival by a very faint crow, something like the first attempts of a young shanghai rooster. He did not appear very confident of the success of his candidate.

—If Jim Hill could arrange to have a passenger train to the city about noon; or if it would arrive in Minneapolis at 12 M. and leave at that hour the next day for the accommodation of people living along the line, we believe he would get lots of travel he don't get.

—On Saturday evening at the City Hall a small sized audience listened to David Murdock, of Howard Lake, and Tom Lucas, of Minneapolis, expound the populist doctrines. Both are very good speakers; but the people generally, hereabouts, don't seem to appreciate their doctrines.

—Election day was quite raw and chilly, and the roads being rough and frozen did not offer very favorable inducements for voters to come out to the polls and vote. Only the most patriotic citizens and those being interested in the election of friends or having business in town came.

—More care should be taken for the comfort of voters waiting at the polls, in the chill November winds. At the township polls, a big crowd was congregated in front of the door, on the sidewalk, and some of them became tired and went away without voting. It may be they came back afterwards; but provision should be made for people to wait inside the house and not out in the cold.

—On Monday evening quite a crowd of our citizens turned out to attend the Concert and Lecture on Music, by Messrs. Buntley and Fearis at the City Hall. They undertook to secure twenty-five names as pupils for twelve lessons; but not being able to get the required number, took up a collection for current expenses and journey on. Their entertainment was well received and well spoken of, but our people are proverbially slow about taking hold of anything of the kind. Possibly the gentlemen may find things more favorable another time.

—Join the Literary Society, be an active member and help make it interesting.

—There seems to be an awful scarcity of candidate for office about town since Tuesday.

—Another wholesale beer house has come to town: the town has also gone republican.

—Can it be possible that Dr. Catlin voted the straight Republican ticket?—Eagle.

--No, it is not so.--DR. CATLIN.

—Rev. Webb will hold Episcopal services on Monday evening at the Presbyterian church at 7:30 P. M.

—The first blizzard of the season came last night; a light fall of snow and wind enough to make it interesting.

—Editor Buckly is the possessor of a fine pencil sketch by that emminent artist, A. W. Wittman; a gift of the designer.

--People are putting on their winter clothing and preparing for cold; yet for the time of year the weather is very pleasant.

—C. W. Kerrick has completed the foundation for his Third street residence and covered it over, we presume for the winter.

—Ole Erwig had his tailor shop straightened up and repaired for winter this week. Ole is one of the best tailors in Wright county.

—A man giving his name as Herman Moline, of Albion, spent a night in a room in the City Hall, for creating a disturbance at the depot.

—Mr. Yancy is having a waste pipe put in from his bathrooms to the river. He is to use city water and have things in apple pie order when completed.

—The weather has been quite winter like for a few days. On Sunday and Monday nights the thermometer was considerably below the freezing point.

—The village authorities tested the waterworks again yesterday afternoon. The streams thrown look as if they would soon quench any fire liable to occur in our village.

—Mrs. Albert Johnson has completed her residence on the West side on the hill at the head of Bridge street, and moved her family in. In is a nice sightly place to live.

—Thursday, NOV. 29, has been set apart by President Cleveland as Thanksgiving day. Make your arrangements accordingly to celebrate this great American holiday.

—A small drove of Shetland ponies passed through town yesterday, exciting the envy of many a small boy who thought he would be happy if he could but sit astride one of them.

—Now that Delano can offer as inducements, to people who like city conveniences, electric lights and city water, we expect soon to see several new residences and possibly some manufacturing establishments built here.

—Several lady book-agents visited our village this week. One of them gave a sidewalk lecture on the impropriety of post office officials going to their meals at noon, just like other people. We heard that she also attattacked Jim Hill's administration of railroads quite severely.

—One Delano saloonkeeper was found disregarding the law on election day by selling liquor to people who came in the back way. We understand the case is to be put into the hands of the County Attorney for prosecution. We presume there will as usual be nothing more to amount to anything done with it.

—Herman Bock lately returned from Grant county, says farmers are doing well raising flax in that part of the state; they get over a dollar a bushel for the seed, and can raise 20 bushels to the acre. The straw, he says, makes a very rich feed for stock; the only drawback being that it impoverishes the land very rapidly.

—Potatoes are not so scarce as was feared a few weeks ago. There is not a very large crop in this immediate vicinity; but people living but a few miles away have some for sale as usual. Squashes are very fine, and take the place of sweet potatoes in a great measure and have been sold at quite reasonable prices this season.

--When one reads of the burning to death af 13 people in a hotel fire at Seattle, and the halls being so filled with smoke that it was impossible for them to escape, it makes him think that some back exit in case of necessity should be made in our school building. Fire escapes of some kind should be provided at once. It is too dangerous a place without them; especially for those in the upper rooms.

--Many of our villagers have expressed a desire to have a literary society to meet once a week in the City Hall during the winter and several have said they would take part in making the exercises interesting and instructive. It would furnish agreeable enjoyment for our young folks as well as older ones. Our hall is now nicely lighted by electricity and the council seems inclined to allow the use of it for the purpose free of charge. Those musically talented can be of great assistance to the enterprise. Let all interested in organizing a society come to the City Hall on Saturday evening, NOV. 10, at 8 P. M.

A Close Observer will not fail to notice that in each large section of our country some one particular railroad will be found always a little in advance of its competitors. In the great Northwest this enviable position belongs to The North-Western Line.—The Health and Home, Minneapolis.

Blessed Thrice With Good traveling accommodations is mankind today. But Good is not enough for the traveling public who are used to luxury when they are at home. They must have the Best and up in this country when we say best we mean The North-Western Line.—Improvement Bulletin, Minneapolis.

Personals.

Mrs. Dr. Davis, of Howard Lake, is in Delano today.

Mrs. William Lewis visited relatives at Dassel this week.

Hubert Dick, of Frankfort, was in town on business this week.

John Casey, of Corcoran town, Was a DELANO visitor Wednesday.

S. R. Wells, of Buffalo, was in town on Monday looking after politics.

Editor Dare, of the Star-News, Elk River, was a GAZETTE caller on Saturday.

A. Anderson has returned home from his summer's labors on his Renville farm.

Mr. Obert, a former resident of Minnetrista, now of Minneapolis was in town today.

Councilman N. K. Coffin carried the election returns to the county-seat Wednesday.

Mrs. John Cunningham and daughter, Viola, visited Minneapolis friends over Sunday.

A. L. Corey, with his family moved to Cokato this week where he will teach school.

Herman Buck returned home yesterday morning from a three month's sojourn in Grant county. He is looking hale and hearty.

Fred Peters and Lee Chapman were in looking over the printing office on Monday. They didn't say whether or not they would learn the business.

Arch-Bishop Ireland and the Saloon.

Some two months ago I wrote Archbishop Ireland to know if he could aid us in any way against the awful evil of the saloons in Delano. He kindly answered that letter and said he would send me an article written by himself and published in the North American Review showing the relation of the Catholic church toward the saloon and her power over it. I now have that article. It is a very fine document, worthy of the heart and head of Archbishop Ireland.

I wish to read that article in my church next Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Let all who wish to know the stand the Catholic church is now taking against the saloon come and hear the article read. Do not stay away and then criticise it from the report of others. J. W. POWELL.

County Cullings.

Waverly is now the banner people's party town of the county.

The Annandale Post comes out under the management of W. A. Clement, who promises to do his best to run a good live paper. The former owners have moved back to Monticello.

The best way to deserve party success is to know what your principles are; to put up men that represent those principles; have good principles; and work and vote for your principles.

Those of the democratic delegates at Buffalo that did not feel the cold icicle of fusion that was thrust down their backs that day surely are willing by this time to admit that it was there just the same.

David Hill,

David Murdock,

David Flannigan,

all snowed under, deep.

We have been told by several reliable persons that Mr. Culkin had some circulars printed for distribution in case the Bland letter was used against him but we have been unable to procure one so know nothing about its contents except from heresay.

After January 1 Colonel O'Leary, Clerk of Court, and Charles Bugbee, Commissioner from the 3d district will be the sole survivors at the Wright county court house of the democratic contingent of officials. Keep a stiff upper lip, boys, for the next two years. "It's a long lane that has no turn."

Wright county has seven republican, one populist and one democratic newspaper. Is it any wonder that her citizens vote one sided? If you are a good democrat and wish your boys to know what democracy is don't fail to have the democratic paper come in your mail every week. If you are a republican or a populist you don't want your boys ignorant of the other side of political questions; give him the democratic paper. People who read but one side of any question continually must become more or less warped in that direction. Read up, get good honest convictions; stand by them and vote for them, and you will be better satisfied, some of you, than you are now.

Wright county democracy, if it expects to win two years from now, should begin at once to draw itself together. It should give up all hopes of fusion, or collusions with anybody but come out boldly and proclaim "Equal rights to all men; special privileges to none"; resolve to stand by this and work to organize in some shape. Public meetings should be held; the rank and file should know what is going on; nothing should go on that the world might not know; meetings should be held in schoolhouses over the county from now till next election at times sufficient to acquaint people with the doctrines of the party and there would be no fear of such en avalanche again.

Culkin vs. Bland.

Last week Martin Bland came in to the office and requested us to publish an article over his signature which appeared as "Senatorial Candidates Compared." Soon after the paper was out Mr. Culkin came in and inquired what we had been publishing about him, and on being told that Mr. Bland was considered, so far as we knew, a reliable man, he set out to abuse him, and to bulldoze us by telling us that he had instructed his attorney to commence suit against us and Mr. Bland; that it was one of the dirtiest pieces of business ever perpetrated in the county; but if we would print a circular letter at once, (it being then about 8 P. M.) denying any knowledge of the charges, and send a copy to each of our subscribers he would make us no further trouble. We could not very well do this and told him we had heard the same story before and that he had three days to answer it in. He denied all knowledge of the case; said he thought Joe Wendell let him go; that he was charged with assault, and that the evidence would not hold him. He said he heard that Bland said something about a rented house he occupied. He had never lived in a rented house but once in his life and that for about nine months but refused to tell us about it. He had conducted a law suit against Mr. Bland and "roasted" him in court and he was his enemy. When he went to go he said he did not mean this in the sense of a threat. We were of a different opinion.

Democratic County Resolutions.

BE IT RESOLVED, that we the Democrats of Wright County assembled, reaffirm the principles enunciated by the National Democratic convention of 1892.

That we heartily approve of the courageous course pursued by President Cleveland and the House of Representatives in endeavoring to secure such tariff reform legislation as would relieve the toiling masses from the burdens heaped upon them by the so-called protective tariff.

And that we pledge to these principles of

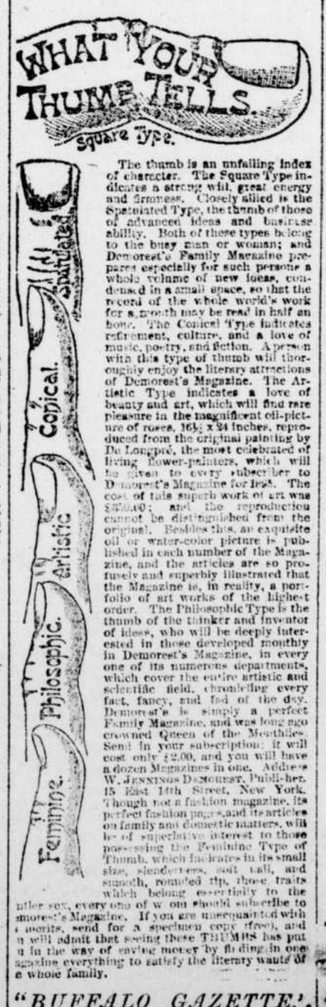
WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.



The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $20,000; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Sent in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slender grace, soft tall, and smooth, rounded tips, those traits which belong essentially to the other sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with it, send for a specimen copy (free), and it will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put it in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of a whole family.

THE time is now ripe for the discussion of Presidential candidate. What is the matter with Henry Watterson, of Kentucky, being placed at the top of the Democratic ticket?

THE ST. LOUIS, the first of the two steamers built by Cramps, Philadelphia, for the International Navigation Company, was christened on Monday, Nov. 12, as she was being launched Mrs. Cleveland, in the presence of 25,000 people performed the ceremony. This vessel is one of the largest and fleetest ever built and marks the dawn of the return of American ship building and supremacy on the high seas.

CHINA is said to be ready to come to an understanding with her neighbor, Japan, and stop the war. President Cleveland has offered to act as arbitrator in case both countries will be satisfied to have him do so. China it is expected will have to indemnify Japan for the expense and trouble she has been put to in bringing her larger opponent to time; while Corea will doubtless be free and independent in the future.

REPORTS are circulated that George L. Becker does not wish to remain on the Railroad Commission; even though he be reappointed, and that his place will be given by Governor Nelson to Ignatius Donnelly. Mr. Donnelly would doubtless suit a majority of the people, in that position. But is it possible that this will prevent his being a candidate for U. S. Senator and a lively opponent of Mr. Nelson's for the same position? Will not the appointment secure for Mr. Nelson the combined forces of the populists and democrats in the two houses of the Legislature and land him instead of W. D. Washburn, Donnelly's old enemy, in the U. S. Senate? We seem sure of having a republican and would not Mr. Nelson, who favored the Mills Bill be more acceptable to democrats and others in Minnesota than would a high protective tariff man?

THE great republican majority in Minnesota has developed the appetite for republican candidacy for office to an alarming extent to Mr. Washburn, as note the number and prominence of the individuals already mentioned as not only willing but anxious to relieve that gentleman of the cares and inconveniences of another campaign for the United States senate. Mr. Kinney, of Duluth, Judge Loren W. Collins, Gen. Moses E. Clapp, Judge C. M. Stuart, Hon. Dwight M. Sabin, Hon. C. A. Towne, Hon. J. T. McCleary, Hon. Joel P. Heatwole, Hon. J. A. Tawney, Hon. John Lind, Hon. S. G. Comstock, ex-Lieut. Gov. W. H. Yale, Samuel Hill, A. M. Miller and Hon. Gideon S Iyes and John S. Gibbs; all of these have been mentioned in the Globe as haying a following.

JOHN SHERMAN has spoken again; this time he is reported as having said: "I do not like to express an opinion on the subject of a bond issue. It is a question for the decision of the party in power, and I do not belong to it!" But he couldn't help saying that he had offered two bills in the 52nd Congress, either of which would have helped prevent the necessity for issuing bonds.

The Senator says: "It is yet too early to talk about the presidential campaign of 1896," and "I am not a candidate for the republican nomination; in fact I do not want it now." He says there are days of tidal waves. We had a marked change in 1892 and have just witnessed another."

"Do I recollect anything to equal the last one? Oh, yes; we had the same thing happen in 1854. Ohio elected a solid republican delegation to Congress. The election then turned on the slavery question. The tidal wave carried me into Congress." He said he was a young lawyer and was nominated in a district with 3000 democratic majority, but elected by 3000 majority on the other ticket.

MAJOR BALDWIN, democratic Congressman from the Sixth Minnesota district is already at his post in Washington, prepared to do his share toward making times good and effecting some more legislation in the interests of his district; as well as of the people of two continents, by his deep waterways plan. Although defeated at the polls for re-election he is determined to serve his constituency to the best of his ability during his remaining days of office which will include the coming winter term. Mr. Baldwin is reported to have given to his colleagues at Washington the following views concerning the late landslide:

"The calamity cry did it. The republicans talked only of hard times and told the people the democrats were to blame, and they either believed it or voted the republican ticket for luck. Up in the iron mines in my district, although they have shipped and mined double the quantity of ore mined in any previous year, they told the workmen that if the democrats came into power the mines would be closed or wages reduced, but that if the republicans should win, the mines would be worked and wages increased. The miners believed the statement and voted accordingly. Forty percent of the mining vote is Catholic and yet they walked up and voted for an A. P. A. man for the reason given above. Nothing else could have induced them to do that. Did we see the change coming? Not a bit of it. I was never more certain of anything in my life than of my re-election. There was no indication of the dissatisfaction which manifested itself on election day. Men who had kept their intentions to themselves just walked up to the polls and secretly cast their votes for the republicans, and quieted their consciences with the plea that as times were so bad they would try a change. There is a good revival of business at hand, and the republicans will try to secure the credit for it, but they will fail, because it will come before the congress just elected ever meets."

After the Election.

The great change in the vote of the people of the country is now the subject of much discussion and explanation. Republicans would have it believed that the democratic doctrines of so call Free Trade have been repudiated by the people. Some seem to expect an immediate re-adoption, by Congress, of the McKinley bill, so recently relegated to the past by the democrats.

Democrats are a unit in giving out that the change of vote, in this instance, does not mean a change of opinion on the tariff question; but a rebuke to the democratic Legislative powers, that dilly-dallied all summer about changing the law and then failed to make so great a change as everybody had been expecting they would make. Henry Watterson attributes the failure to President Cleveland's interview published in the New York Herald ten days after his famous message in 1887, taking the backbone out of the message; and claims that the party erred in selecting him their standard bearer two years ago. Senator Wilson, of Virginia, thinks the democrats were too slow in passing their tariff bill and did not make it sufficiently democratic to suit the people.

It looks now as if the republicans with their big majority in the House will have to bestir themselves in some direction to amuse the voters pretty well to hold them for the coming two years. A great deal will be expected of them that it is out of the question for them to do, and when '96 comes round if the democrats put at the head of their ticket the two cleanest and best men in their party, without paying too much attention to locality or local politics and run them on a national platform that means something and that people have confidence will be carried into effect they stand a good show of regaining their losses and continuing in power; but they have learned a valuable lesson.

The republicans who have so unexpectedly gained control of Congress are at a loss what to do. Will they re-enact the force bill? Will they place the John Sherman Silver Bill in its old form? Will they restore the McKinley bill? Will they vote for free silver, gold standard, or for greenbacks? What are they going to do anyway? Will the price of farm products go up or down? Can a laborer get any more for his work? These are some of the questions that people will expect solved in the next two years. And who is in a position to solve them? The House is largely republican, the Senate is so nearly even that half a dozen Populists virtually control its actions while President Cleveland is ready to veto what he does not like. It looks as if we can now go to work and do something at home; as it is there can be no change in tariff, money or any other thing to materially effect ordinary people for two years at least, after the present short term is over, and people can contentedly work for a living as they have heretofore, for that long at least. Nothing is better than contentment. Let us be centented.

The Blade is Pointed.

Mark the prediction that the price of sugar will materially advance directly after the November elections. The Trust will begin at once to get its rake-off. Note the event and mark how it will fulfil this prediction!

The democratic claim that sugar will not be advanced in price at all by the new tariff is simply silly. The removal of the duty on raw sugar by the McKinley law reduced the price of refined sugar to the consumer. Everybody remembers that. The placing of a duty of 40 per cent on raw sugar again is as certain to advance the price again as anything can be. Wait and see if we do not speak truly!--Toledo Blade.

And this kind of an argument from a leading republican paper in McKinley's own state! Don't the Blade know that protection to the people by the McKinley bill is to cheapen what they have to buy? If the people who read the Blade succeed in learning this simple fact, that it doesn't do it, perhaps they will be able to see the same thing concerning tariff on other raw materials.

The Strike Investigation.

The commission appointed by President Cleveland, consisting of Carroll D. Wright, John D. Kernan, of New York and Nicholas E. Worthington, of Illinois, have made their report public.

They say the capital represented by the twenty four railroads in the General Managers' Association was $2,108,552,617; the number of employees 221,097. The General Managers' Association formed in 1886. It is claimed that the association of twenty-four railroads combined to run the business of the roads centering in Chicago. That they established a "Chicago scale" for switchmen, seeking to equalize the pay on all the roads.

The report says the General Managers' Association has no more standing in law than the Trunk Line Pool. It cannot incorporate, because railroad charters do not authorize roads to form corporations or associations to fix rates for services and wages, nor to force their acceptance, nor to battle with strikers. It is a usurpation of power not granted. It claims the asociation to be treading on dangerous ground which will eventuate in government ownership of railroads unless stopped.

The commission claims that until the railroads set the example a general union of employees was never attempted. Different systems existed but no general system.

The Pullman company is blamed for having men at work for two weeks draw but 40 cts. to $1. more than their rent came to, and for reducing wages while they kept the rent up. The employees are blamed for asking a restoration of the June. 1893 wages, but are commended for their quietness and good behavior during the strike and for the lack of damage to property.

The reporters claim "The arrival of troops at Chicago was opportune, and that President Cleveland sent them to protect Federal property; to prevent obstruction to the carrying of mails; to prevent interferance with the interstate commerce, and to enforce the decree and mandates of the federal courts under authority of Revised Statutes of the United States, Section 5298. While operating the railroads they assumed and exercised unrestricted United States authority when so ordered by their employers or whenever they regarded it as necessary. They were not under direct control of any government official while exercising authority. This is placing officers of the goverment under control of a combination of railroads. It is a bad precedent, that might well lead to serious consequences."

There is no evidence before the commission that the officers of the A. R. U. at any time participated in or advised intimidation, violence, or destruction of property.

The commission recommends that there be a permanent United States Strike Commission to settle difficulties between employer and employe and that the parties must obey the recommendations of the commission; that arbitration of the difficulties be the law.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 9, 1894.

President Cleveland is quietly attending to his official duties just as though there had never been an election. He hasn't said a word on the subject to anyone who had authority to make it public, but it is certain that he has been doing a lot of thinking and those able to read between the lines will be able to form a pretty good idea of the trend of his thoughts when in a few weeks, his annual message to Congress shall be made public. While he has said nothing publicly, his closest personal friends have left the impression upon those with whom they have talked that the President does not consider himself in any way responsible for the unexpected democratic defeat.

While few democrats of any prominence care to be personally quoted on the subject of the elections, every one with whom your correspondent has come in contact agrees that the greatest single source of democratic troubles has been the lack of harmony within the party which was so painfully apparent during the last session of Congress. The result of the election is merely an application of the proverb, "United we stand; divided we fall," and the lesson must be taken to heart and profited by if the party calculates to go into the campaign of '96 with a reasonable chance to win. "A house divided against itself must fall."

Senator Faulkner, Chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign committee, rises from the wreck to say a few words, which are both explanatory and wise. He says: "The history of politics will show that every landslide is the result of dissatisfaction, discontent and want of confidence of the members of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposite ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The results of this election when ascertained will, I am sure verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, who believe in the principles of the democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, economic legislation—the benefits of which have not yet developed--party dissentions, criminations and recriminations resulted in such apathy as to cause the stay-at-home vote to produce the surprising result That is my honest judgment. If we hope for success in '96 we should maintain with fearlessness and determinatian the attitude we assumed in '92; let the personal and party biekerings of the past bury their dead and unite in an earnest effort to to harmonize those differences which have so seriously effected our organization."

The returns from the elections was galling enough to democrats in Washington, but there was another thing connected therewith that was even more galling to democrats. That was, that some of the loudest cheers from the crowds which surrounded the newspaper bulletins with all the eagerness of a Presidential election, when the news was favorable to the republicans, came from the mouths of republicans who hold office under the democratic administration.

The friends of Reed, Harrison and McKinley are very much alarmed at the prominence of Morton as a Presidential candidate. They know that Tom Platt intended when he nominated Morton for governor of New York to push him for the Presidential nomination of his party, if he succeeded in getting him elected governor, and they know that Morton's barrel will be on tap at the next republican national convention, and they fear it.

The Washington democrats, who all belong to the never-say-die family, think they are playing in hard luck this week. They stood up under the election returns with all the stoicism with which in the past they have received a long string of national defeats, comforting themselves with the reflection, "We'll lick 'em next time," but they have heard something since that has caused not a few of them to use language not at all appropriate for an address to a Sunday School class. A few days ago a man born in Washington, and who has been a democrat all his life, was appointed postmaster, the term of the republican incumbent having expired. As he will be the first postmaster the local democrats have had since the war, it was perfectly natural that some of his democratic friends should entertain the hope of succeeding some of the numerous republican employees of the postoffice after the democratic postmaster takes hold, and just as natural that he should look forward with pleasure to appointing them. It may be imagined how they felt when informed that a new order, filtered through the republican adjunct known as the civil service commission, limited the patronage of the postmaster to the appointment of about 10 men.

CORRESPONENCE

The bells are ringing, the republicans are singing, hurrah for Knute Nelson in the morning.

Yes, the republicans have got everything, from Alpha to Omega; from the rising to the going down of the sun. The rest of the political parties have nothing left but an empty pocket and a clear conscience.

All a fellow will have to do now will be to hang his hat on a post out by the roadside and the republicans will come along and fill it with money.

Surely the year of jubilee has come. Light has broken in upon the Gentile world. Let us rejoice and be glad, knowing that better times draweth nigh.

Thou leadest thy people like a flock, by the hand of Moses and Aaron.

The democrats have enjoyed their trip up Salt River and never was in better health than now. They have no malaria and passengers and crew are all in fine spirits.

We shall look for a political reformation in this country soon, for the Amelekites have been overthrown and the armies of Israel have prevailed.

Last Saturday and Sunday was real winter weather in this neck of the woods.

The roads are not in very good condition for hauling heavy loads or pleasure riding.

B. R. Hoisington left yesterday morning for Washington to look up a good democrat country. He will be gone two or three weeks.

Rev. Copp has been repairing the Mrs. Batdorf property at Armstrong.

It is reported that James Personett is on the sick list.

Woman's Column.

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

The W. C. T. U. of the District of Columbia have passed resolutions highly recommending Mrs. Cleveland for her firm stand against drinking.

Forty-seven temperance organizations in Cleveland, O., including the Christian Endeavor and Epworth League societies, have formed a Cleveland Temperance Alliance.

The women of New Zealand, who have enjoyed complete suffrage now for over a year take an active interest in all political questions. They are anxious to secure as far as possible through legislation the wellbeing, happiness and morality of the race.

For two years past the W. C. T. U. of the Dominion of Canada have passed the following resolution, "Viewing with alarm the growing dislike to housework among young women, and the aversion to help in the care of children, so that from a want of knowledge of these important duties they are totally unfit for the discharge of the same: Resolved, That we, members of this convention, bring more prominently before mothers the duty of training their daughters in this most useful and honorable department of woman's life, that to be a noble wife and good mother is after all the crowning grace of woman." We commend it to the unions of the States as one which would be a help to our work if carried out.

The whole trend of civilization is away from capital punishment. Men still living can recall when there were more than a hundred capital crimes in England—among them being the shooting of a rabbit and the larceny of five shillings –and when for some of them the punishment was not merely death, but torture, followed by the official mangling of the body. Today there are but three or four capital crimes at most in any civilized country, and in many countries only a single one, namely, murder in the first degree. In this country several states have abolished capital punishment altogether. The real question at issue, therefore, is not whether this and all other civilized communities will ultimately give up capital punishment, but whether or not we are ready to do so here in New York at the present time. Even supposing it desirable to retain capital punishment for a time longer as the most severe example, would it not be well for New York to follow the example of Iowa and give the jury in a trial for murder in the first degree the option of fixing the penalty at death or at imprisonment for life? — Harper's Weekly.

The Abolition of Pauperism.

Articles on this subject appearing in various papers and magazines furnish food for thought, but leave one, at least such is our experience, confused and uncertain. We are not sure that pauperism can be abolished. We cannot abolish sickness or calamities which destroy property, and while these endure there will be people poor even to pauperism. A great deal, however, can be done in the direction of abolition.

To begin with, we can abolish the liquor traffic. The drinking of intoxicating liquor makes more paupers than any other one thing. Then we can abolish gambling. A great many families are poor because their earnings are spent at cards or in speculation. We may also abolish laziness. This will be almost accomplished when liquor and gambling are disposed of. The three are intimately associated. We may then give attention to dishonesty. Many paupers are so because their property has been stolen or taken by tricks of trade. The abolition of dishonesty would be a long step forward. Then we may abolish selfishness. A great many people are poor because they have no chance. They are oppressed. Their wages are kept low. They are not encouraged by help when they need it. Advantage is taken of them by those who are quicker and sharper, but who should be their natural allies.

Perhaps some will regard this as a large program. The liquor traffic, gambling, laziness, dishonesty and selfishness are not likely to yield without a fierce struggle. Certainly not. The struggle is now going on, and has been for a long time. It is the old conflict between right and wrong, between Christianity and the powers of evil. The contention of the church is to abolish, not poverty, but iniquity; but when iniquity is gone the question of poverty will be settled. When men act by the law of love; when sinful appetite, greed and selfishness are abolished, there will be so little pauperism that the poor, a few of whom we are always to have with us, will be rich in the sympathy and help of the many, and we will thank God that he has not left us without the stimulus to activity and the food for affection which their presence gives.--The Hearth and Presbyter.

Which will soften the heart of the cow."

CHARLES BRIGHAM, who was appointed a clerk in the mailing department of the Boston post office when Martin Van Buren had just entered upon his term as president of the United States, is still there, after fifty-six consecutive years of servive, bright, vigorous and looking fully ten years younger than the 80 that he has seen.

THE trans-Siberian railway, which is to be the longest in the world, has now been opened as far as Omsk, and one may go there from St. Petersburg, 2,200 miles, in less than five days. The difficulties encountered have been prodigious; and in draining a bog sixty miles wide engineers and men had to live in huts built on piles and accessible only in boats. Four thousand masks were bought to keep off the venomous mosquitoes.

MRS. YE, wife of the Corean charge d'affaires at Washington, came to the United States in company with the wife of the Corean minister, Pak Yung Chang, and for some time the two women were kept in seclusion. They have emancipated themselves, however, and now Mrs. Ye understands and speaks the English language, and can play on the piano, run a sewing machine and do lots of other things that American women are taught to do in childhood.

JOHN WALTER, of the London Times, who died a short time ago, was one of the most successful and influential newspaper men in the world. He controlled the London Times for forty-six years, this covering the era of invention and enterprise that has built up the modern newspaper; an era of great events in political history and of great achievements in journalism. Mr. Walter's name was associated with some of the greatest enterprises in the field of news gathering, and with some of the most notable improvements in the printing and handling of newspapers.

THERE are about 175,000 Indians outside the five civilized tribes and they earn about $1,000,000 a year from the United States government alone. Of this they receive about $250,000 for products of Indian industry. But Uncle Sam is not their best customer. They make nearly $1,000,000 a year from the sale of their products to others. And they earn a great deal besides by the transportation of freight and by day labor of various kinds. The government pays them $150,000 a year for cutting and banking logs. There is an Indian police which draws $100,000 a year from the public treasury.

IT is a remarkable fact that the deepest parts of the sea are in all cases very near the land. The deepest sounding known, 4,655 fathoms, or 27,930 feet, was obtained 110 miles from the Kurile islands; the next deepest, 4,561 fathoms, was found 70 miles north of Porto Rico. With a few exceptions like these the depth of the oceans, as far as now known, does not reach 4,000 fathoms, or 4 sea miles. The north Pacific has a mean depth of 2,500 fathoms, the south Pacific of 2,400, the Indian ocean of 2,000, and the Atlantic, by far the best investigated ocean, has a mean depth of 2,200.

BONDS TO BE ISSUED.

President Cleveland Wants the Gold Reserve Increased.

Fifty Million Dollars in Five Per Cents. Will Go to the Highest Bidder—President Thinks the National Credit Demands It.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—President Cleveland has practically given instructions to Secretary Carlisle to place $50,000,000 more United States bonds on the market to secure gold for the treasury and strengthen the government's credit. When the news was first given out in Wall street Saturday morning there seemed to be no reason to doubt its authenticity. The story was confirmed Monday morning. Secretary Carlisle has been opposed to another bond issue. He does not consider it necessary, at least, for the present, to preserve the government's credit. The president, however, thinks it absolutely essential to add $50,000,000 to the gold supply in the treasury and in this as on several former occasions Secretary Carlisle has promptly acquiesced in the president's policy. There is no personal difference between the president and Secretary Carlisle growing out of this disagreement on matters of party policy, it is said.

The Deficit Growing.

The gold reserve has been steadily but slowing increasing since August 10. Upon that date there was but $52,499,787 in gold coin in the treasury, while now there is nearly $62,000,000, an increase of $553,275 since October 31. At the same time the actual excess of expenditures over receipts for the fiscal year amounts to $18,940,642, and the deficit is constantly increasing. During the last ten days expenditures exceeded the receipts nearly $4,000,000.

Can't Depend on Congress.

Now there is little probability that congress will be asked to enact any legislation to authorize the issuance of 3 per cent. bonds, because the experience of the administration has been that congress is too widely divided upon all questions of finance to pass any bills likely to afford immediate relief. Secretary Carlisle will, therefore, be forced again to issue 5 per cent. bonds under the law of 1874, and sell them at a premium, so as to bring the actual rate of interest down to 3 per cent., or as low as possible.

Will Be Issued at Once.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—According to good authority the government loan will be issued as soon as the details are perfected and the circulars are printed, probably Wednesday morning. The issue will be $50,000,000 of 5 per cent. bonds redeemable in ten years, and no upset price will be fixed by the government. Assurances have been received by the leaders in the movement which warrants the assertion that the issue will be largely oversubscribed and bids will be on a trifle better basis than 3 per cent.

VETERANS PROMOTED.

Brig. Gen. McCook Made Major General—Col. Forsyth a Brigadier.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Brig. Gen. Alexander McDowell McCook has been appointed major general of the United States army, vice Gen. Howard, retired, and Col. James W. Forsyth, of the Seventh cavalry, has been promoted to brigadier general to succeed McCook.

Maj. Gen. McCook will continue in command of the department of Colorado, with headquarters at Denver, until his retirement next April. The president has made the following assignment of general officers of the army:

Maj. Gen. Miles, department of the east, with headquarters at New York.

Brig. Gen. John R. Brooke, department of Dakota, with headquarters at St. Paul.

CARNEGIE SUED.

Victim of Homestead Poisoners Will Try to Get Damages.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Nov. 14.—H. J. Bird has entered suit against the Carnegie Steel company for $30,000 damages. Bird was brought here during the strike from Chattanooga, Tenn., by the Carnegie company. He boarded at restaurant No 2 and was poisoned by some of the food, for poisoning which Master Workman Hugh Dempsey, of the Knights of Labor, and others are now serving time in the penitentiary. Bird has been ill ever since. Last April he was discharged on account of his ill health, for which he holds the Carnegie company responsible.

BOMBARDED BY JAPS.

Chinese Surrender Port Arthur with Little Resistance.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—A dispatch received here from Shanghai says that the Japanese captured Port Arthur Sunday morning, after meeting with a feeble resistance on the part of the Chinese. Port Arthur was bombarded previous to its surrender. The Chinese laid down their arms and yielded themselves prisoners of war. The Chinese commanding officers abandoned Port Arthur during the night of November 6. It is reported that some of the representatives of foreign powers will start for Peking immediately.

HEMMED IN.

Forest Fires Raging on Three Sides of the City of Memphis.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 13.—There is no relief from the forest fires over in Arkansas, but on the other hand fires have broken out in North Mississippi on an even more extensive scale than those in Arkansas, and now the entire Yazoo delta is threatened with the flames. Memphis is hemmed in on three sides by vast fires, and it is impossible to enter the city by any road without passing through mile after mile of heat and smoke.

BANDITS ROB A BANK.

One of Them Shot by the Cashier and Killed by His Pals.

SALINA, Kan., Nov. 13.—Three masked robbers attempted to hold up the bank at Sylvan Grove, Kan., 40 miles west of here, at noon Monday, and one of their number met death in an unusually tragic manner. He was shot by the cashier of the bank, John Calene, and when in a dying condition was perforated with bullets by his own comrades to save themselves from exposure.

EFFECT ON TRADE.

More Activity Looked For, Now That the Elections Are Over.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

"Business has been waiting the greater part of the week, and the elections are expected to give it a sharp stimulus. Whether men are right or wrong in expecting better things, the fact that they expect them does tend to make things better. Thus a larger volume of trade might be anticipated, although no present events can alter the size of the corn crop, nor make the demand for wheat or cotton closer to the supply. Neither can the election returns alter the tariff, and if any industry is affected by it, favorably or unfavorably, the situation is exactly the same as it was before the people voted, at least for some time to come. But it is fair to infer that further modifications of the tariff are rendered less probable by the elections of Tuesday.

"In the speculative markets there has been scarcely any movement, and nothing favorable to holders. Wheat is 2 cents higher, but there is little encouragement, because stocks in sight are far beyond all previous records. Corn has fallen about 2 cents. Cotton declined an eighth to 5⅝ cents, which is again the lowest price ever recorded, and appears to mean a definite decrease in production hereafter, as in most of the southern states the prices now realized are not remunerative. For the present the stocks here and abroad are large enough to kill any speculation.

"There is a decided improvement in the tone of the iron market, and a general confidence that the business will now improve. The boot and shoe manufacturers have been doing relatively as well as usual, though the season is about over and the orders running into the future are, as hitherto, almost exclusively for goods of the cheaper grades. No change in prices has been noted, although manufacturers still complain that present prices of shoes and boots are not remunerative with current prices for leather.

"Scarcely anything is doing in woolen goods for spring delivery and the demand for fall and winter goods has nearly disappeared. In general it is believed that the spring orders thus far are not more than half the usual quantity. There is no speculative buying and manufacturers are purchasing only for their immediate needs, so that the prices, though averaging about a quarter of a cent lower than a month ago, show no tendency as yet to improve.

"Reports of failures are on the whole encouraging in comparison with last year, and yet the volume of liabilities is larger for the season than in any year of ordinary prosperity. The aggregate in five weeks ending November 1 has been $10,690,437, of which $4,386,575 were of manufacturing and $6,303,862 of trading concerns. The failures during the past week have been 261 in the United States, against 358 last year, and 42 in Canada, against 37 last year."

POLICY OF NICHOLAS.

He Will Not Deviate from That of His Imperial Predecessor.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 14.—On Friday last M. de Giers, the foreign minister, sent a circular to the Russian representatives abroad declaring that Czar Nicholas was firmly resolved to follow in his father's footsteps and to devote his whole strength to the internal welfare of the country, never deviating from the pacific, loyal and firm policy which had hitherto so greatly contributed to the general peace. Russia, the circular adds, will maintain her friendly relations with all the powers and will regard respect for law and order as the surest guarantee of the tranquillity of the state.

The imperial party and others accompanying the body have noticed the remarkable change which has taken place in the temperature since they left the Crimea. There the air was balmy and the roses were to be seen on all sides in full bloom, but as the cortege proceeded northward the weather became colder until in this city the temperature is 2 degrees below zero.

The route of the funeral procession at St. Petersburg to-day, from the railroad station to the fortress, is 5 miles long, and it is estimated that it will take four hours and a half in marching from the depot to the fortress. Twenty thousand troops will line the street through which the funeral will pass and 16,000 troops in addition will form the escort.

SCHAEFER WINS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The billiard match between Jacob Schaefer and Frank Ives was begun Monday night at the Madison Square Garden concert hall. The men are to play the 14-inch balk line game, anchor shot barred, for six nights, 600 points each night. Schaefer won the game after seventeen innings' play, by a score of 600 to 568. In the sixteenth inning the score stood: Schaefer, 471; Ives, 568. Schaefer then went in and scored 129 points, running out the game. Schaefer's average, 35 5-17; Ives' for sixteen innings, 35¼. High runs—Schaefer, 129, Ives, 153.

REPORTED MASSACRE OF 3,000.

Armenian Women and Children Said to Be Slain in Turkish Armenia.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—A dispatch to the Daily News from Constantinople says that 3,000 Armenians, including women and children, are reported to have been massacred in the Sassoun region near Moosh, Turkish Armenia, during a recent attack by Kurds. Twenty-five villages were destroyed. The Turkish officials declare that the report is not true and that it grew out of the suppression of a small rising in the region in quetsion. The British ambassador is making inquiries into the matter.

TRAIN HELD UP.

Two Masked Men Rob the Express Car Near Monette, Mo.

MONETTE, Mo., Nov. 13.—'Frisco passenger train No. 1, due here at 8 o'clock Monday morning, was held up 4 miles east of Monette by two masked men and the express car was robbed. The amount secured is not known, but it is several hundred dollars, including all local money between Springfield and this place.

BROKE A BOTTLE.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13.—The big steamer St. Louis was launched at 1:02 o'clock p. m. on Monday. The launching of the magnificent steamship at Cramp's shipyards was a success. The affair was witnessed by fully 50,000 people. Mrs. Cleveland, wife of the president, broke the traditional bottle of champagne on the bow of the noble ship as it glided down the ways, at the same time uttering these words: "I christen thee St. Louis."

Three Workmen Killed.

HUNTINGTON, Ind., Nov. 12.—Norton Keefer, John Flynn and John Hartman were thawing dynamite on the bank of the sewer on First street when the dynamite exploded. Keefer was blown literally to pieces and Flynn and Hartman lived but an hour or two. Buildings on either side of the street for a square were wrecked, doors and windows were crushed in, weather boards and the plastering torn off and furniture torn to pieces, inmates were stunned and some are prostrated. The damage to property cannot be calculated.

THE POSTAL SERVICE.

Information Furnished by the First Assistant Postmaster General.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—First Assistant Postmaster General Frank H. Jones, of Illinois, who has supervision of the divisions of salaries and allowances, free delivery, post office supplies, money order system, dead letter office and correspondence, has submitted his annual report for the year ended June 20 last to the postmaster general. The report is a very interesting one and covers the most important branches of the service. Mr. Jones reviews his recommendation of last year as to the growing evil of boycotting of post offices. He says:

"The compensation of postmasters at post offices of the fourth class consists mainly of the cancellation of postage stamps upon matter actually mailed at their offices. In many cases, owing to political differences, selfish motives of storekeepers, petty jealousies or personal feeling from other causes, the compensation of postmasters is serious curtailed by collecting and mailing letters on the cars, or sending them to an adjoining post office for mailing, thereby depriving the fourth-class postmaster of his cancellations, and consequently reducing his salary and depriving first and second-class postmasters of their sale of stamps, thereby reducing the receipts and office allowances. This is carried to a grievous extent in some communities, and is such an interference with the usual and regular disposition of the mails as in my judgment calls for legislation by congress."

The report shows the total allowance for clerks hire to have been $8,970,331, and $5,719,900 on account of salaries to postmasters at presidential offices, of which there were 3,402. The gross receipts of those offices was $58,685,025 for the year. New York has the largest number of post offices of any state, leading with 286, and Pennsylvania second with 248. Sixteen million dollars were appropriated on account of the postmasters' salaries this year, and Mr. Jones estimates that $16,500,000 will be sufficient for the next fiscal year.

Mr. Jones suggests that the experimental free delivery in towns and villages be discontinued at the close of the current fiscal year. He says the proposed system of rural free delivery would result in an additional cost to the government of about $20,000 for the first year, and he is not in favor of the scheme.

GHERARDI RETIRES.

The Gallant Admiral Leaves the Active Service—His Career in the Navy.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—To-day at noon there will be placed on the retired list the commandant of the New York navy yard, Admiral Bancroft Gherardi, one of the few old war commanders now in the naval service, and known in naval parlance as the "Sea-going Admiral." He leaves behind him a career of distinction, full of hard fighting and severe service and without a blemish. His total active service amounts to forty-eight years and five months, and twenty-five years and eight months of that service were spent at sea.

UNCLE SAM IS WILLING.

To Undertake the Offices of Arbiter in the Oriental Dispute.

TOKIO, Nov. 13.—United States Minister Dun has communicated to the ministry the substance of an important cipher cable proposition received from Secretary Gresham at Washington. It suggests that if Japan will join China in requesting the president of the United States to act as mediator in settling the war he will exercise his good offices in that capacity. A similar proposition has been sent to China. The cable was received by Minister Dun on Friday, and was presented to a special meeting of the ministry. An answer has not yet been sent. It is learned that four days ago France made a proposition to the United States to intervene.

HIS CAREER ENDS.

Death, After a Brief Illness, of State Treasurer Ramsay, of Illinois.

CARLYLE, Ill., Nov. 14.—Hon. Rufus N. Ramsay, treasurer of the state of Illinois, died at his home in this city Sunday morning. Mr. Ramsay was taken suddenly ill Wednesday afternoon, but was not confined to his bed till Thursday. His condition was not thought to be serious until Friday night, when his malady developed into erysipelas, complicated with heart trouble. At 5 o'clock Sunday morning Mr. Ramsay complained that the room was too warm, requesting that a window be partially lowered. Directly afterward he arose to a sitting posture and immediately sank to his pillow. Death occurred at 5:15 a. m.

WORK FOR THOUSANDS.

Big Silk Mills in Connecticut to Resume Operations.

ROCKVILLE, Conn., Nov. 12.—Cheney Bros., the big silk manufacturers of South Manchester, announced Saturday that they would to-day start a number of important departments of their mills on full time. The throwing, winding, warping and velvet weaving departments start on full time and all other departments in the mills will begin running fifty hours per week, instead of forty-eight hours. All departments will soon be running full time. The mill employs 2,500 hands.

At Anarchy's Grave.

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—Fifteen hundred anarchists went out to Waldheim Sunday afternoon to attend a demonstration in memory of Spies, Parsons, Fischer, Lingg and Engel who were executed for the part which they took in the Haymarket riot. Herr Most addressed the assemblage.

Killed at a Jollification Meeting.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Nov. 13.—At a jollification meeting over the election near Cove Gap Alvin Dargin was killed by John Martin. The latter was arrested.

A BISHOP'S BAD NIGHT.

Popped Into a "Spare Bed" in Which Silver Was Stored.

An eminent bishop who was quartered in the house of the wealthiest resident in a certain village, while his host's wife was away, occupied the "spare bed." He is a thin man, and when his host inquired in the morning how he had slept and hoped he had passed an agreeable night, he answered, with some vehemence: "No, I did not; I passed a very disagreeable night, indeed."

The bishop departed, and when the wife of his host returned she naturally inquired who had been in the house in her absence.

"Bishop P——," said the husband.

"Bishop P——! Where did you put him to sleep?"

"In the spare bed, of course."

"In the spare bed!" shrieked the horrified matron. "Why, I put all the silver under the mattress before I went away."

"WHEN I WAS A GIRL."

Aunt Clarissa wears her snow-white hair
In the fashion of long ago,
With three little curls each side of her face,
Arranged in a spiral row.
But she looks askance at my frizzy bangs
When their fluffy kinks unfurl,
And mutters, with disapproving air:
"La! me, when I was a girl!"

She gowns herself in a skimpy frock
That is fearfully short in the waist,
But opens her eyes at my high-cut sleeves,
And thinks them devoid of taste.
It fairly gives me a fit of the blues,
And sets my head in a whirl,
When she arches her brows and says with scorn:
"La! me, when I was a girl!"

You'd think the girls in Aunt Clarissa's time
Were angels from top to toe,
To hear how grimly she lectures me
When I chance to mention a beau.
And if I just venture to speak of love,
Her lips take an upward curl,
And she says, in a prim and prudish way:
"La! me, when I was a girl!"

But I found her reading a letter once;
It was tied with a ribbon blue;
The writing was dim and blurred by time,
But I know 'twas a billet doux,
For I saw a flush on her faded cheek,
Half hid by the spiral curl,
And I heard her murmur, in accents low:
"La! me, when I was a girl!"

A QUESTION IN ETIQUETTE

BY RICHARD HAMILTON POTTS.

Rows of aristocratic-looking houses to the right of me, a park to the left of me; a lunch-party four long blocks ahead of me, my home, in the far distance, behind me; a cloudy sky, from which descends a fine, but steady sprinkle, above me—I wish I could add, and an umbrella—a damp, and rapidly growing sloppy pavement beneath me; no possible car or omnibus, no cab-stand. Oh, for a plebeian street, with its multitude of conveniences! But my mind refuses to grasp the bliss therein conveyed. It flies, instead, to the feathers on my hat, the velvet on my gown.

I had left my home rather hurriedly, and, deceived by a hypocritical little ray of sunshine, had been lured forth to find myself in this plight. Of course I could mount the steps of one of the irreproachable houses that line my path; but there I should be tied, and the rain would only increase, and I should late for the luncheon. No, it is impossible.

I quicken my steps. I have proceeded to the crossing; the drizzle is maturing into well-defined drops that come faster and faster. Despair has me in his fell grasp. I see my pet costume a bedraggled and ruined wreck. I reflect on the state of my finances, which precludes the possibility of my rising above cashmere—nay, even serge—again this winter. I give my skirts a vigorous hitch that would lead one to forget my ankles and reflect on my knees, and make a forward lunge more remarkable for its desperate energy than its grace.

"Er—pardon me," says a manly voice, a trifle hesitatingly, at my elbow.

I start violently and my skirts seek their proper level. A large umbrella is sheltering me; the rain no longer patters among the feathers that crown my head.

"Allow me to share my umbrella with you. I see that you are without one," adds the manly voice.

"Oh, thank you," I say, as I recover somewhat, and gather, from the owner's general appearance, that he is a gentleman and, in all probability, means his protection in kindness and not as a means to getting up a flirtation. Perhaps I ought to refuse his aid, politely and graciously, of course, with the simple remark that I have not far to go and so shall not require his assistance. Maybe I should draw myself up, in the approved insulted maidenhood style, and say:

"Sir! I thank you, but I can get along very well by myself."

If he looked a trifle less respectful and gentlemanly I think I would sacrifice Mme. Boland's latest, and as yet unpaid for, effort in my behalf; but I am sure he is not going to say anything the most prudish could object to. At any rate my situation, until now, has been really pathetic; so I shall try obeying my own instinct, and if I have cause to regret it I shall know better in future, and the experience will not hurt me.

We have traversed a block in silence. He walks by my side, perfectly grave and quiet, and only seems to glance in my direction to see that I am well protected. I am thankful that I took his offer the way it was meant, and did not give him reason to regret his generous impulse. On we pace, and there enters my mind the quotation:

"Thou art so near and yet so far."

But, seriously, he certainly is very nice not to try to get up a conversation which would only make me thoroughly stiff and uncomfortable. I can just hear an ordinary man beginning: "It's a damp day;" or, "Pretty wet, isn't it?" or "Have you far to go, miss?" or addressing some equally commonplace sentence to me.

It seems strange, though, to walk along so close to anyone and not utter a word. I wonder if I ought to speak; but no, he appreciates my position. What could I say, anyway? I will thank him when we separate, and that is all I can do. I may not be gracious enough, considering his politeness, but how can one be gracious to a stranger? Oh, for a surreptitious peep at a book on etiquette!

Instead, I take a quick look at him. He is very frank looking, and he has straightforward, steady, brown eyes, as I discovered in my first startled glance at him. Altogether, it would have been impossible to have snubbed him. Perhaps I am a little shaky in my conviction, and I am trying to justify myself, but—

Here I stumble (thanks to my vanity in wearing French heels, which did make me a trifle unsteady), and should fall were it not for his quick assistance.

"Thanks," I murmur, with my cheeks burning. My eyes meet his, and a pause ensues; but then a pause has been ensuing ever since we met—or—that is—came together.

"I hope I am not taking you out of your way," I add, with a happy inspiration.

"Not at all," he rejoins, earnestly. "I trust you will allow me to see you to your destination."

"You are very kind. I am going to nine hundred and twenty-seven on this street, so we are nearly there."

In another moment we have reached the door, and I look up at him gratefully, and say:

"I thank you very, very much."

"Pray do not mention it," he answers, as he raises his hat; and bowing with a charming smile he turns and runs lightly down the steps.

Lunch is nearly over, and I have been unusually silent and distrait. Even the announcement of a new engagement has failed to arouse me to more than momentary interest.

Did I do right to accept half that umbrella? or should I have declined it courteously, but conclusively? Of course, no man could pass by a girl who was in such a fix as I without some slight compunction, particularly if it were so evidently in his power to assist her. But, having made the proposition, would he not have felt more respect for me had it been politely refused? Or would he have thought me a prude, and regretted his chivalry?

"Er—yes, thank you, very chivalrous."

All the girls laugh, and I realize, with a start, that I have answered Lulu's simple request, if I would not have more ice cream, somewhat absent-mindedly, to put it mildly.

"You must be in love, Nathalie," laughs Lulu, and, like a simpering school miss, I blush, which makes me so angry that a further accession of color waves up to my forehead, and the conviction is strong within me that I resemble nothing more than a full-blown peony.

"Reflect on my appetite, and don't say I'm in love," I answer.

"Talking of being in love, you should see our handsome neighbor," said Lulu. "He is a young physician, but well known. Perhaps you have heard of him—Dr. Bernard Burke."

"Why, he is the doctor we are going to have if any of us are ill!" I exclaim. "Is he really nice looking?"

"Indeed, he is. I have been trying to develop some interesting disease ever since I first saw him," she replies. "And, by the way," she continues, "he generally passes here just about this time. Come to the window and watch for him, Nathalie, and I will wager you'll manage to get up some ailment within the week. The stakes to be soda water."

I jump up as she speaks, and make a rush for the window, closely followed by the rest of the girls. As I get half way across the room my high heels again fail me; my ankle turns, and I measure my length on the floor. The girls laugh, after the manner of girls. A tumble is to me generally a source of infinite mirth, and I cannot blame them for their merriment. I try to rise, but a sharp twinge of pain in my foot causes me to sink back with a groan. No doubt I turn pale, for the girls become sober and cluster around me anxiously. Every moment is agony, but when I am perfectly still it is not so bad. What is to be done? We consult anxiously.

"I shall send for Dr. Burke," declares Lulu, seriously. There is a burst of laughter, and even I smile.

"You owe me a debt of gratitude for this," I murmur, rather weakly, to Lulu.

I am beginning to feel faint and sick, and after I am helped to the sofa I lie back with my eyes closed, while Sue Dalton fans me, and May Bostwick runs for some salts.

"Here's the doctor," whispers Sue, at last in my ear. "Under other circumstances I could pity you more," she adds.

I open my eyes languidly and look up. Shades of my rainy morning's walk! It is my knight of the umbrella!

"And shall I be able to walk without a crutch this week?" I ask, anxiously.

It is a month since that never-to-be-forgotten luncheon at Lulu Bradley's and my foot is still in statu quo, as it were, although I can get around the house and am in the parlor, now, with Dr. Bernard Burke. It is the first time I have seen him alone, and we have never mentioned our rather unconventional walk.

"I am quite sure you will be out by Saturday. Perhaps you will still need a slight support—a cane or"—his eyes twinkle—"an umbrella."

We both laugh.

"Did you expect me to refuse your help that day? Tell me what you thought of me. But if you think I was brazen, do please gloss it over as much as you can."

"If I had thought it at all out of the way for you to accept my offer I never should have ventured to make it, for in that case I should have had no right," he replies; and I wonder that I never thought of that before.

"I should have been both disgusted and disappointed if you had declined my slight service," he continues. "I will tell you just how it was. I walked behind you for about a half-block, debating in my own mind what I should do. We were both going the same way, and I saw there was no shelter you could seek excepting a doorway, which involved tedious waiting, and would have been an impossibility if you had an engagement. To pass you seemed impossible, and to walk behind you, too selfish to be thought of for a moment.

"'If she takes my offer the way I mean it,' I thought, 'I shall respect her and admire her good sense. If she treats it as an impertinence it cannot hurt me, and it will not prove that my impulse ought to have been suppressed. Judging by the independent poise of her head I think she possesses judgment, and will be grateful to me.'

"I must acknowledge I felt some trepidation as I approached you, and I voted you, in schoolboy vernacular, 'a regular trump,' when, after a searching look from a pair of beautiful eyes, you smiled so sweetly and allowed me to hold my umbrella over you."

I glanced at the doctor.

"Was it not strange that we should have met again that very day?" I begin, hastily.

"I think it was fate," interrupts Dr. Burke, audaciously.

And then he goes on and says so much that I quite lose track of it all. But we agree wonderfully; and I have a great respect for—fate.—Demorest's Magazine.

Physiology and Pertness.

Mr. Veryfresh—I weigh one hundred and fifty-four pounds, and do you know that in a person of that size analysis has shown that there are ninety-six pounds of water, three pounds of albumen, less than one pound of pure glue, thirty-four and a half pounds of fat, eight and a half pounds phosphate of lime, one pound carbonate of lime, three ounces of sugar and starch, seven ounces of fluoride of calcium, six ounces phosphate of magnesia and a little salt. What do you think of that?

Miss Keene—I think it is all right except in this instance in the matter of the last item.—Detroit Free Press.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

State Officers.

The governor will have a large number of appointments to make in the next two years. The following is a list, with the present incumbents and the date of the expiration of their term of office:

Board of regents state university, successors to John Lind, '96; J. S. Pillsbury, '96; S. M. Emery, '95; Stephen Mahoney, '95.

State normal school board, W. S. Pattee, '95; John Cromb, '95; William E. Lee, '95.

State board corrections and charities, John H. Rich, '95; Geo. A. Brackett, '96; S. G. Smith, '96; Chris Amundson, '95.

State reform school, Alexander Jamison, '95; N. O. Werner, '96.

Minnesota reformatory, Henry Pochler, '92; H. S. Griswold, '96.

Trustees Minnesota soldiers' home, L. L. Baxter, '95; John R. Parshall, '95; L. A. Hancock, '96; Wm. P. Dunnington, '96; J. H. Upham, '95.

Fire inspectors of steam boilers.

Four surveyors general of logs and lumber.

Adjutant general.

State superintendent of public instruction.

State insurance commissioner.

Public examiner, the position now held by M. D. Kenyon.

Commissioner of labor statistics.

Dairy and food commissioner.

Three railroad and warehouse commissioners, who appoint a chief inspector of grain, who in turn has about 20 first class appointments. The present chief inspector is A. C. Clausen.

State oil inspector, the position now held by H. W. Foote.

Hypnotic Surgery.

A remarkable hypnotic surgery operation was performed at the University by Dr. H. A. Parkyn, of Toronto University, assisted by Dean Sudduth. The wife of a Minneapolis grocer had a tumor removed from under her left ear. For 21 years the neoplasm has been growing, but fear of drugs prevented its removal while the patient was under ordinary anaesthetic, and she continually grew worse. Under the hypnotic influence she suffered no pain whatever, and when the silken bandage was placed around the morbid swelling she did not know that the operation had been performed.

Overcrowded.

Secretary H. H. Hart, of the State Board Charities and Correction, returned from a visit to the Rochester insane asylum. Secretary Hart reports the institution in an overcrowded condition, there being 1,113 patients cared for there, when 1,000 patients is sufficient to fill it. The new brick administration building is nearing completion, and it will add greatly to the appearance of the institution. It is for accommodation of the officers alone, but the removing of the officers from the hospital proper will make room for the overcrowded patients in the sanitarium.

A Big Loss.

E. D. Baldwin, of Detroit, met with a heavy loss in Chicago last week. He owns a cattle ranch in Montana and last week he went to Chicago with a bunch of stock and sold them, receiving in payment seven $1,000 bills and one $500 bill. He received the money after banking hours and put it in an inside vest pocket—and soon took his train out of the city. But in some manner the greenbacks, when he came to look for them, had disappeared. He arrived home last Friday and his loss utterly prostrated him.

News in Brief.

The artesian well sunk by the Minneapolis General Electric Company, at its new plant opposite the Pilsbury A mill, in Minneapolis, is a great gusher. It flows at the rate of 50,000 gallons per hour, and is believed to be the largest flowing artesian well in the state. Some trouble was experienced in restraining the flow.

Karl G. Ramberg's store, at Rush City, was burglarized and about $40 in coin and jewelry secured. The burglars, two in number, made attempts to enter J. F. Ramberg's and Meyer & Colin's general stores, but were intercepted.

Mrs. Jane Wheeler, a widow at St. Paul, committed suicide by hanging. She had made several attempts before.

The Commercial Club, of St. Paul, has tendered the faculty and students of the state agricultural school at St. Anthony Park an invitation to a reception and social session at the club rooms. The date has not been set, but it will be late in November or early in December.

Abraham Traffi, a Fin, while walking on the county road, near Carlton, was shot by an unknown person, supposed to be a deer hunter, and died.

Secretary Hart says that the state institutions will require $150,000 less than two years ago for permanent improvements, and will apply to the coming legislature for that amount.

The deer hunters are finding plenty of sport near Little Falls. N. F. Revell, of the Travelers' Insurance company, in a few days shot five, one of them weighing 300 pounds.

Goodhue county's valuation is $10,400,333, an advance over last year of $220,000.

Mason, Lewis & Co., Chicago, have bought the Long Prairie waterworks bonds, paying 5 per cent premium for the issue, which was $10,000 in 20-year 6's.

Money has been raised at Hinckley for medals to Engineer Best and Conductor Campbell, of the Eastern Minnesota road, who carried 450 refugees from that place to Duluth at the time of the forest fires.

THE Columbia river was named after the Boston ship, Columbia, by her captain, Robert Gray, in 1788. The Spaniards called the stream Rio de St. Roque.

THE Brandywine took its name from a Dutch brandy distillery on its banks in the early days. The Dutch name for brandy is brand-wijn, or burnt wine.

THE oldest bank president in the United States is Daniel M. Spraber, of the Mohawk national bank of Fonda, N. Y., who has just celebrated his ninety-sixth birthday.

FASHION LETTER.

Materials, Colors and Designs of Late Models—Blouse Waists as Much the Rage as Ever.

[Special New York Correspondence.]

New London-made gowns show cloth, velvet and shepherd's check silk made in two ways: First, a skirt of Venetian cloth for example in street heliotrope; this is flaring bell fashion, and, accompanying it, fancy waist made of fawn color and heliotrope checked taffeta silk, with immense sleeves of the check, and folded collar, cuffs and belt of heliotrope velvet. Another model shows a gored skirt of dark green and gold shepherd's check, very full in the back, and silk lined throughout, with an interlining of fiber chamois about half its length. The hang of this skirt is very graceful and artistic. To be worn with it, is the nattiest of jackets of green velvet, the Queen Anne sleeves slashed, showing Vandyke puffs of the checked silk between. The lower portion of the jacket reaches about ten inches below the waist, and this is cut into oblong scallops of about equal length all around, each tab lined with the checked taffeta.

Immense sleeves appear on all the autumn and winter gowns, made for general quite as much as for special wear these, either in mutton leg or in Queen Anne fashion with a huge puff applied to a close fiting forearm. Very generally these puffs are of velvet, which, in color, contrasts vividly with that of the gowns they adorn. Dark claret colored or terra cotta velvet sleeves are on dresses of fawn color or mignonette green cloth, some of these elegant wool fabrics being perforated with crisp taffeta silk linings, the shade of the velvet sleeves, this silk showing through the fancy cut work of the cloth. Crimson and rich dahlia velvet sleeves and trimmings in loveliest shades appear on gowns of pale doe color, gray and almond color, and chestnut velvet sleeves complete dresses of pale golden brown, fawn and reseda green. Most of these dresses are made with a gored skirt gathered slightly all around the waist, plaited in the back and flaring considerably from the knees down. At the extreme skirt edge of dressy gowns, is a bias band of velvet matching the sleeves, edged with a tiny roll of fur likewise matching accessories used on the bodice.

Blouse waists are just as much the rage as ever, and blouse effects appear upon some of the richest-looking and most expensive dinner gowns and reception dresses of the season. Blouse fronts of chiffon or white lace appear on the bodices of superb bridal toilets, the chiffon often strapped from neck to belt with lengths of pearl passementerie. For making these waists to wear with skirts of elegant material is the new velours peluchs—a deep piled velvet which promises to be a very fashionable material this winter. A richer and more expensive novelty is the velours sillons with the deep rich pile shaved in zig-zag furrows producing a peculiar effect of high light and deep shadows with changing color. This is manufactured in light and dark colors, and is used for handsome evening cloaks as well as for accessories of gowns.

Many of the double-width woolen fabrics brought out this season show the effective, close, fleecy coloring, woven on the reverse side that makes them most appropriate for jackets and capes, with gowns of the same fabric but of far lighter grade. Some of the goods for genuine cold weather wear are thus fleece-woven, and as warm and durable as beaver cloth, yet extremely light and pliable, and of the purest dye. Silks of every color, quality and design are the height of style both for demi-dress as well as full-dress toilets. The quality and coloring of some of the taffetas, watered silks and fancy satins are most tempting and lovely, some of the narrower widths being as low in price as sixty cents a yard. These silks are used also for tea gowns, fancy waists and linings to jackets and capes of velvet.

ROYAL Baking Powder

Absolutely pure.

Highest of all in Leavening Strength. —U.S. Govt. Food Report.

The official report shows Royal Baking Powder chemically pure, yielding 160 cubic inches of leavening gas per ounce of powder, which was greatly in excess of all others and more than 40 per cent. above the average.

Hence Royal Baking Powder makes the lightest, sweetest and most wholesome food.

—James Payn tells an amusing story concerning a well-known club in Pall Mall: "A member lost his umbrella there, and caused the following notice to be put up in the entrance hall: 'A nobleman who took away an umbrella not his own on such a date is requested to return it.' The house committee took umbrage at this statement; and summoned the member who had composed it before them. 'Why, sir, they said, 'should you suppose that a nobleman had taken your umbrella?' 'Well,' he replied, 'the first article the club rules says that this club is composed of noblemen and gentlemen, and, since the person who stole my umbrella could not have been a gentleman, he must have been a nobleman.'"

Hypochondrical, despondent, nervous, "tired out" men—those who suffer from backache, weariness, loss of energy, impaired memory, dizziness, melancholy and discouragement, the result of exhausting diseases, or drains upon the system, excesses, or abuses, bad habits, or early vices, are treated through correspondence at their homes, with uniform success, by the Specialists of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. A book of 136 large pages, devoted to the consideration of the maladies above hinted at, may be had, mailed securely sealed from observation, in a plain envelope, by sending 10 cents in one-cent stamps (for postage on Book), to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, at the above mentioned Hotel. For more than a quarter of a century, physicians connected with this widely celebrated Institution, have made the treatment of the delicate diseases above referred to, their sole study and practice. Thousands, have consulted them. This vast experience has naturally resulted in improved methods and means of cure.

Grape Preserve.

Grapes are good in season and out; that is, they are delicious when preserved, and now is the time for putting them up. In preparing grape preserve a tender-skinned grape should be used. The Concord grape is too tough-skinned to make a satisfactory preserve. Squeeze the pulp out of the skin, and after putting it in the preserving kettle set it on the fire. Stir frequently and cook until the pulp will break up readily. This will require only a few minutes' boiling. Rub the pulp through a sieve, rejecting the seeds. Measure the skins and pulp and put them in the preserving kettle. For every quart of the fruit add one pint and a half of sugar and one gill of water. Cook for twenty minutes after the preserve begins to boil; then put in jars and seal. If you choose, use less sugar, or, if you prefer to have the preserve sweeter, allow a pound of sugar for each pound of fruit.—N. Y. World.

The Heathen Chinee

Is not a beauty. No more are you when your complexion has an orange tint. That means that you are bilious, a fact further evinced by discomfort on the right side, sick headache, vertigo, nausea and furred tongue. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will take the bile out of your blood, regulate your bowels, set your stomach in good working order—in two words, cure you. Use it and cease to be yellow. It cures malarial, rheumatic and kidney trouble.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

We Pay for Ideas

We need TWENTY or MORE original and striking designs for Newspaper Advertisements of SANTA CLAUS SOAP. The manufacturers, The N. K. Fairbank Company, authorize us to pay TEN DOLLARS EACH for approved drawings with appropriate reading; or $5.00 each for designs or reading matter only. This offer is open to all. The competition will close December 1. As soon as possible after that date we will pay for accepted designs and return the others. Remember, for complete, acceptable advertisements we pay

$10 Each

Directions.—Make drawings with black ink on heavy white paper, or card board. Do the work in outline. Elaborate shading will not print well. Space in papers will be four inches square. Draw to larger scale if you prefer, but have design square. The idea is most important. If that is good we can have it redrawn and still give you credit. Avoid poetry. Get up an ad. that would make you buy the article.

Points.—Santa Claus is a pure, high-grade Soap—made for laundry and general household use—a favorite wherever known. Merits generous praise. Sold by all grocers, wholesale and retail.

Do your best, and send results promptly. Address (only)

--The Eagle is again on the scent of some mischievous boys. She has a great deal ta say about the boys but about the men who set the example she never says "boo".

—The account of the Sedalia school house fire in another column, makes one think about our new school house with but one door for the pupils to get out at in case of such an accident.

—The Samsel bridge has been completed and accepted and is now ready for travel. It cost $2900, the town of Franklin paying, with the approach, about $500. It is said to be considerably lighter than the Delano bridge.

—Neighbor Buckley now believes if he never did before that gas will hurt people. On Saturday evening their chimney being too low caught too much wind the coal gas came out in the room and made the family feel quite bad.

—Negotiations are on foot between the village authorities and the G. N. R. R. company for supplying the R. R. tank with city water. If a bargain is made this will deprive Dad Gast of his job and help the village meet expenses; provided it pays.

—Cordwood seems to be in fair demand since the thermometer commenced dallying around below freezing point. The prices though are quite reasonable to the purchaser, while those who have to sell are hardly satisfied that they are getting enough for their trouble.

—On Sunday Mr. and Mrs. John F. Powers celebrated the 60th anniversary of their wedding; having journeyed through life as man and wife for a longer period than is the lot of most folks. They were given a dinner by their son-in-law, J. D. Young, at Young's Hotel. Several persons from out of town made a part of the guests; among them John Sleight and family, of Rockford.

—C. J. Buckley has invented and applied for a patent for a printing press for printing paper and rolling it up. It is a very ingenious machine and may make a fortune for our neighbor. He has had a small one made in Minneapolis and now has it in use at the Eagle office. He expects to have a larger one made soon and then he can grind out wrapping paper printing in rolls as fast as the fastest.

—A few only came out on Saturday evening to assist in organizing a literary society. A dance was held in the hall and a meeting of the Board of Education in the council room so there was hardly a chance to get together and effect an organization. So nothing was done. It is to be hoped that in the near future better success will crown the efforts of our young folks and others interested in having one night in the week for mental enjoyment and improvement.

—Rev. J. W. Powell read the North American Review article by Archbishop Ireland, on Sunday evening to a fair sized audience. The Archbishop says the American saloon is a great evil and must go; and Rev. Powell says "Amen!" as loud as he can. It begins to look, when the churches unite in earnest against the liquor traffic as carried on in our land today, as if they may accomplish something soon. Rev. Powell says it took the Methodist church a hundred years to purge itself of the saloon and the saloon element; and predicts that with the assistance of other churches the Catholic church can get rid of her saloons and drunkards in 25 years.

Mrs. J. D. Young returned Tuesday evening from a prolonged visit with friends in Minneapolis, Misses Carrie Bremner and Mary Swadner, of Minneapolis, came up to visit Delano friends this week.

John McGary, President of the Delano Washington's Birthday Association, was a GAZETTE caller yesterday.

Mrs. Gleeson visited Minneapolis friends on Wednesday last week and attended Fannie O'Leary's wedding.

Letter From Culkin.

BUFFALO, Minnnesota.
November, 13, 1894.

To T. J. Catlin,
Delano, Minnesota.

Sir:—In the BUFFALO GAZETTE, a weekly newspaper, printed, edited, and published by you at Delano, Wright County, Minnesota, you printed, published and circulated in the issue of said paper published on Friday, November 2nd, 1894 the following matter to wit:

SENTORIAL CANDIDATES COMPARED.

EDITOR GAZETTE:—I would ask space in your paper for comparison of a few points between our two candidates for State Senator:

David Murdock is the Democratic nominee; his character as a man stands so high that the Populists and even the Prohibitionists are supporting him. No one can find ought against him. His political opponent seeks to belittle him because he is a temperance man. We would like to ask the voters to decide before election day as to which man they want, the man whose character is unassailable and who is endorsed by honest people everywhere; or a man who, as county attorney, for $84, will allow a murderer discharged. For further information on this subject we would refer our readers to Bill Watson. We would prefer a man to make our laws who can do so for what the state pays him. MARTIN BLAND.

I specify as false, defamatory and libelous the following which refers to me and was by you intended to refer to me, to wit: "or a man who, as county "attorney, for $84, will allow a mur-"derer discharged. For further in-"formation on the subject we would "refer the readers to Bill Watson. We "would prefer a man to make our laws "who can do so for what the state pays "him."

I demand a full and fair retraction of said matter.

Yours truly,
WM. E. CULKIN.

Mailed Nov. 13, 1894
at Buffalo, Minn.

Answer.

DELANO, Minn., Nov. 14, 1894.

W. E. Culkin, Esq.,
Buffalo, Minn.

Dear Sir:--The article above referred to appeared as above stated. I did not comment on, nor mention the article in that issue. I considered Mr. Bland a responsible man; he claimed to be able to substantiate his statements; and as, if they were true the public was entitled to know them and he had a right to tell them, I puplished the article over his signature.

In the next issue of the GAZETTE I gave the points of your own statement, of the matter in so far as it bore upon the case, writing from memory of your conversation with me on the night of publication. The next day David Cochran was in town and on being asked told me that he defended Bill Watson, and that you was prosecuting attorney. I met Mr. H. C. Bull, of Cokato, on the train a few days ago and he said that Bill Watson was brought before him as Justice of the Peace, on a charge of assault with intent to kill, and I think he said, bound over to appear before the Grand Jury. I have heard for years that he was not punished. Personally I am not acquainted with Mr. Watson; don't know that I ever saw him; don't know how nor why he escaped punishment, further than what I have read and heard about it. If anyone else does I think they are entitled to be heard on the subject. I am not courting a libel suit; don't wish to libel anybody; nor see anyone else do so.

Yours Respectfully,
T. J. CATLIN.

Among Our Exchanges.

Maj. Baldwin is said to be a candidate for the surveyor generalship of the state. In the matter of political timber his judgment seems to have been a little at fault, but he may do better with pine.--Duluth News-Tribune.

Even the goddess of chance is against the democrats this year. Messrs. Stropp and Sanborn, of the first ward in this city, received an equal number of votes for alderman. They cast lots to decide the tie, and Mr. Stropp, Republican, won.—Brainerd Journal.

Judge Collins, who was opposed to Judge Willis, the fusion candidate, in the late election, received a total of 158,758 votes, or 17,192 more votes than Nelson. Now suppose that Becker had been out of the field and there had been fusion on Owen—is it not probable that Nelson's vote would have been fully as large as Collin's? That is to say, fusion would have increased Nelson's vote and given him a majority over all. Fusion does not fuse.—Minneapolis Tribune.

School Building in Flames.

Sedalia, Mo., Nov. 12.—The public school building at Windsor, Mo., was totally destroyed by fire at 1 o'clock this morning. It was an eight-room brick structure, valued at $20,000, and was insured for $5,000. The building was filled with 500 pupils at the time, many of whom had narrow escapes.

The fire started from the furnace in the basement and was well under way when discovered. The children were compelled to abandon all their wraps in the cloak rooms, as well as their books.

Walter Finks, a teacher, jumped from a second story window and was badly injured. May Barnum, a 13 year-old girl, ran into the burning building to secure her books. She was overcome with smoke and fell to the floor. One of the teachers rescued her.—Morning Call.

Notice.

Bids will be received by the Supervisors of the Town of Franklin up to November 24th, 1894, 12 o'clock noon in the Village of Delano, for the building of a bridge at a place known as Wright's Ford, on the South Fork of Crow River; Plans and Specification can be seen by applying to the undersigned. The sucessful bidder must be prepared to enter into bonds for the faithful performance of the contract. The Supervisors reserve the right to reject any or all bids. WM. ZIEBARTH,

BUFFALO GAZETTE $1.00.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied to the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tips, those traits which belong essentially to the gentler sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and it will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put it in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of the whole family.

THE Republican papers are kept busy now-a-days explaining why this and that candidate mentioned for Senator Washburn's shoes will, under no circumstances accept a nomination. Some of the excuses are rather amusing.

THE Northwestern Agriculturist deals not only in what farmers should work at to make a living but how they should vote, also. If their agricultural articles are as far from correct as some of their political articles they are an unsafe guide. A desertation on the recent landslide puts St. Cloud in Wright County.

THE Moorhead News of Oct. 25 was an illustrated boom edition of the town and its citizens. Moorhead should appreciate the efforts of Editor Lamphere, Foreman Tillotson and others who helped get up so fine a paper, advertising the place as did that number of the News. The beautiful half-tones of her school buildings and churches alone are sufficient to recommend the place as a desirable home.

MCKINLEY did his best to keep alive the "Protection to Home Industries" theory during the last campaign and, of course, expects to reap his reward in two years by being placed at the head of the ticket of the G. O. P. that has gone into power with such a rush as even to take along a part of the "Solid South". But Tom Reed has a weather eye on that candidacy himself. And Ben Harrison would not object to serving his country, at the White House, another term: while old Levi Morton has carried New York, the pivotal state, by such an overwhelming vote as to make some think the Empire State would surely vote for him for President and insure his election to that office.

QUITE a controversy is going on as to whether or not criminals electrocuted according to law in New York, are dead. Some have sought to make people believe that the knife of the surgeon who held the autopsy caused death. And now comes a man who has asked the Governor's permission to resuscitate the next one that dies in the chair. If there is any doubt about the man being dead why could he not be left in charge of those having fears for a reasonable length of time until all are satisfied? We don't believe the surgeons are anxious to become executioners and are as willing as anybody that the doubters be satisfied. If the electrician is so sure that electricity don't kill people he might sit in the chair for an instant and then allow his friends to resuscitate him, under directions he had previously given them.

NEIGHBOR STIVERS, of the Brainerd Journal, came out last week in a kind of post-mortem apology to the democrats of his district, for having, as chairman of the democratic legislative district convention, supported the fusion with the peoples party candidates. He claims that the fact that neither party alone could win was plain and the convention thought it best to try it together. He says, "Thus it appears that neither principle or expediency were ignored by the committee." We differ. When a fusion is made with a party which has different principles, it looks to us as if our flag was lowered, as if we gave up some principles. And certainly a party fusion opens wide the door to every individual voter to vote for whomsoever he sees fit. The party has forsaken its principles why should he try alone to stand by them. Nothing like making a straight fight on right principles. This way of trying to get office, with principles or without them, as some advocate, has no charm for the people. If a man sees fit, for a reason, to adopt the principles of another party he should do so, and not try to drag his old party into an ambush as the late election turned out to many fusionists.

WE would suggest to the anti-Washburn faction among our republican friends who are at a loss to settle on a candidate that the "woods are full of 'em." We now have a United States Senator from St. Paul and one from Minneapolis and the Minneapolis man's time expires soon. The St. Paul man has four years more to serve. To people living away from the cities mentioned it looks as if Senator Davis ought to be able to look after the interests of the "twins", alone; and that the balance of the family should have a little care from some one a little nearer to them than is the gentleman whose term is about to expire, and who has been sufficiently honored by having the position before, to step oneside and allow someone else a chance. The farming community in this great agricultural state would be glad to be represented in the Senate of the United States by a man from among them. By a man in touch with them and their interests; by a man not noted for the dollars he has; but who is eminently qualified to attend to the interests of this great state in the senate; by a man from one of the best farming counties in Minnesota, the County of Wright, and who, although for years making his home in the "big woods" at Buffalo, has kept posted on things political, and who would fill the position with honor to himself and the State. We refer to the Hon. A. Y. Eaton.

Early and Latter Tariff.

The time was in America when people had to depend on foreign lands to supply their wants and needs. No machinery being in this country many articles could not be made here. As people became more numerous, and skilled laborers from every land joined their numbers, they began to develop the country by making use of their surroundings. Men made simple machines to perform what labor was required for themselves, and families. Looms were built of wood, rude affairs; but sufficient to enable the women to weave the wool spun on home made wheels and the flax that was prepared by the most simple machinery, into clothing. Each family lived almost within itself, and could be told by the clothes they wore. After a while some grew possessed of enough to employ those who had become sufficiently skilled in the manipulation of the machines; or whose inventive genius had enabled them to invent better ones, thereby giving them an advantage so that they could turn out more work than needed by their own people. Thus trade was established, until some towns became so skilled as to do the manufacturing for a large area of country, and receiving in pay the necessaries of life raised by the agricultural part of the country.

In these early days everybody would naturally favor helping some poor man a little to send to the old country for a machine or to pay him for time taken in building one, so that they could get clothing. Nobody would object to this; no more than did they when the great rebellion was at its heigth to Abraham Lincoln turning out millions of dollars in greenbacks to carry on the war and save the union. It was a case of necessity. But thank God our people have lived through both these trying times and become a prosperous nation; they have multiplied in numbers, and improved their opportunities until the Yankee nation is proverbial for being able to make anything that can be made, and the machinery to make it with. They can not only supply home; but many things they can supply to foreign nations, better and cheaper than they can get them otherwise.

Why is it, we ask, that some are led to believe it is necessary to keep paying these manufacturers, who now count their wealth by the millions, bounties, in the way of tariff taxes on nearly every thing we use. They can live without it. They are in no more need of help than is the government of a new issue of greenbacks, certainly, and the very fellows that favor the one oppose the other in many instances.

The tariff of today is called for by wealthy corporations; by manufacturing firms who are wealthy, and instead of every time the tariff is hoisted up the workingman's wages goes up they are cut down, down, until the country has been filled with strikes and although for four years we have lived under the McKinley bill, the highest tariff known in our land, these bad things still exist.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 16, 1894.

Those republicans and popnlists who are trying so hard to make somebody think that they believe that the democratic party, as a national organization, is dead, are merely making themselves ridiculous. The democratic party, which, to go no further back than the memory of every middle aged man, made six unsuccessful Presidential campaigns—defeated in five at the polls and in one at the hands of an abortion known as the electoral commission, is not to be killed by dissentions among a few of its prominent members which resulted in a stay at home vote large enough to defeat it in a Congressional election. On the contrary, that defeat will eventually make the democratic party stronger than ever before, because it will result in showing some of the prominent experimenters that deviations from the established principles of the party will not be tolerated by the voters; that thousands, aye millions of good democrats will refuse to endorse any half-and-half principles, preferring defeat to compromise with principles they have been taught to oppose. The recent election was a bitter lesson, but the future will prove that it was a useful one.

President Cleveland is not spending much time at the White House just now, because the time is short between this and the assembling of Congress and his annual message to Cougress, which will be one of the most important to the country and to the democrat party he has ever written, requires his entire time, and he can work undisturbed at his country residence, something which experience has shown him he cannot do in his office at the White House. During his vacation the President devoted much time to studying the financial system of the country, which is generally admitted to be radically defective, and the result of that study will be shown in the recommendations of his message to Congress.

No democrat can possibly regret the issue of bonds, officially announced this week by Secretary Carlisle, more than does President Cleveland and the members of his cabinet, but in the face of the necessity for preserving the national credit, and in the absence of any other method, owing to the system inherited frem a long series of republican administrations, regrets were idle and action imperative. When a merchant finds his credit endangered, owing to his receipts being less than his expenditures, he cannot afford to waste time in regrets because those expenditures are largely the result of extravagant contracts made by his predecessor. His credit must be protected and nothing will do that but prompt payment of his obligations as they mature, and to do that he must have money and it can only be had by borrowing it on his note. That he does, trusting to his ability to stop the leaks in his business and make it profitable in order to pay it back. That is precisely the position of the administration in announcing an issue of bonds.

Senators Ransom and Gorman had a casual meeting and a friendly conversation in a committee room at the Capitol one day this week, and straightway a story was started that they had evolved a plan by which a democrat was to be elected at an extra session of the North Carolina legislature to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Vance, and Senator Ransom was to resign and be elected for a full term beginning March 4, 1895, at the same extra session. Verily, "The wicked fleeth when no man pursueth."

Secretary Herbert left Washington tonight for Mobile, Ala., where he goes to take part in the ceremonies attending the public reception by the citizens of Mobile in honor of the cruiser Montgomery, which is to be held next Monday. Secretary Smith has also gone South, but his errand is one of private business connected with the trial of an important lawsuit at Atlanta, in which he is one of the counsels.

A striking exhibition of fanaticism run wild is giver by the criticism of Mrs. Cleveland by members of the W. C. T. U., because she followed the usual custom and broke a bottle of champaign in christening the steamship St. Louis, launched at Philadelphia last Monday. The criticism is all the more senseless because Mrs. Cleveland is a consistent advocate of temperance, never drinking wine at her own or anyone else's table. In this case she was an invited guest and had no more to do with what was to be used at the christening than a guest would have to do with what was served on your table.

"General William Booth

of London England, founder and leader of the Salvation Army, will be in St. Paul and Minneapolis November 26th to 29th inclusive, and his visit will be the occasion of monster meetings and conferences of that organization. For the benefit of persons desiring to attend these meetings, the Great Northern R'y (or Eastern Minn. R'y, as the case may be) will make a rate of one fare and a third from points in Minnesota for the round trip, on the certificate plan, provided the combined attendance from all points by rail reaches 100 or more. Dates of sale, Nov. 24th to 29th. Limit for return, Dec. 1st.

A Famous Show of Beauty.

The show of distinguished beauty, transfixed by famous artists, which is now taking place at the Academy of fine arts in New York, has been anticipated by The Cosmopolitan Magazine in its November issue, in an article by Wm. A. Coffin, with illustrations of some of the more beautiful faces. The "Great Passions of History," series has for this month's subject the romatic career of Agnes Sorel, who influenced the destinies of France under Charles VII. "The Art Schools of America." "The Great British Northwest Territory," "The Chiefs of the American Press," and the "Public Library Movement," are amongst The Cosmopolitan table of contents. Survivors of the war and their children will find intense interest in "The Story of a Thousand," a personal narrative begun in this number by Albion W. Tourgee, who tells in a graphic way, of a regiment which saw fierce service—of its organization, its marches, its sports, and its death roll.

Woman's Column.

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

Women In Politics.

A singular change has come over the political atmosphere as far as women are concerned. For years a few determined spirits have been working through manifold discouragements and with almost overwhelming opposition arrayed against them for woman's right to vote. The advocates of this reform have been treated with contempt; they have been ridiculed and have been regarded as dangerous agitators. But with dauntless courage they persisted in their efforts and at last the tide began to turn. At the Woman's Congress of 1893 it began to appear that equal suffrage was growing popular. When the question was before the New York constitutional convention there was no longer any doubt of it. Fashionable women thronged to hear and discuss the question, and when defeat was acknowledged these same women declared their purpose to keep up their efforts to secure the ballot. Then we were edified by learning that even the conservative women of the south had been aroused to take a hand in politics, and the Ashland, Ky., fight is admitted to have been won for purity through the work done by the women.

In the struggle for municipal reform in Chicago, led by the civic federation, women have been prominent, but that was nothing to the whirlwind of enthusiasm that swept over Illinois when three political parties concluded to nominate women for candidates for trustees of the state university. Again the women of wealth and social influence were the leaders, and the contagion spread rapidly.

In the desperate resistance made in New York against the corruptions of Tammany, Dr. Parkhurst, who did not favor women voting, did not hesitate to call the women to his support, and as might be expected after such an awakening as they had just had, they did not delay but rallied in grand style to use their political influence, though denied the right to speak with authority.

The women of Omaha in large numbers gathered to support Mrs. Elia W. Peattie, one of the brightest women of their city, for member of the board of education.

Meanwhile the women of Colorado had been quietly, intelligently and carefully comparing candidates and making selections, preparatory to the exercise of the full and free privilege of franchise.

It would seem in view of all these facts that the time has forever passed when women can be ignored as a political factor, or counted out in plans for the world's progress.

That women have a deep sense of the responsibility involved and an intelligent purpose in thus advancing to the front at this particular time cannot be gainsaid.

Their broader education and business experiences during the past decade or two, have fitted them to step in when political corruption had reached such a point as to become intolerable to decent men, and bring to bear all the strength of moral purpose which their sex has been conserving during centuries.

Every advance toward liberty that woman has made has thrown some men and also some women into spasms of terror lest she lose her womanly charm, but contrary to these fears every advance has but intensified her charm as woman, while it has greatly increased her power of usefulness.

The time has come for conservative women to rouse themselves and keep abreast with the spirit of the times or they must be left hopelessly in the rear.

C. L. G.

Agreeing To Disagree.

It has always been one of the advantages of the W. C. T. U. that it has many departments of work, because in this way it reaches the evil from various directions and gives women of different tastes and abilities the opportunity to exercise these in a congenial way for the general good. Now exercise strengthens faculties, and constant work in behalf of any cause begets devotion to that cause. Ardent devotion and strong convictions beget intolerance, and intolerance is sure to cause divisions and strife. But there is a way to avoid this. The love which "seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil . . . beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things," if cultivated along with all the rest that we may do will help us to see the good in others, it will close our ears to the unkind criticisms which may be made regarding the work of others or our own, it will prompt us to say the encouraging word which may make a good worker out of an indifferent one, and above all it will keep us from an undue valuation of our own work; and when we differ from others, as we honestly must many times, this love will keep us from bitterness and we will be able to agree to disagree. It would be a thousand pities if we should all be obliged to work in the same harness, for it would not fit us all. It would be deplorable if we should all turn our attention to one department, for much that sadly needs doing would be neglected, but with our eyes on the one example of perfected humanity we can all strive in our various ways and by our various methods for the same thing, and though these ways and methods may sometimes seem contradictory, God knows how to bring good out of every bit of earnest work done in his name.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

My stock of news has run quite low since the election; not much to write about only the weather, but the republicans intend to improve the times and the weather prognosticators will fix up the weather. So we will soon be sailing on life's voyage again happy as the successful politician.

It seems we have got winter in dead earnest; thought it was only fooling at first; but guess it meant it.

There will be a two or three days meeting at the Advent church in Armstrong, commencing on Friday and holding over Sunday.

On Thursday the 14th inst., W. C. Batdorf, of Independence and Miss E. Sturman, of Franklin, were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sturman, in the south part of Franklin. The happy couple have located themselves at Armstrong, where they will be glad to see their friends at any time. May their voyage together through life be a happy and prosperous one.

If those democrat fellows are half as mean as some of the republicans tell about it will keep them going to confession all the time. One thing I can't quite understand, how it is all the good folks got into the republican party and all the mean people into the democrat party. I thought we were all made out of the same kind of clay but we read in the big book that he maketh one vessel to honor and another to dishonor and the democrat vessel must be to deshonor.

This winter Minnesota gets a Simonpure, unadulterated republican legislature. We shall expect much good legislation from you fellows this winter. The first thing in order will be to elect a United States Senator. Hope you will make a wise selection. We do not want any second growth timber for that place.

Think our code of laws, both church and state need to be revised; a new version is very much needed.

What has become of the prohibition vote this fall? Wright county only cast 78 votes for H. S. Hilleboe for governor on the prohibition ticket. Delano gave him one vote, town and village of Rockford, 6; village of Monticello, 3 and so on. This fall's election is an all wool republican election with high protection tied onto the tail end of it. Gentlemen, you got it all right and we will throw in Cleveland and fishing tackle in the bargain if you want them. We democrats want a western man for President and not a man from under the gas lights of Wall street. We think the rest of the United States bigger than the city of New York, and Wall Street, too.

J. H. MCGARY.

News Index.

Miss Willard has been re-elected President of the W. C. T. U.

The Western Passenger Association seems about to collapse.

An extension of the civil service rules is talked of. Postmasters are to be included.

General Booth, of Salvation Army fame, is to be in Minneapolis from the 26th to the 29th.

Sicily and Southern Italy have been shaken up by earthquakes. Many people were killed.

Grand Master Soverign has again been elected to preside over the destinies of the Knights of Labor.

The Pioneer Press wants the republican Congress to make the courts the judges of election instead of the House of Representatives acting as its own judge.

Some of the railroads that applied for troops to protect their property during the late strike are now sending in bills to the government for transportation of troops, it is said.

Chairman McDermott, of the State Central Committee wants governmental favoritism suppressed; party pledges redeemed; and the use of money to control elections adequately punished; all offices filled with people in sympathy with the administration; and freedom of traffic between every nation on the globe.

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.

Square Type.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in these developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the fair sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and it will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put a fin the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of the whole family.

THE sulphur match, while one of the greatest blessings of civilization, is a constant and generally unsuspected cause of mischief and injury. A fatal case of lockjaw, caused by the brimstone of a burning match touching a woman's foot, ought to serve as a warning to careless people who habitually throw away burning matches without regard to consequences. It is well known that many forest fires have been caused by sportsmen throwing away still burning matches. Ingenuity has not exhausted itself yet in devising a true safety match.

JAPAN possesses what is undoubtedly the oldest wooden structure in the world. It contains the art treasures of the mikado, and is situated at Nara, which for some years was the imperial residence. The building is oblong in shape and is built of triangular logs of wood. It rests on piles. # TEMPERANCE WOMEN.

National W. C. T. U. Holds Its Twenty-First Convention.

Cleveland, O., the Scene of the Notable Gathering—Standing of the Union—Delegates Occupy the City's Pulpits—Opposed to Vivisection.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 19.—The twenty-first annual convention of the National Women's Christian Temperance union met here Friday at Music hall. Representative women are present from every state and territory and from Canada. There were probably 500 delegates present and the hall was well filled with spectators, with the exception of the upper gallery.

Miss Willard's Address.

Interest in the opening session centered in the address of President Frances E. Willard, who ably reviewed the whole field of thought and action for women.

The address scintillated with bright thoughts and sayings. Miss Willard referred feelingly to the death of Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, of Chicago, corresponding secretary of the society, and to the loss of other good workers in the cause during the last year.

Reports of Officers.

The annual report of Mrs. Helen M. Barker, treasurer, showed receipts: Dues, $14,704.99; other contributions, $11,314.26. Total, $26,019.25. Disbursements, $20,338.07. Balance in treasury, $5,681.18. There are no outstanding bills. The receipts of the year were in excess of several previous years, and the dues showed an increase in paid-up memberships over last year.

The annual report of the late Mrs. Mary E. Woodbridge, who was for many years corresponding secretary, and which she had prepared prior to her sudden illness and death, and which was read by Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, set forth that the organization had over 1,000,000 on members on its rolls and is organized in forty-eight nations.

At the afternoon session the convention discussed the relations of health and heredity and sanitary and economic cookery to the battle against intemperance, and reports were made from each of the departments of the educational group concerning the growth of total abstinence habits and sentiments.

Women in the Pulpits.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 20.—From nearly every pulpit in this city Sunday the voice of an earnest woman was raised in the cause of temperance. The local ministers almost without exception allowed their pulpits to be occupied by delegates and visitors to the convention of the W. C. T. U. The congregations were large.

In the afternoon at Music hall an evangelistic meeting was conducted by Miss F. W. Greenwood, evangelistic superintendent of the National W. C. T. U. The annual sermon was delivered by Rev. J. W. Bashford, president of Wesleyan university, Delaware, O. Fully 5,000 people attended the services.

Immediately following the evangelistic meeting a gospel sufferage meeting was held. It was one of the most notable gatherings of the convention. Rev. Anna Shaw, of Boston, presided. The speakers were Susan B. Anthony and Rev. Joseph Cook.

Needless Cruelty.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 21.—At the session of the W. C. T. U. Monday among the reports read was one by Mrs. Mary F. Lovell, of Massachusetts, for the department of mercy, who spoke against the use of birds for the adornment of ladies' hats, against killing of seals for use in cloaks and urged her hearers to look into what she termed the horrors of the slaughter house. She offered a resolution which was unanimously adopted urging the creating of a sentiment among the young people of the country against the practice of vivisection which she denounced as cruel and unnecessary for the promotion of science.

BADLY SHAKEN.

Scores Perish in an Earthquake in Southern Italy and Sicily.

ROME, Nov 20.—The reports of disasters caused by the earthquakes in southern Italy are still meager, but they suffice to show that there has been great loss of life. Procopic, a village of 1,200 inhabitants in Reggio di Calabria, has been obliterated. Virtually all the buildings were thrown into ruins. The number of deaths is not known, but in one church forty-seven persons were buried alive under fallen walls. The last authoritative report was that the list of dead was well above sixty. In another village of the same province eight persons were killed outright by falling buildings. The damage to property has been enormous. Troops and officials are going to the help of the suffering districts. King Humbert has sent several donations from his private purse.

LAID AWAY.

The Body of Alexander III. Placed in the Tomb of His Fathers.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 21.—The body of the late Czar Alexander III. was placed in the tomb of his fathers, beneath the fortress cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul Monday, seventeen days after his death. The funeral services were the most elaborate of any similar services that have ever taken place in Russia, and the last rites were performed in the presence of an assemblage of royalty and representatives of royalty such has seldom or never congregated in similar circumstances under the roof of a sacred edifice. More than thirty members of European royal families were in attendance, and, with their suites and the representatives of sovereigns who were unable to be present in person, the monarchical representatives numbered several hundreds. The ceremonies were conducted with all the pomp of which the ritual of the Greek church is capable, and with all the display that the Russian court could command. The streets were thronged with people throughout the day and the utmost good order prevailed.

Killed Her Brother.

SING SING, N. Y., Nov. 20.—Mary Sheehan, 25 years old, the daughter of John Sheehan, shot and instantly killed her brother William, aged 29, during a quarrel at the dinner table Monday noon. William called Mary names and she picked up a revolver off the buffet and shot him. Mary was arrested.

THE LABOR CONGRESS.

Conciliation and Arbitration Discussed by Eminent Leaders.

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—Miss Jane Addams, of Hullhouse, presided over the Wednesday morning session. John D. Weeks, editor of the American Manufacturer and Iron World, spoke on the relation of manufacturers and employes. Strikes he looks upon as the greatest of evils. The trouble cannot be met by competition or the doctrine of laissez faire—leave alone. Legislation or compulsory arbitration are out of the question. Public opinion, he thought, in addition to some method of getting the contending parties together for a peaceable settlement, is the most potent factor.

M. M. Garland, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, treated of the sliding scale system and its workings. He said:

"The amalgamated iron and steel workers have solved these labor difficulties, and their solution has been in operation for twenty-eight years. The sliding-scale system and fairness in the counsel-room have brought about a peaceable settlement. To be sure, we have sometimes disagreed, but eventually the ironworkers and their employers have come together."

Carroll D. Wright, United States labor commissioner, discussed the "Distinction Between Compulsory and Voluntary Arbitration," "Distinction Between Compulsory Arbitration and Public Investigation of Labor Disputes" and "Distinction Between Adjudication of Past Contracts and Settlement of Future Ones." He said that the labor question broadly stated simply means a struggle for a higher standard of living. A strike in itself is simply a protest against changing conditions adversely. It is only through conflict that good ever comes in this world. So the labor conflict means the uplifting of the laboring man and the bettering of his condition. There should always precede arbitration, he said, an attempt at conciliation. Compulsory arbitration is not to be thought of. A law compelling workmen or employers to accede to a decree of the court under penalty could not be enforced. Mr. Wright believed in public investigation. Publicity is always salutary. Let the responsibility for the troubles be fixed, he said, and public opinion will do the rest. It is more potent than a mandate of the courts.

Prof. Adams, secretary of the interstate commerce commission, read a paper on "Economics of Arbitration." There could be no industrial liberty without industrial ownership of property, according to his views. He recognized, but two classes of persons—the property holders and those who have no property. Without proprietorship the labor question could never be solved. There existed no interest common to all laborers. Each trade had its own interests and no combination of all trades was possible. No more was a great labor party a possibility.

William H. Sayward, of Boston, secretary of the National Association of Builders, spoke on "The Relation Between Employer and Employe in the Building Trades." The workmen, he declared, have never applied to employers for sympathy; it is sole justice that workmen want. The interests of employer and workman are not identical. Their relations are of the buyer and seller.

As a final remedy the speaker advocated organization of both employers and workingmen which would lead to conferences and agreements between the two classes.

As a substitute for conciliation and arbitration, as generally accepted, the speaker would substitute primary agreements and thus do away with any causes for trouble. Cure the causes for all strife instead of stopping individual cases.

"Necessity for Mutual Organization" was the subject assigned Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor. He declared that the man who assisted, in any way, the organization of labor was a public benefactor, inasmuch as organization assisted in conciliation and arbitration. He continued:

"The strike is but one of the eruptions of the labor movement and one of the infrequent occurrences considered beside the great work that the organization of labor performs, and even these strikes men and women who are honest desire zealously to see entirely eliminated or reduced in number.

"As one who has been intimately and closely connected with the labor movement for more than thirty years—from boyhood—I say to you that I have yet to receive a copy of the constitution of any general organization or local organization of labor which has not the provision in it contained that before any strike shall be undertaken, conciliation or arbitration shall be tried.

"To urge arbitration previous to the organization of labor simply means the destruction of the interests of labor. Compulsory arbitration—compulsory arbitration? Not if the workingmen of America know it. I would say to you as one who is a law-abiding citizen, as one who reveres the institutions under which we live, as one who wants to help in handing down the republic of our country to our children and to posterity unimpaired, but improved, if we can, I would say that I would advise my fellow workmen and women to rise and resist by every means within their power any attempt to force compulsory arbitration upon them.

AN INSANE MAN'S DEED.

He Kills Three Members of His Family and Himself.

WELLSVILLE, Mo., Nov. 21.—This little village was the scene of a horrible quadruple murder early Monday morning which wiped out nearly an entire family. Thomas Portercheck, with his mother, two sisters and a brother, occupied a small house half a mile east of the business portion of the village. The family were Bohemians and were in humble circumstances.

Investigation showed that the mother, daughter and son James had been horribly mutilated by an ax. It is believed that Thomas had first killed his brother, then his sister and mother. It was probably his intention to kill his sister Mary also, but her life was saved by the screams of her mother. No theory is advanced for the sudden fit of insanity which overcame the young man.

Rewarded by Peixoto.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Nov. 20.—One of the last acts of Gen. Peixoto as president was to promote an enormous number of men from all grades of the army and navy who had served him faithfully during the revolution. Although this will add twofold to the army and navy estimates, yet it was done to reward loyalty, and congress will not refuse to sanction it

Barred by the Danes.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 21.—The minister of the interior, M. Boerring, has issued a decree, to take effect immediately, forbidding the importation of live cattle and fresh meat from the United States.

STANDS AGHAST.

Europe Is Indignant Over the Blood-Curdling Reports from Armenia.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The chairman of the Armenian Patriotic association, G. Hagopian, has sent the following letter received from an Armenian, whose name is not given because it would jeopardize his life, to the earl of Kimberly, the secretary of state for foreign affairs. The letter is dated October 9. It says:

"The so-called rebellion of the Armenians in 1893 was a got-up affair, for the repression of which the chief magnate got a decoration. This year the Kurds carried off Armenian oxen and the Armenians' appeal for their restoration was refused. A fight ensued. Two Kurds were killed and three were wounded.

"The Kurds immediately carried their dead before the governor, declaring the Armenian soldiers had overrun the land, killing and plundering the Kurds. This furnished a pretext for massing the troops from far and near. The troops were commanded by a pasha and a marshal and were hurried to the district. The pasha is said to have hung from his breast, after reading it to his soldiers, an order from Constantinople to cut the Armenians up root and branch and adjuring them to do so if they loved their king and government.

"Nearly all these things were related here and there by soldiers who took part in the horrible carnage. Some of them weeping claim the Kurds did more, and declare they only obeyed the orders of others. It is said that 100 fell to each of them to dispose of. No compassion was shown to age or sex even by the regular soldiery, not even when the victims fell suppliant at their feet.

"Six to ten thousand persons met such a fate as even the darkest ages of darkest Africa hardly witness, for there women and tender babes might at least have had a chance of a life of slavery, while here womanhood and innocence were but a mockery before the cruel lust that ended its debauch by stabbing women to death with the bayonet while tender babes were impaled with the same weapon on their dead mother's breasts or perhaps seized by the hair to have their heads lopped off with the sword."

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 19.—The following official account of the Armenian troubles was issued Friday:

"Some Armenian brigands, provided with arms of foreign origin, joined an insurgent Kurd tribe for the purpose of committing excesses. They burned and devestated several Mussulman villages. As an instance of the ferocity of the Armenians it is reported that they burned alive a mussulman nobleman. Regular troops were sent to the scene to protect peaceable inhabitants against these depredations. The Ottoman troops not only protected and respected the submissive portion of the population and the women and children but they reestablished order and tranquility. Respecting the villages alleged to have been destroyed, it was the Armenians who carried off all their belongings before becoming brigands."

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Europe is shocked and indignant over the blood-curdling reports from Armenia. The situation is taking on the aspect of that which followed the exposure of the Bulgarian outrages. The incidents run almost on parallel lines. Pretended insurrection has been used as a cloak for wholesale massacre. In the district near Philippopolis, in 1876, 12,000 people were butchered. This year, in the district of Bitlis, 10,000 Christians have met a similar fate.

The diplomats see trouble ahead for Turkey if prompt redress is not made for the Armenan atrocities. It is suggested that the parties to the Berlin treaty take the matter in hand and discipline Turkey at once by taking control of the province out of the hands of the porte. This would be a bold step, but it is one which seems justified by the circumstances.

As in 1876, the porte is belittling the cruelty of its emissaries. The sultan is evidently alarmed by the cry of horror which has gone up in Europe, and is anxious to cover up the misdeeds of his provincial agents. He is afraid that history may repeat itself—that Armenia may prove another Bulgaria and lead to a war which will permanently dismantle his empire.

A FATAL BLOW.

Bob Fitzsimmons Kills Con Riordan in a Friendly Sparring Match.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 19.—At a sparring match at Jacobs' theater Friday night Bob Fitzsimmons struck Con Riordan an apparently light blow on the point of the jaw. Riordan fell to the floor like a log, unconscious. Riordan died at 3 o'clock this morning without having recovered consciousness. Fitzsimmons is under arrest.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 20.—Bob Fitzsimmons, who killed Con Riordan by a blow on the point of the jaw during a friendly sparring match Friday night, is at liberty to pursue his vocation as a theatrical star under a $10,000 bond.

An autopsy was held on Riordan's remains Saturday. The certificate issued gives as the cause of death "hemorrhage within the cranial cavity, causing compression of the brain." Riordan was found to be in perfect health. Dr. D. M. Totman, who conducted the autopsy, says that Riordan must have been struck a terrific blow on the chin, which communicated direct with the base of the brain. The depression of the right side of the brain was very deep and remained for half an hour after the clot was removed.

WILL TAKE TIME.

Business Cannot Suddenly Be Raised from Its Depression.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

"In nearly all branches of business gradual improvement appears, and the hopeful feeling observed last week has continued. Then it was also noted that the main conditions of business and trade had not suddenly changed, and this becomes clearer, to the disappointment of some. Low farm products, low wages and only partial employment of labor still retard distribution, and the limited demand hinders the recovery of industries. Progress toward recovery has not ceased, and many establishments have resumed or added to their producing force, some also advancing wages, but it will take time to lift business out of its depression, and the progress made, if less than the sanguine expected, is at least encouraging. The decision to offer $50,000,000 bonds for replenishment of the treasury reserve was, by bankers, generally approved, but events are showing that restoration of confidence cannot by itself remove all embarrassment.

"Exports of breadstuffs, cotton, provisions and oil in October were $57,000,367, against $58,828,935 last year, although 1,000,000 bales of cotton went abroad, and the value of the same quantities exported this year would have exceeded $70,000,000 at last year's prices, the difference in prices alone being $10,600,000 in cotton and $2,400,000 in breadstuffs.

"Failures in the first week of November were rather larger than of late, liabilities amounting to $2,844,445, of which $742,420 were of manufacturing and $2,086,977 of trading concerns. In five weeks ending November 1, liabilities in failures were $11,127,290, of which $4,464,813 were of manufacturing and $6,571,974 of trading concerns. The failures of the past week have been 270 in the United States against 323 last year, and 38 in Canada against 36 last year."

CHARGED WITH FORGERY.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Nov. 20.—Dr. W. R. Cauble was arrested Monday for forgery. Sheriff Newton arrived here Sunday night from Danville, Ill., with warrants for his arrest. It is learned from Sheriff Newton that four indictments are pending against Dr. Cauble in the courts of Danville for forgery. Dr. Cauble arrived in this city about four months ago. Since his residence here he has been practicing medicine and his arrest was a surprise to the community.

THE NAPOLEON REVIVAL.

Why the Emperor Is the Most Popul Character in History.

Within the past year there has been a revival of interest in the career of Napoleon Bonaparte that is almost phenomenal. In literature he has figured in the pages of memoirs and reminiscences by those who came into more and less intimate contact with him. In art not only has he been a potent inspiration to modern painters and sculptors, but he has made priceless all pictorial records of his time. In the drama he poses as the most picturesque figure that has been brought upon the stage within the century. Personal relics of the man are held as sacred and beyond all price. As Paul Bourget aptly says, "Napoleon has hypnotized the French people again." In France the sting of defeat after the Franco-Prussian war turned the thoughts of all to their period of greatest glory, and so it needed but time to see Napoleon enshrined as an idol. An equally logical explanation is found for the most notable feature of the Napoleon revival in this country.

The Century's life of the emperor was projected five or six years ago, before anyone could have foreseen the present attitude of the public mind. It was undertaken solely with the idea that Napoleon was one of the greatest, most forceful and picturesque characters in the entire range of history, and that hitherto he had been inadequately represented. For that reason Prof. William M. Sloane, the greatest American student of French history, was commissioned to write the life, and his years of study among unpublished archives have brought out his completed labor at the most opportune moment. And Prof. Sloane shows us a new Napoleon, a devourer of books, an unsuccessful literary aspirant, an ineffectual Corsican political agitator, but the new Napoleon certainly makes the old Napoleon more easily comprehended.

ABOUT EMBLEMS.

The Significance of Many of Them Shrouded in Mystery.

What the learned Dr. Aiken once called "A Visible Image of an Invisible Thing," in fact the emblem, has so little record in modern times, that even the encyclopedias give concerning it only the dictionary definition. Yet two centuries ago it formed the subject for the work of some of the best writers, painters and engravers of Europe; while antiquity has illustrated it in a myriad of forms, the meaning of which is in thousands of instances lost to us in the mystery and darkness that overshadows the history of so much of human life.

Any object which presents at a glance a meaning beyond its mere appearance is an emblem. The torch for Illumination, the scales for Justice, the anchor for Hope, the owl for Wisdom, the butterfly for the Soul, the scythe and hour-glass for death. The first attempt at writing was emblematical, and Chinese writing is so to this day. So were the Egyptian hieroglyphics and the same can be said of our own Indian picture writing.

All coinage, from the first Hebrew shekel to the last American dollar; all the flags of all nations; all state or national seals, are emblematical of something. The cross, the crown, the scepter, the miter, every church steeple in every land, mosque, minaret and pagoda, temple and shrine, idol and fetish, all are emblems.

Every letter in every language, every figure, the sign of every trade and profession, the roses of England, the lilies of France, Ireland's shamrock and Scotland's thistle, are all emblems. And yet, strangely enough, it is only by persistent search that one can find out even the least about the origin of this class of art, the meaning of its varied forms, the hidden sense being often lost utterly while only the form remains.

TWO MENAGERIES recently arrived in Bologna, one of which was under the management of Signor B., and the other under that of his wife, traveling respectively on their own account. Here they decided to join their forces, and the fact was announced on the bills as follows: "Owing to the arrival of my wife, my collection of living animals is considerably augmented.—B."—Conversazione.

GOD'S ANSWER.

Where is healing for my sorrows?
So I cried in my distress.
Give me hope for dark to-morrows,
Let the tempest hurt me less;
Let an angel come to bring me
Freedom from life's weight and pain;
But the wise God, for my healing,
Sent me back to work again.

Thought and talk bring truth no nearer,
Trouble lies in doubt for me.
Let the vision be made clearer;
God arise and set me free!
Baffled, weary, restless, help'ess
I prayed on through all the night;
But God spoke amid the darkness:
Work thy way out into light.

I am weary for the faces
Thou hast taken to Thy Heaven;
I have prayed so long for graces
That I see the others given.
Friends most dear are taken from me,
In my path grim evils lurk.
What can change these troubles for me?
And God answers: Only work.

Still I cried: O, God, deliver!
Work is but the common lot.
And my griefs will last forever
If Thy strong hand help me not.
But the Master knew: His answer
Came in fresh tasks multiplied;
And my prayer for blessing brought me
Chiefly work, on every side.

So I took the duties pressing
Near me, and with patience sought
To perform the work; what blessing
Has the mere endeavor wrought!
Work can make the sad lighthearted,
Work makes strong the young and old,
Work wins treasures far more costly
Than the idler's gems and gold.

Therefore work! God calls thee to it,
Not in anger, but in love.
Take thy work with joy, and do it
As to please thy God above.
All life's best has not been taken
While good work remains to thee.
Let thy heart grow glad in labor;
Love and work and happy be!

MRS. MONTGOMERY.

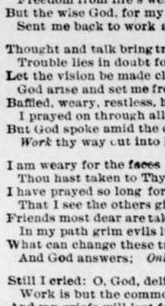
Why She Preferred the New Boarder's Society.



THAT I was in love with her admits of no doubt. To commence with, I had only chosen that particular house because she had been standing at the window, and when I found the terms were ordinary terms, and that a single bedroom was vacant, I became one of the boarders with a degree of pleasurable anticipation.

I established myself the following morning, arriving with my impedimenta in a hansom, and descending to luncheon when the gong sounded with my best coat on. The woman whose face had captivated me was not present, and I immediately feared she might have left.

To my unspeakable delight she entered while I was endeavoring to console myself with the reflection that I was, anyhow, confortably installed, and that the glimpse I had obtained of her the preceding day in passing had probably saved me from a less desirable establishment. Her seat, by good chance, was next to me, and though I did not in this way have so favorable a view of her, the arrangement held out the promise of agreeable conversations.

Let me declare at once that the promise was fulfilled. I was introduced to her, and learned that her name was Mrs. Montgomery. She was a slender, graceful woman, with the grandest gray eyes I have ever looked on, and a voice that made commonplaces a delight.

I found that she had been staying in the house for three months. She was a widow and an artist, in so far as she painted in water colors, and disposed of her work as often as she was able to find a customer. Her age was, perhaps, two or three and thirty, and when I knew her better I discovered that she had considerable experience of the world. Not that she referred expressly to her experiences, but rather that they tinged her remarks, and imparted to them a certain breadth and depth not to be found in the criticisms of the rest, I might even say a certain bitterness. She was never cynical, but "bitterness" conveys my meaning fairly well. She appeared to have lived and suffered, and now and then, when she dropped the mask and the real woman spoke to me, I almost felt as if she were guiding my hand toward a half-healed wound. I was interested and curious, and before long I found out that the curiosity she had excited was not limited to myself.

A boarding house is a very hotbed of comment and inquiry, and it was not to be supposed that a woman like Mrs. Montgomery could escape the common lot. She was, moreover, singularly reticent about herself, and thus gave the other women's imaginations greater scope still. Where she came from, who she was, how long her husband had been dead, such matters formed food for daily gossip, and there was not even wanting the plain and spiteful woman to suggest the possibility of her being a divorcee, and not a widow at all.

I was a man, and a young one, and my zeal outran my discretion. I had the mortification of perceiving that, in my ardent remonstrances against this miserable imputation, I procured for myself the reputation of having fallen in love with the lady, and, so far from endearing myself to her by my championship, succeeded, on the contrary, in creating a coldness in her bearing toward me which made me wretched. I do not mean, of course, that she was aware that I had championed her, but that she was speedily rallied on my devotion.

I have just said I was young. I did what every young man does under such circumstances. I asked her the reason of her altered manner to me.

She lifted her eyebrows in faint protest at such stupidity.

"I really don't understand you," she said. "How have I altered?"

She had, dexterously enough, reversed the positions, and the awkwardness of explaining was now mine.

"You were more friendly to me," I stammered; "more kind."

"My dear Mr. Gore!" she murmured, deprecatingly.

"You—of course it is difficult to say," I went on with hot cheeks—"but you are stiffer to me than you were. Have I offended you?"

"Not in the very faintest particular," she answered; "pray believe it."

I had perforce to be content, but strove by every means in my power to regain the former footing.

I was annoyed at this stage by the arrival of a new boarder, whom I immediately observed to be strongly attracted by Mrs. Montgomery. He was a big, black-bearded man of about forty, and, though he did not address her across the table, I detected his eyes attentively fixed upon her more than once. My one belief was that she, on her side, studiously avoided his gaze, and even appeared distressed by it.

It had only needed the element of rivalry to make me her abject slave; and though she gave the bearded stranger no encouragement, I hated him and adored her most desperately. The chatter of the facetious landlady goaded me to exasperation, for the newcomer's name chanced to be also "Montgomery," and the gave opportunities for second-class boarding house wit of the most approved type. "Mr. Montgomery, will you pass Mrs. Montgomery the salad?" "Mrs. Montgomery, Mr. Montgomery is waiting permission to smoke." I figuratively gnashed my teeth, and showed my disdain of such bad breeding without disguise

I must admit, however, that Mrs. Montgomery's avoidance of the man suffered no abatement as days went by, and so far as I dared to hope I was not indifferent to her, I did hope. One afternoon she was especially nice to me. We were alone in the dining-room after luncheon, and I fancied I read in her voice the dawn of the feeling I so ardently desired. We talked of many things: of my chances in my profession, and the value to a young fellow at the outset of his career of a good woman's influence.

I said I personally regarded it as of more value than either money or interest, and, while she did not agree with me in toto, she acknowledged that she also felt it a noble mission on a woman's part to play mentor to a boy of talent.

"As a wife," I said, "for preference?"

She smiled. "Not necessarily as a wife," she replied, "for the disparity in their ages would be against such a relationship as that. Say as a friend where it is possible."

"Between you and me, Mrs. Montgomery," I asked, "is it possible with us? I mean, of course, supposing I have talent and you have the necessary liking for me?"

A LETTER WAS LYING ON THE CAN.

I hoped she would say "no," and she did. But she betrayed none of the confusion I had hoped for.

"Circumstances prevent it with us," she said gently; "nor am I at all qualified to play such a role."

I touched her hand. Emotion was mastering me, and what words I might have uttered next I can only guess. Happily, or unhappily, the door opened at that juncture, and our tete-a-tete was ended.

I went out into the street with my head in a whirl. Almost I meditated proposing to her rather than keep my love locked up forever in a breast for which it was too big. I walked without stopping for some hours, and returned to the house only as the gong was proclaiming dinner.

To my disappointment, Mrs. Montgomery's chair was vacant, and she was evidently spending the evening out. I had just noticed that the stranger's place was empty, too, when I heard she had left for good.

"Left?" I exclaimed. "It—it was very sudden, was it not?"

"Quite," said the landlady; "she told me she had news, or something. That's two people I've lost to-day. Mr. Montgomery has gone as well."

My world had fallen about my ears. I spent the evening in my bedroom, smoking and ruminating on the inexplicable occurrence. I felt as bereft as if I had lost a fiancee or a wife, and the idle talk of the others below, their indifference, or callousness, as I termed it, was hateful to me.

The following morning when I took in my shaving water a letter for me was lying on the can. It was from Mrs. Montgomery, and ran thus:

"DEAR MR. GORE—In leaving Woburn place so very abruptly, I feel that I owe, to you, at least, some explanation. We were good friends, and I should not like to think that I had been guilty of any discourtesy. I have left it with my husband, from whom I have been separated for three years. Chance brought us together again in the boarding-house, and we intend to make a home together once more. I have told you this for the reason I have given, but if I may ask a favor of you it is that you will consider it a confidence, and refrain from mentioning it to the rest. With kindest regards, believe me, yours sincerely,

"HELEN MONTGOMERY."

I came across the letter yesterday; I have always kept it. But I never saw Mrs. Montgomery again.—N. Y. Advertiser.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Lamb Chops Saute: Put a piece of butter into a frying pan, and when hot lay in the chops, rather highly seasoned with pepper and salt. Fry them until thoroughly done, but not too brown. Should gravy be required, pour off the greater part of the fat, and then stir in half a tablespoonful of flour; stir until the flour browns, then add a gill of broth or water, an ounce of fresh butter and the juice of half a lemon. Stir until the sauce becomes rather thick, pour over the chops and serve.—Boston Budget.

—Preserved Apples: Weigh equal quantities of good brown sugar and of apples, peeled and sliced thin, allowing one pint of water to every three pounds of sugar; skim it well and boil until quite thick; add the apples and the grated peel of one or two lemons and two or three pieces of white ginger root; boil until the apples look clear and yellow. This will keep for years, is the testimony of one who has used it, and is an especially nice way when apples are plenty to keep some for future use.—Western Rural.

—Buckwheat Griddle Cakes: Put three pints of warm water into a stone pot or jar, add a gill of baker's yeast, or an inch square of turnpike cake dissolved in a little warm water; add a heaping teaspoonful of salt, and half a teaspoonful of salaratus, have a pudding-stick or spatula, and gradually stir in enough buckwheat flour to make a nice batter, beat it perfectly smooth, then cover it and set it in a moderately warm place until morning; a large handful of cornmeal may be put with the flour, and it is by many persons considered an improvement.—Farmer's Voice.

—The Queen's Sponge: The yolks of five eggs; beat yolks and whites separately and well. Add one cup of sugar to the yolks and beat again. Add the juice of half a lemon to four whites, also a pinch of salt. Fold the whites lightly into the yolks and sugar. Sift one cup of flour four times, and fold this into the eggs as lightly as possible, with no beating, as that will toughen the cake. Bake about half an hour in a moderately quick oven. Frost with the white of the fifth egg and confectioner's sugar. Keep for two days witout cutting, and you will have a cake that will "melt in your mouth," provided it is not spoiled in baking, for the baking of all cake is "half the battle."—Farm and Home.

—Barberry Sauce with Sweet Apple: Half a peck of barberries, two quarts of molasses, one peck of sweet apples. Pick over the barberries, to remove the stems and leaves; wash them, and put on to boil with water enough to float them. Add the molasses, and cook until the berries are tender. While these are cooking pare, quarter and core the apples. Skim out the barberries and cook the apples in the sirup, as many as can be cooked conveniently. When tender put them into the jar with the berries, and boil the sirup down until it is thick. Pour it over the fruit, and the next morning heat all together again and put away in a large stone jar. Scald it occasionally and it will keep without sealing.—Orange Judd Farmer.

RENOVATING GOWNS.

Simple Method of Bringing Old Garments Up to Date.

A demode dinner gown of olive velvet, with a swathed bodice and puffed sleeves of like material, might well be brought up to date by the addition of transparent net sleeves, covered with a scale work of gold and copper spangles; draped revers of the same might be drawn into a pointed ceinture of the spangled work, and finished off with round padded "bosses," stiffened with cardboard, from which hangs fringes of gold beads. When fixing spangles use a bead of the same color, and rather larger than the hole in the center of the spangle, as this prevents the necessity of allowing the sewing silk to be seen.

Still another excellent manner of renovating a brocade bodice which is somewhat the worse for wear is to outline the design with tiny beads or narrow metal cord, filling in the flowers with jewels, spangles and beading. The work really takes less time than one would at first expect, and when completed amply repays the time and trouble expended. Pieces of silk net, or velvet for hat or bonnet crowns, can be daintily worked in the same manner, but in every case the act lies in the choosing of a bold, effective pattern, and in blending the colors carefully; and, lastly, if you would save yourself much tribulation, be careful to sew each jewel, each bead, if possible, separately and with reliable silk, otherwise you will in all probability, and that most grudgingly, emulate the little girl in the fairy story, who strewed jewels rich and rare where'er she walked.—Boston Herald.

A New Way of Keeping Fruit.

It is stated that experiments have been made in keeping fruit in jars covered only with cotton batting, and that at the end of two years the fruit was sound. The following directions were given for the process: Use crocks, stone-bottom jars or any other convenient dishes. Prepare and cook the fruit precisely as for canning in glass jars, fill your dishes with the fruit while it is yet hot, and immediately cover with cotton batting, securely tied on. Remember that all putrefaction is caused by the invisible creatures in the air. Cooking the fruit expels all these, and as they can not pass through cotton batting, the fruit thus protected will give an indefinite period. It will be remembered that Tyndall has proved that atmospheric germs can not pass through a layer of cotton.—Albany Argus.

Gluten Bread.

Scald and cool one pint of milk, add to it one-half a compressed yeast-cake dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of cold water, a teaspoonful of salt, beat the whites of two eggs until light, not stiff, add them to the milk, and then stir in sufficient gluten flour to make a rather stiff batter. Beat for five minutes, cover and stand aside in a warm place for two hours, or until very light. Now stir in as much gluten flour as the batter will hold, using a spoon. Turn into two square greased pans, stand aside again for one hour and bake in a moderate oven for three-quarters of an hour. This bread must not be kneaded, but be well stirred and poured into a pan.—N. Y. Ledger.

of all cases of consumption can, if taken in the earlier stages of the disease, be cured. This may seem like a bold assertion to those familiar only with the means generally in use for its treatment; as, nasty cod-liver oil and its filthy emulsions, extract of malt, whiskey, different preparations of hypophosphites and such like palliatives.

Although by many believed to be incurable, there is the evidence of hundreds of living witnesses to the fact that, in all its earlier stages, consumption is a curable disease. Not every case, but a large percentage of cases, and we believe, fully 98 per cent. are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, even after the disease has progressed so far as to induce repeated bleedings from the lungs, severe lingering cough with copious expectoration (including tubercular matter), great loss of flesh and extreme emaciation and weakness.

Do you doubt that hundreds of such cases reported to us as cured by "Golden Medical Discovery" were genuine cases of that dread and fatal disease? You need not take our word for it. They have, in nearly every instance, been so pronounced by the best and most experienced home physicians, who have no interest whatever in misrepresenting them, and who were often strongly prejudiced and advised against a trial of "Golden Medical Discovery," but who have been forced to confess that it surpasses, in curative power over this fatal malady, all other medicines with which they are acquainted. Nasty cod-liver oil and its filthy "emulsions" and mixtures, had been tried in nearly all these cases and had either utterly failed to benefit, or had only seemed to benefit a little for a short time. Extract of malt, whiskey, and various preparations of the hypophosphites had also been faithfully tried in vain.

The photographs of a large number of those cured of consumption, bronchitis, lingering coughs, asthma, chronic nasal catarrh and kindred maladies, have been skillfully reproduced in a book of 160 pages which will be mailed to you, on receipt of address and six cents in stamps. You can then write those cured and learn their experience.

DELANO DIARY

—Joe Bernick is nursing a cut finger. It got in the way of a wood saw.

—Rev. J. W. Powell will hold Thanksgiving services at Montrose on Thursday next.

—The Standard Oil Company's oil tank has arrived and Mr. Cooper will soon be prepared to do business up in apple pie order.

—Straw seems to be a scarce article in this neighborhood. And yet several farmers near town burned up fine stacks after harvest.

—Skating on the river and neigboring lakes is now pronounced fine. But we would advise those trying the lakes to not venture too much just yet.

—Preparations for filling ice houses for next summer with a new crop of ice are already being made by cleaning out last year's debris before it freezes up too tight.

—The Eagle complains of seeing a great many long eared animals this week. Possibly she is growing near sighted and can't see beyond the shadow of her own aural appendages.

—There has been some talk of filling up the low place between the old school house and the new with water from the village tank and making a skating rink. If properly done this would make a fine rink and keep people in town for their skating.

—Regular services are held in the M. E. Church at 10:30 A. M. each alternating Sabbath, and in the evening the alternating week. Next Sunday, Nov. 25, there will be preaching at 7:30 P. M.

—Some of our citizens have been talking spelling school. If the hall could be filled some evening with those willing to participate in the spell, lots of fun could be had.

—At the rate chickens continue to die off in this vicinity eggs will be worth money soon. It must be the hens have heard of the return to power of the protective tariff policy.

—The turning on of the electric lights at six o'clock in the morning is a handy arrangement for people desiring to arise at that time. If they leave the current open the lights will awaken them promptly.

—At a meeting of the Epworth League held Wednesday evening, Miss Annie Maxfield was elected Secretary and Alva G. Catlin Treasurer to fill vacancies occasioned by the removal of the former officials from town.

—When we read of the terrible cold and storms and earthquakes in other places, and look out and behold the pleasant land and fine weather of our own country we do, indeed feel that we have something for which to feel thankful.

—Quite a number of loads of pork and other products of the farm have found their way from this vicinity to Minneapolis the past week. Everybody don't seem to practice home market even if they do preach and vote that way!

—Next Thursday, Nov. 29, has been set apart by the President of the United States as a day of Thanksgiving. Let everybody observe it. Have family reunions and rejoice together for the blessings of plenty and of health and happiness.

—The K. of P. dance last evening was a very pleasant affair and was quite largely attended. Among those from abroad were Mr. Crowley, of Minneapolis, Mr. John Cady, of Buffalo, Dr. E. E. Shrader, of Watertown, Geo. W. Rogers and family, of St. Paul, and Mr. Otto Kurst, of Maple Plain. Holcomb's orchestra furnished the music.

—On Thursday afternoon one of the saddest accidents ever occurring in our village took place, resulting in the death of Mrs. Rhoda B., wife of Rev. J. W. Powell. As she and Mrs. H. W. Wilder were returning home from a visit to the family of Rev. J. R. Davies, at Mr. Stanley's they drove down as far as Mr. Maxfield's and turned the corner to come home, when the horse took fright at some cornfodder piled near the road and overturned the buggy, throwing both women out. Mrs. Wilder was considerably bruised and "Grandma" struck on her head, fracturing the base of the skull, and never spoke afterwards, breathing her last in a few minutes. She was an active Christian worker and will be sadly missed by her family and a large circle of friends.

Personals.

R. Sproul, of Buffalo, was in town Tuesday on business.

Editor Lineau, of St. Paul, visited Delano friends today.

Mrs. Wm. Story, Mrs. John Belden, and others, of Montrose, were in town today.

Mr. Herrick, the rustling Minneapolis Tribune man, made us a very pleasant visit on Monday.

Mrs. Staples' children, of Howard Lake, spent several days with their Grandma Chance, here, this week.

Miss Hannah O'Leary, of Minneapolis, came up on Sunday evening for a few week's sojourn in Delano.

Mrs. Strickland, of Chicago, mother of Mrs. E. A. Johnson, has moved to Delano to make her future home.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Shannon, of Hamline, are in town to attend the funeral of Mrs. S's. sister, Mrs Powell.

N. K. Coffin left on Tuesday morning for Nicollet County to procure a Thanksgiving turkey, presumably.

John Brasie and family, of Monticello, drove over Saturday and visited Delano friends until Monday afternoon,

Mrs. Alice Councilman, of Montevideo, daughter of J. W. Powell came on this morning's train to attend her mother's funeral.

(Communicated)

August Bigot and Mr. Marth, of Springfield, Minn, are spending a few weeks with Delano friends.

Albert Stein held a dance in the City Hall, Saturday evening; and also raffled off a horse.

Mr. John Czock and Miss Pauline Cottz were married at the Delano Catholic church Tuesday.

County Cullings.

The Eagle complains that her flight to St. Michaels was not completed until Monday. If she started from her aerie on her regular day, instead of waiting a day, at the risk of losing her right for a year to publish legal notices, perhaps she could arrive at her destination sooner.

Last week's Cokato Commoner contained a couple of spicy articles from correspondents signing themselves "A. Hammersten" and "Swede" evening themselves up with the Delano Eagle. Mr. Hammersten remembers but one Swede having been elected among them "Hans Mattson, a man worthy of the office, and of whom no man need be ashamed," and as for our county he says, "There has not been but one "Swede" in the Court House at Buffalo that we are aware of. But what of that? Are the Swedes not as good American citizens as those of other nationalities? Why in the name of reason are they "Swedes" if they happen to be elected to office? but otherwise, American citizens and tax-payers." He winds up his article by saying to Mr. Gutzwiller, "For the common good, cease your harangues of the Swedes, in general and especially those of Stockholm and Cokato. You can't make them any better."

After going over some of the points in the political history of Mr. Gutzwiller, "A Swede" says "Would it not be save to say that more money have been paid to the editor of the Eagle for supporting the different candidates at different times than the whole campaign expenses at Cokato and Stockholm combined." And "Ole Mattson, of Stockholm, did not have a barrel, and you can see how Gutzwiller supported him. He hates Ole to the extent that when the other day a full blooded Irishman from Cokato arrived at Delano, he called out: Hello Ole! that was the worst he could say to a man whom he did not like."

Notice.

Bids will be received by the Supervisors of the Town of Franklin up to November 24th, 1894, 12 o'clock noon in the Village of Delano, for the building of a bridge at place known as Wright's Ford, on the South Fork of Crow River; Plans and Specification can be seen by applying to the undersigned. The sucessful bidder must be prepared to enter into bonds for the faithful performance of the contract. The Supervisors reserve the right to reject any or all bids.

"There Is No Royal Road" To public favor any more than to learning. This is true, at all events, in America where intrinsic excellence is necessary to secure and retain the popular favor. The reason The North-Western Line is one of the most popular railroads is that its service is not always up to date but AWAY AHEAD OF THE DATE. In our opinion, this is the Best Line between Chicago and the Twin Cities.—The Excursionist, Chicago.

Among Our Exchanges.

Just as soon as the democratic papers recover their breath they will begin to ascribe the good times that are sure to follow the grand republican victory to the legislation enacted by the democratic Congress, but you don't have to believe them, in fact you will be very foolish to do so. An improved condition of things is bound to ensue because of the fact that republican victory assures the capitalist, the manufacturer, and the business man that no further vicious legislation, inimical to the prosperity of the country, wil be enacted.—Elk River Star-News.

Major Baldwin made a great fight but he wont be there to carry out his "deep waterways". General Towne will superintend the "digging" for awhile.--Buffalo Journal.

As long as a Democratic president sits ready and anxious to veto laws passed by a Republican congress we cannot expect an immediate return to prosperity, but the people have started on the right road, they know what they are after, and will not be thwarted until they get it.—Litchfield News-Ledger.

In commenting on his defeat for state senator, Ignatius Donnelly winds up his article by the graphic sentence, "God help the people!" Is it to be inferred from this that if they had re-elected him the Lord's assistance would not have been required"—Litchfield Independent.

France's Trade Depression.

Washington, Nov. 15.–United States Consul J. M. Wiley, at Bordeaux, sends to the department of state an interesting report on the trade depression of France, in the course of which he seeks to find a reason for our guidance. He says:

"If the inhabitants of the United States have had reason to complain of hard times for a year or more past, the French, to a certain degree, have been their companions in misfortune. Not that France cannot suffer and endure the most pronounced financial depression and still thrive. On the contrary, I doubt, if, taking all things into consideration, she is not today better off than any of her foreign neighbors. For statistics show that there still remains more money per capita in circulation in the republic of France than in any other country in the world. The tables recently published by the custom house, giving an itemized resume of France's exportation and importation during 1893, however, show that there has been a diminution in her commerce amounting to 502,000,000 francs. This represents, compared with the previous year, a falling off of 252,000,000 francs in importations and 250,000,000 francs in exportations. Many reasons may be ascribed for this condition of affairs.

"First, the prevailing business and commercial depression experienced throughout the world.

"Second, as regards importations into France, the country little over two years ago also increased the duty on nearly all raw and manufactured articles, discharged at her ports, or brought across the frontier, and as goods, to employ an old aphorism, are paid for with goods either directly or indirectly, France may explain the decrease of her exportations by the application of that theory.

"We may, in a certain measure, take it for granted, however, that the merchandise which has heretofore gone abroad is now consumed at home, offering thereby no less employment to skilled labor or to the manufacturing interests."–Minneapolis Evening Tribune.

ST. PAUL, with her usual cheek, is in the Senatorial race with a Mr. Rogers, of that place. He may be a good enough man; but, the country has some candidates of its own and don't care to have "city chaps" in all the offices.

THE HOMEKEEPER'S REVIEW, edited by the well known author, Mrs. Effie W. Merriman, is on our table. It is a sprightly review of things interesting to housekeepers and entitled to a place among household literature. Mrs. Merriman is well-known hereabouts and her publication, like its predecessors from her pen, will doubtless find readers numerous.

AFTER all the republican blowing and bluffing about having an old time majority, and Nelson being elected by a majority of 6000, the official figures don't show it; but instead give Mr. Nelson's vote as 537 short of half of the votes cast. When they figured on the 6000 majority they must have included the 6000 votes that Mr. Hilleboe received. It appears that all the candidates for Governor except Owens ran behind their respective tickets.

REPORTS from the Japan-Chinese war say that a terrible battle was fought last Thursday, at Port Arthur, resulting in the loss of 250 Japanese and 1000 Chinese. War is a dreadful thing, and the wholesale sending of hundred of innocent men into eternity; with the widows and orphans and other friends left to mourn their loss; all to satisfy the greed of a few leaders of the nations, seems, in this enlightened age, to be wrong. These people should adjust their difficulties by some more humane and peaceful methods.

SENATOR ALCYNUS YOUNG EATON, of Buffalo, mentioned in our columns last week as a good man for United States Senator, instead of Senator Washburn, who seems destined to become ex-Senator in the near future, has by some of the city dailies been mixed up with the Wright County Times. Mr. Eaton's paper is the Buffalo Journal, and he does not deserve this treatment at the hands of those who would prefer another man for Senator. A. Y. would give Minnesota as good satisfaction if he were in the U. S. Senate as any man we have had. He would represent the interests of the state in an able manner. We are not a republican, but would like to see some man in the Legislative halls of our country with whom the people could be in touch.

THE Senatorial Electoral Cabinet, soon to meet in St. Paul, has not yet determined who will be the next United States Senator from Minnesota. Bets, not very praiseworthy evidences of the faith that is in various politicians, are being offered even, for and against the present incumbent. To say the least, very little honor can be attached to a position, even though it should be one of the highest honors in world to be a United States Senator, when one knows the way the members of the State Legislature are chosen with a view to obtaining this high office for some one man; and the way the gamblers place their money and bend every nerve to elect the man they bet on whether he be fit or unfit for the position. United States Senators should be chosen in some other way than by men elected to our State Legislature, and who should be there to look out for the interests of our state in other ways, and who should be competent and willing to discharge their duty.

Government Railroads.

Some of our friends appear to think that if the government would take charge of the transportation business of the country that many of our inconveniences would be done away with. To a certain extent, perhaps, they would. But would not the evils of Government ownership in this country be worse than the evils now extant? Besides the trouble arising from appointment of officers for political reasons there is another great reason why the plan would be a poor one here. It would be as Miss Kerr, who visited Australia last year, says it is in that country, whenever some politician with influence would ask for a branch line to his home; or to some place where he could get a few votes it would be built at government expense; whether anybody ever used it or not. Thus covering the country with many branches that fail to pay and the expenses for running them must come out of those people that use other parts of the system, making traveling about twice as expensive as it would otherwise be. Miss Kerr says, in Australia the fare averages about twice as much for the same distace as it does here from St. Paul to Chicago. This is a very strong argument against adopting the plan in the United States.

Patriotism.

Our country is in need of patriotism. Something to arouse the latent love of country is called for. For a generation past our people have given themselves up to money getting. They have exerted themselves in every conceivable manner to acquire more power to accumulate property; to become rich. Almost every undertaking in the country is for the aggrandizing of individuals or corporations rather than for the accommodation or welfare of the masses of people, who in the end pay, by hard labor, for the improvements and innovations made.

Patriotism is a love of country; a love of our institutions, and of our people; but does not necessarily imply that one shall be selfish, and greedy, and seek, at the expense of others, to build up himself.

Our country is possessed of vast resources, which, as time and opportunity develops, will naturally unfold themselves for the use of our people. There is no rush for us to cut the last stick of timber on our farms; for us to make lumber of the last pine tree in the state, nor in other useless ways to deprive ourselves of what we may need in the future. But simply to "do what our hands find to do" in earnest and bide our time for the balance. "We love our woods;" we love our land; we love our people; and should seek to preserve each as well as we can.

Our school lands should be preserved for the benefit of our schools. Our children should be there taught patriotism; should learn to love their country; their free schools; and other institutions as well as to make a living for themselves in the world.

It is not necessary in order to be patriotic to march in great armies equipped with the accouterments of war. It is not essential to the development of patriotism that we seek in foreign lands for foes to conquer. We have them with us. We have plenty of questions that are stirring our nation to its very foundation right at home. It devolves upon us to study them, and to meet them with the ballot, the weapon at our command.

Protection, the Logical Conclusion.

For years we have read, and heard from the lips of gifted orators, that the only way for the United States to keep up with other nations was to have a high protective tariff. We were told that this would be a panacea for all evils. That our products would sell for more; our laborers wages would be higher; and our people prosperous and happy. A home market would be provided for everything. We would be an independent nation; living within ourselves; and asking odds of no other nation under the sun. To some this was a siren song; lulling them to cast their ballots for this disideratum: the McKinley bill was hoisted upon the country; but instead of the looked for "home market" and "high prices for labor" our folks find they are fooled. And this summer a lot of fellows have been trying to organize a society in the Northwest to pledge themselves to buy nothing that is not manufactured in the Northwest; to cut themselves loose from the balance of mankind. Several attempts, under various excuses, have been made to exclude the products of one state from entering another. And a recent number of the Pioneer Press wants farmers to raise everything possible on their own places. The Southern cotton planters are advised by this astute pencil pusher, to raise their own wheat, corn, pork, etc., etc. And of course the farmers here to home who clothe themselves from what they sell of these products must raise cotton, flax and wool; must supply their women folks with spinning wheels and looms, and supply the home market; their own families.

But after all it remained for the St. Paul Dispatch, of the 27th inst., to "let the cat out of the bag," which it succeeds in doing at one jump, in an editorial headed "Home Industry." It says: "St. Paul for four years past has not enjoyed the great prosperity which characterized other years, and many men have found their confidence in its future slipping away from them." After praising Mr. Dawson and the Commerial club in their efforts to resuscitate the place, it further says "As the Dispatch has preached year in and year out as the true policy of the nation, it preaches as alike the true policy of the city—the development of home industry. Let us work for that and, if need be, fight for it. The St. Paul man who, as Mr. Dawson points out, will send elsewhere for articles of daily need is a traitor to St. Paul. He can find what he wants here, and if he cannot find it as good as he may elsewhere, his aim should be to unite with his friends and neighbors in St. Paul so that he may find it in time."

After this chunk of wisdom dropped by this advocate of protection, before her readers, can she expect people from out of town, who chance to be caught within her protected limits, to squander any of their hard earned cash on any of St. Paul's products? Can she expect the country members of the Legislature to come down there and help her eat the sauerkraut bologna sausage, switzercase, beef steak, mutton chops, Norway herring, bananas, and other tempting viands that may grow on her "protected" corner lots when they can, just as well bring along a satchelful of "grub" from home, and be patronizing their own farms, at the same time furnishing a "home market" for their own products. And after being enlightened by the Dispatch as to the benefits to be derived from "protection" and with an eye to business will not the majority of the rural members vote to build the new capital with rooms enough to furnish lodging and eating facilities for themselves, and a good cellar for storing potatoes, cabbage, turnips and squash for legislative purposes during the term? "It's a poor rule that don't work both ways." And if "protection" is such a fine thing for the country, for the state, and for St. Paul, how can the Granger Legislator be blamed for applying just a little of the theory to his own individual interests?

Diversified Industries.

In a recent issue of the St. Paul Pioneer Press appeared an editorial bearing the caption, "Diversified Industries and the Home Market." It says: "The farmers of the South are beginning to learn the lesson brought home by adversity to those of the Northwest; that diversification of industry is a condition of assured and permanent prosperity. The South has for long been cursed by exclusive devotion to cotton, just as some parts of the Northwest have been by exclusive devotion to wheat. In the meantime the world's sources of supply of both staples have widened more rapidly than the demand."

Are not the facts stated in the Pioneer Press conclusive evidence that nature, in some way has been interfered with? Does not this condition of things all over our free and independent United States show that the laws of God have been trampled under foot by the laws of greedy men; men who have sought to enrich themselves at the expense of their fellow men? Unless this is so how is it that people who settled in wheat producing regions of this country now have graneries full of golden grain to sell; men who have been taught to believe that under protective laws a home market would be furnished them, only to now find themselves disappointed, by having no market, save at greatly reduced prices.

Cotton raisers in the South are now advised to raise their own "hog and hominy". They are told by a cotton growers' convention, so says the P. P., to diversify the products of their land and to decrease the acreage planted to cotton, the natural product of their soil! Isn't this astonishing? Isn't this gravitating back to the good old days before the war?

At this rate how long will it be before the raisers of wheat and corn and stock in the north will be advised to raise cotton enough to furnish their own clothing? How long will it be before there will be a bounty placed on all cotton raised in Minnesota? How long before Southern sugar cane will be grown in our own state; where a "home market" can readily be obtained for it?

We do not wish to discourage diversity of interests on the farm within certain limits. It is well to be independent as possible; but it seems as if nations like individuals are made to depend to some extent on the different members going to constitute the entire body.

All farmers know what place on their respective farms are best adapted to the raising of particular crops. This field is for corn, that one for wheat, while here is the potato patch and the garden. In every county we have our different sections where they always have a big wheat and oat crop; or a fine crop of corn and hogs. And farmers learn to depend on their neighbors to a certain extent for a portion of their living One man has no hay on his farm, another has no wood; an exchange is made and both are happy.

As with individuals and with counties, so with states; one is a wheat state; another is a corn and pork state; another furnishes cotton and sugar. In each case nature has made them so. Is it not better for every one of the members of our country to do like the members of our bodies, that for which it is best adapted; instead of trying to turn our hands into feet; or our feet into hands by making laws diverting things from the uses for which they were made.

If our country did not by its protective laws, drive away from our shores the products of foreign lands, many of which we do not produce, and for which we are forced, by our own laws, to use substitutes for, or do without as the case may be, it seems to us that there would be a good market for all the products of our great country, both North and South, that our farmers would not need so much advice about how to make a living. It would not be necessary to advise them every year to raise less wheat, less cotton or less anything else, but each man knowing what his farm was best adapted for would himself raise the crop he could raise the most of in the easiest manner and find a ready "home market" for all he raised.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 23, 1894.

If the level headed members of the party are allowed to have their way, and everything now seems to indicate that they will, there is to be a radical change in the methods pursued by the democrats in Congress. Instead of trying to commit the party to the support of some measure and then having to hold a conference to quiet the rumpus thus raised, as was done entirely too often at the last session, it is proposed to hold the conferences first in order that there may be no rumpuses to quiet. In other words, an attempt is to be made to confine the washing of the dirty linen of democracy to the privacy of the democratic laundry, and to prevent the nauseating process being gone through on the floor of the House. Every democrat who wishes for the future welfare of the party should be able to give that attempt a hearty God-speed. Aye, and more. Every democrat should indelibly mark upon his mind the names of those calling themselves democrats who shall oppose the proposed change, if there be any such, in order that they be denied future honors at the hands of the party.

It is already known that the bids for bonds, which will be opened tomorrow at the Treasury department, are largely in excess of the amount of bonds to be issued. This will aid Secretary Carlisle to carry out his intention to surprise some of those who have attempted to defeat the sole object of the bond issue—the addition of gold to the reserve or redemption fund—by obtaining gold from the Treasurr in exchange for Treasury notes in order to use it in making the first payment of 20 per cent on bonds they have bid for. The surprise will be to ignore the bids of all those who have obtained gold from the treasury to pay for them, or as many of them as possible. Some of those who have taken gold from the treasury for this purpose did so in violation of their pledged word.

Judge Robinson, of Kansas City, at present in Washington, thinks the unexpected tidal wave of republicanism landed many men in Congress who would never have been even thought of in connection with the nomination had it have been thought that they had the slightest chance of an election. In this connection he says; "In Champ Clark's district, for instance, there seemed to be absolutely no reason to doubt Mr. Clark's re-election, and the republicans nominated a music teacher against him. Champ ignored his adversary and went off speechmaking in other parts of the state and in other states. Nobody dreamed the music man would win, and I guess it's the first case on record where a 'gent' of that profession was sent to Congress. I don't think, however, that he will be able to sing himself back again, for the democrats in Missouri are not going to be caught napping in 1896."

Representative McMillan, of Tennessee, does not claim prophetical powers beyond those which belong to all who carefully study the political field, but he is willing to put this language on record: "You mark my prediction, the republican party, even in it's hour of triumph, will not dare to re-enact the McKinley law nor to adopt a national platform in the next campaign which advocates doing so. Protection for protection's sake has been twice condemned at the polls since the enactment of the McKinley law, and it has not been resuscitated by the recent republican victory." Mr McMillin believes that when the official figures are tabulated it will be shown that the total republican vote of '94 was less than that of '92, when Harrison was defeated for President and the democrats elected nearly as many members to the House as the republicans did this year.

President Cleveland had the misfortune to slightly sprain one of his ankles this week and in consequence the town was full of the wildest rumors. It is a little painful, but not enough so to interfere with his work on his annual message, which now absorbs his time day and night, although, if gossip can be relied upon, he probably takes time occasionally to devote a thought or two to the young stranger who is expected in his household about the time the early spring flowers begin to bloom.

Senator Blackburn, chairman of the Senate committee on Rules, has arrived in Washington. He says that no meeting of the committe will be called before Congress meets, although it was given authority at the last session to sit during the recess. This is taken to mean that the idea of changing the rules has been abandoned.

Indian Territory affairs are giving the administration considerable trouble just now, and it will not be surprising should the present U. S. Marshal of the territory lose his official head. He is blamed here for not stamping out the lawnessness.

Woman's Column.

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

What is the Matter?

BY F. B. ROLPH.

There is something wrong. Every day brings the sad tidings of thousands suffering for food and raiment. Even in Chicago, the "Garden City" in the beautiful valley of the Mississippi, surrounded by the most fertile country on the face of the earth, thousands are asking for food. Nor is it in Chicago alone that the grim specter of want is seen but all over this fair land of ours. Why this suffering? It is not because of short crops as was the case in Russia, or any other providential visitation. Our fields have produced an abundance and many of our cereals were never sold for a lower price.

It is all folly to attribute the present distress to a change in the tariff or to the Sherman law, either repealed or enforced. These causes could not produce such widespread disaster. Then why this strange anomaly; this want in the midst of plenty. I would that I could write the answer of this question in fire upon the heart of every professed Christian who votes to legalize the saloon. The answer is the saloon the European saloon planted on American soil.

The cry that comes to us on every breeze is, "Give us some." Let us see how much bread could be purchased with the money worse than wasted in 240,000 saloons in the United States.

We are familiar with the fact that in the neighborhood of a billion dollars per year is consumed by intemperance. This would pay for twenty billion loaves of bread, and, counting five hundred loaves to a wagon load, it amounts to forty million wagon loads yearly, or about fifteen hundred loaves every year to every family in the land. Forty million wagon loads of bread! Imagine them in a procession, carrying away the people's bread to dump it into some great river to be destroyed! Place the horses with their loaded wagons conveniently close together in line, and the procession will stretch out two hundred and fifty thousand miles! It will girdle the globe ten times, with enough still on the way to feed the poor of a state for a year. About fifteen thousand loads must be cast into the river every working hour of every working day in the year, in order to destroy the people's bread as the saloon destroys it.

It is a burning disgrace and more than that, a sin, that we as professed christians allow on the soil of free America so destructive a thing as the saloon. Stop the saloon for one month and it is estimated that $100,000 will be saved to feed the poor.

The saloon is creating a dangerous class in our midst. Hungry men fired with whisky are not expected to reason. The saloon breeds anarchy as the marsh breeds malaria, and it may not be long before our larger cities we will hear the demand for "bread or blood."

It may be the design of God through the present distress to arouse this nation to a sense of its sin, and thus aid in the overthrow of the rum power. Nations sometimes learn by calamities that which they will not learn in any other way.

CORRESPONENCE

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

After the storm there comes a calm So we have fine weather again after quite a little winter.

Thanksgiving will be here in a few days and no doubt many are making great preparations to entertain relatives and friends on that day. It has been 273 years since the first Thanksgiving was observed upon these shores. The edict was sent out first by Governor Bradford in 1621. But marvelous changes have taken place since then. Our country has gone through wars and pestilence and received a baptism of blood and fire yet we are not happy. While many are making ready for the feast, I hope that they will remember that thousands in our land are suffering for the comforts of life. It is claimed we are living in a Christian age and a Christian land, but in both church and state we have got more icebergs than the polar seas. There is nothing desirable about a cold and selfish person. Even beauty and outside adornments do not lend enchantment.

The quarterly conference of the A. C. church at Armstrong closed last Sunday evening. There was a large attendance on Sunday, many coming from a distance.

Cordwood and hay seem to be the leading products in these parts just now.

Dave Richards went to Buffalo Monday on business.

Quite a number from Minneapolis attended the Advent meetings at Armstrong last Saturday and Sunday.

ONE of the queer customs of Russia is shown in the recent death of the czar. When the decease of Alexander at Livad a was announced the people made merry over the accession of the new ruler, and then after the festivities were concluded they began mourning for the dead monarch.

IN a new work on engineering Prof. Warren discusses the "fatigue" of metals—a striking term used to describe their loss of power of resistance after having been subjected to strain. Car axles grow thus "fatigued" and finally break from the effects of jolts and strains so small that no single one of them seems to have any effect at all.

THE world's output of gold has increased from 702,828 tons in 1890 to 2,217,843 tons in 1893, but during the same period the yield per ton decreased from 13.36 to 10.09 pennyweights. T. A. Richards writes that "the steady decrease in the yield per ton is due to the exhaustion of the higher grade, free-milling ore near the surface."

WHEN the late Oliver Wendell Holmes was in the zenith of his career an anonymous writer sent to him a few lines of verse and asked Mr. Holmes' opinion as to the worth while of the writer's continuing to write poetry. "Yes, by all means," replied the autocrat. His correspondent was Bret Harte, then a California newspaper reporter.

THE Georgia senate has passed a bill making it a penal offense for any person to make remarks or write articles that reflect upon the good name of a woman. The bill calls to mind that in the old days there were laws against scolding and tattling, as well as laws against slander, and that the ducking stool was high in favor as an inducer of polite conversation.

THE Altrurian colony which was started in Ohio last spring to carry out Mr. Howells' ideas of a socialistic and ideal state has gone to pieces after a short and troubled career. All these patent ways of ushering in the millennium come to naught in the same way. It is a pretty hard world for the habitual discontents and the dreamers, but they will have to put up with it. IN making treaties with China each foreign country has chosen its own name. England is Ying Kwo, the flourishing country; France is Fa Kwo, the law-abiding country; the United States, Mei Kwo, the beautiful country; Germany, Je Kwo, the virtuous country; Italy, I Kwo, the country of justice; Japan is Ji Kwo, the land of the sun, but she prefers to be called Ji Pen, the land of the rising sun.

MUSH and milk surprise parties are popular in some eastern localities. Those who make the party swoop down upon the subject of the surprise with a box of corn meal and a jug of molasses. The mush is set to boil, the molasses is turned into taffy and abundantly pulled, cakes are baked, apples pared, and the mush is eaten along with fresh milk and rich cream. The mush and milk surprise furnishes a maximum of fun for a minimum of expenditure.

WE speak of "China" and the "Chinese," little thinking that the natives of the flowery kingdom never hear those terms until after leaving the place of their birth or coming in contact with some traveler. They have many names by which they designate themselves and the land which they inhabit, but "Chinese" and "China" are not among the number. The most ancient name of China is Tien Hia, which signifies "beneath the sky." Since the present ruling house took control of the empire in 1650 the name of Ta Tsing Kwoh has been applied to the kingdom as a whole.

THOUGH little is said or written about the grangers nowadays, they still keep up their organizations in the northern New England states, notably Maine, where they are an important social if no longer a political factor in rural life. At their meetings, usually occurring twice a month, the discussion of agricultural topics is followed by singing and recitations, and, among the younger folks, by rustic games. Often the entire grange of one town will be entertained by the grange of another, and thus neighborly feeling is promoted as well as the improvement and elevation of the farmer's vocation.

These dogs do not all belong to Mr. Hammond. They are the property of sportsmen in New York, Brooklyn and Philadelphia. Hammond is a professional trainer of hunting dogs, and he is handling and breaking these dogs in the woods and covers of Sullivan county for service in the field and chase. Twenty hired men assist him.

IN HOLY MATRIMONY.

Czar Nicholas II. and Princess Alix Are Wedded.

Bands Play the National Anthem—An Impressive Ceremony—Czar and Czarina Crowned—Debts Remitted and Sentences Commuted.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 28.—The wedding of Nicholas II., czar of Russia, to Princess Alix of Hesse-Darmstadt took place here Monday afternoon.

Military bands were stationed at various points along the route between the two palaces and they each struck up the national anthem as the cortege appeared. The national hymn was thus sounded in the ears of the imperial party along the entire route.

The wedding procession entered the winter palace at 1:15 o'clock p. m., where as soon as possible afterwards were assembled all those who had been invited to be present at the wedding.

The Ceremony.

As the emperor took his place at the right of the dais the czarina led Princess Alix to him and placed her at his left. The czarina then took her place in the chancel at the right of the dais. The crosses, holy water and sacred books were then placed before the gate of Ikonostas and the marriage service in use in the orthodox church was begun by the singing of Psalm 127. The ceremony, which was conducted by Arch-Priest Jamyskcheff, chaplain to the late czar, was of the most impressive character and lasted two hours. After the psalm Arch-Priest Jauyskcheff said a few words of instruction to the couple, telling them what is the mystery of marriage, and how in marriage they have to live acceptable unto God and honorably.

Each One Is Crowned.

After prayer the arch-priest took two crowns, placing the first on the head of the czar, saying: "The servant of God, Nicholas, is crowned for the handmaid of God, Alix, in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost." Placing the other crown upon the head of the bride, he said: "The handmaid of God, Alix, is crowned for the servant of God, Nicholas, in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost."

Guns Salute the New Czarina.

A short time later the guns of the fortress boomed forth the intelligence that the ceremony had taken place and that Russia has a new czarina.

The Czar's Clemency.

The czar has signed a manifesto remitting certain debts due from peasants for crown loans made during the last famine, the arrears of taxes and many fines, and that he will commute the sentences of certain prisoners. He also will cancel the liability to punishment in cases of criminals not detected within fifteen years. All convicts from the Polish rebellion of 1863 will be allowed to reside anywhere in the empire. Their birthrights, but no property, will be restored. As regards the political prisoners, the czar is awaiting the report of the minister of the interior.

BOND BID ACCEPTED.

Secretary Carlisle Takes Up the Offer of the Stewart Syndicate.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Secretary Carlisle Monday accepted the Stewart syndicate offer for the $50,000,000 bond loan at their bid of 117.077 per $100, all or none. The Stewart syndicate in their bid direct that $40,000,000 of the bonds are to be delivered in New York; $3,000,000 in Boston; $3,000,000 in Philadelphia, $2,000,000 in Chicago and $2,000,000 in San Francisco. The bonds will be ready for their delivery as soon as the syndicate pay their first installment and indicate the amount and denomination of registered and coupon bonds they desire.

Secretary Carlisle was informed late in the afternoon that the Stewart syndicate, to whom the entire $50,000,000 new bond loan was awarded, had paid into the subtreasury at New York, Monday, on account of the first installment, $8,000,000 in gold. Assistant Secretary Curtis said that $5,000,000 of the new bonds were all ready to be delivered and the balance of $45,000,000 would be ready for delivery after December 3 next.

UNCLE SAM'S TREASURY.

Morgan Makes His Annual Report to Secretary Carlisle.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The treasurer of the United States, Hon. D. N. Morgan, has submitted to Secretary Carlisle his annual report. The following is a synopsis of the document:

The net ordinary revenues for the fiscal year ending June 30, cents omitted, were $297,722,019, a decrease of $88,097,609 as compared with the year before. The net ordinary expenditures were $367,525,272, a decrease of $15,952,674. The total receipts on all accounts were $724,006,538, and the expenditures $698,908,552.

At the close of business on June 30, 1893, there stood on the books of the department charged to the treasurer a balance of $738,467,555. Adding to this the receipts on all accounts gives $1,462,474,003 as total to be accounted for, and deducting the expenditures, leaves a balance of $763,565,540 on June 30, 1894. In addition to these balances, however, there were other liabilities, arising from the postal revenues, from disbursing officers and from other sources, which brought the total to $776,041,808 at the former date, and to $804,854,753 at the latter. After setting aside the amounts treated as unavailable, the principal of which are the deposits made with the states under the law of 1836, there remained the sum of $746,538,655 in 1893 and the sum of $775,310,559 in 1894 represented by live assets in the several offices of the treasury and mint, together with deposits in national banks. Of these balances the sums of $584,593,92) and 1616,155,820, respectively, were on deposit for the redemption of outstanding certificates and treasury notes, leaving $161,994,735 and $159,154,739 as the balances on account of the general fund.

He states that the lowest point touched by the reserve was $52,189,500 on August 7, 1894. Prior to July, 1892, the gold reserve was but little affected by withdrawals of coin, there never having been any considerable demand for the redemption of notes. Even when gold exports were heavy the metal was furnished by bankers from their vaults or was obtained from the treasury for gold certificates, of course without impairment to the reserve. During the last two years, however, the treasury has been called upon to furnish nearly the whole of the requirements for exportation, and there have recently been considerable withdrawals for other uses.

The treasurer remarks that the impairment of the gold reserve rendering necessary the issue of bonds in February was caused chiefly by the depletion of the treasury resulting from insufficient revenues. Even when the supply of paper had become so reduced that the treasury was obliged to pay out large sums of gold in the ordinary disbursements the coin was freely returned in the revenues. The proceeds of this loan were $58,660,000 in gold coin and certificates, but during the month of February there were redeemed $19,200,000 of notes in gold, presumably to meet subscriptions to the loan, so that the net gold proceeds were about $39,500,000. This, together with a gain of $1,500,000 in gold from ordinary sources, brought up the reserve during the month from $65,000,000 to $106,500,000, while the net assets of the treasury, with an excess of $7,000,000 of expenditures over receipts for the month, increased from $125,000,000 to $177,000,000. During the succeeding months till the end of the first week in August the reserve was affected by deficient revenues and withdrawals of gold for export, the movement abroad having been stimulated by the necessity which the treasury was under of furnishing to exporters new full weight after the supply of old pieces had become exhausted.

With reference to the retirement of treasury notes the treasurer says that prior to August, 1893, the treasury had been able to provide for the redemption of treasury notes in silver dollars out of the holdings of free silver, so that there had not been up to that time, any impairment of the total amount of the silver fund accumulated under the act. On the 3d of that month, however, the silver dollars and bullion in the treasury had become reduced to the amount required by law to be retained for the payment of outstanding treasury notes and certificates, and the demand for the redemption of notes continuing in consequence of the scarcity of small denominations of currency, it became necessary to draw upon the dollars coined especially for that purpose. The silver fund being thus impaired, the notes so redeemed were cancelled, in order to preserve the required equality between the silver in the treasury and the notes outstanding. The total amount of the notes retained in this way, up to October 31, was $4,780,434.

To the end of September last the total redemption of United States notes in gold since the resumption of specie payments were $181,300,000, and the total redemptions of the treasury notes in gold from their first issue were $68,590,000. The two important events of the year affecting the condition of the public debt were the issue of $50,000,000 of 5 per cent. bonds to replenish the gold reserve and the stoppage of the purchase of silver bullion by the issue of treasury notes.

The amount of the new issues of United States paper currency put into circulation during the year was $350 959,190, having been exceeded but once, in 1892. The amount of worn and mutilated notes redeemed was $319,002,290. This also has been exceeded but once, in 1893. The total paper circulation reached its highest point in May last, when it stood at $1,175,000,000. Since then there has been a slight contraction, caused chiefly by the gradual redemption and retirement of gold certificates, the issue of which was suspended, as the law requires, when the gold reserve of the treasury fell below $100,000,000.

Notwithstanding a change in the regulations whereby senders of national bank notes for redemption were required to bear the charges of transportation, the redemptions were the heaviest since 1886, amounting to $105,000,000, or more than half of the average circulation.

The management of the Columbian exposition having finally declined to defray the expenses of recoining the Columbian half-dollars, which have found their way into the treasury, they have been offered to the public at par in exchange for gold or gold certificates, and a considerable sum of them has been distributed in that manner. The Isabella quarters in the treasury are retained for the requisition of the board of lady managers of the exposition.

The amount of counterfeit silver coin and fractional currency detected at the offices of the treasury during the year was $10,500, an increase of $900 over the year before.

There was an increase during the year of $1,555,250 in the face value of the bonds held on account of the sinking funds of the Pacific railroads, which amounted, on June 30, to $48,900,000.

COMING BACK.

A Large Sum of American Gold Reaches New York from Europe.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—American gold coin was brought to this city Sunday by the Cunard line steamship Lucania and the American liner Paris. In both instances it was imported by the Bank of British North America. The Lucania and Paris brought eighteen boxes each. The officers of the steamships could not tell the exact amount, but the shipments represent about $2,000,000.

A Dangerous Counterfeit.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—What is said to be the most dangerous counterfeit that has made its appearance in many years is an imitation of the Windom two-dollar silver certificate. Chief Hazen, of the secret service, has issued a detailed warning to the public, in which he says the note will bear the closest scrutiny. The counterfeit is being circulated in large cities principally.

Legislators.

The legal profession will lead numerically in the coming legislature by one man only, while merchants and farmers will share equal honors. There will be 25 lawyers, 24 merchants and 24 farmers, 15 of the lawyers belonging to the senate and 17 of the merchants to the house. There will be but nine farmers in the senate, the remaining 15 belonging to the house. After these, editors and bankers will be most in evidence, eight each, the majority of both classes being in the senate. There will be in all five physicians and four manufacturers, while other professions and business interested will be about evenly represented with one, two or three members. Both houses will show but one capitalist each.

More Bodies Found.

The country south of Duluth that was devastated by fire on Sept. 1 continues to reveal its dead and no doubt it will do so for months and perhaps for years. Two bodies were found recently, one of which was identified as that of Capt. L. Brook, an old and prominent man who was master of the steamboat Cumberland on Grass lake, near Pine City. The other body could not be identified. The bodies were found on the upper Kettle river, west of the St. Paul & Duluth railway and near the northern limit of the burned district, where it had been thought there were not likely to be any dead.

News in Brief.

The legislature this winter will probably be called upon to pass a measure submitting to the voters of the state at the next general election the question of holding a constitutional convention.

A young man named Martin Verness, was killed by the fast mail while walking on the track at Red Wing.

The following directors of the Duluth, Red Wing and Southern railroad have been elected for the ensuing year: T. B. Sheldon, S. B. Foot, G. H. Crary, L. F. Hubbard, H. E. Perkins, Red Wing; W. C. Rice, Zumbrota; M. J. Toher, Owatonna; W. H. Twiford, Geneva; A. T. Stebbins, Rochester; W. A. Morris, Albert Lea; C. N. McLaughlin, Winona.

Nelson has appointed S. G. Comstock, of Moorhead, a member of the board of directors of the State Normal School, vice G. N. Lanphers, resigned.

Martha Kuesters, received at the prison from Mankato, two years ago, on a sentence of nine years and two months for the murder of her two children, was sent to the Rochester asylum. She has been insane.

R. Langeseth, formerly senior member of the firm of Langeseth & Lundquist, of Hawley, was robbed of $1,000 cash. Mr. Langeseth had just sold out and left with his family for his old home in Norway, but before the train had reached Lake Park he found that his pocketbook containing $1,000 was gone.

The state railroad and warehouse commission has determined to discontinue employing an assistant secretary after Jan. 1. The title of the office will not be abolished, but the $1,800 salary of the position will be reserved for the employment of expert help for the secretary of the commission as needed from time to time.

Suit has been brought against the proprietors of the Delicatessen restaurant, at St. Paul, by a colored man named W. A. Hazel, who brings the suit in the name of his wife, alleging that discrimination against his wife was shown at the establishment mentioned, owing to her color.

Three men of Tower, returned from a successful hunt at Norway, about 14 miles from there. The party brought in seven good sized deer.

A thief who was evidently onto his job and who had figured on the details to a nicety, recently entered the jewelery store of S. W. Morgan at Winona and abstracted from one of the trays, two rings with fine diamond settings.

TO AID EMPLOYES.

A New Scheme of the W. L. Douglas Shoe Co.—Will Furnish Their Help with Medical Attendance.

William L. Douglas, the president of the world famed W. L. Douglas Shoe Co., has always had a great personal interest in the army of men and women who inhabit the great factory at Montello during the working hours of the day, and who make the greatly advertised $3 shoe.

He is a great believer in the idea that manufacturers should have this personal interest in the condition of their employes, and feels that if the idea is carried out to the extent that is possible, that it will result ultimately in the breaking down of the barriers which have been built up between employers and those whom they employ. He believes that the breaking down of these invisible but strong barriers would be a great thing for everybody concerned, as it would convince the workingmen that their employers were not their enemies, as some of them seem to think now, but their friends, with a desire to do all for them that was in their power.

Having strong feelings upon this point, it is only natural that Mr. Douglas should give the matter some study and acquaint himself with the result of the trials of such plans in other places. He is satisfied that the scheme he has originated is a good one, and he has now put it to practical test.

To-day he handed to every person in his employ—and they form a small army—a card, a fac-simile of which is here given:

This ticket entitles ——— Residence ——— to full and free medical attendance while employed by the W. L. Douglas Shoe Company. A competent and skillful physician will be at the private office of the company at 12 M., daily, except Sundays and holidays.

If said employe should be detained at home by sickness, the physician will give full and free medical attendance there.

W. L. DOUGLAS SHOE CO.,
by W. L. Douglas,
President.

———Room.

CONDITIONS.

The physician will not make visits outside the city limits. This ticket is not transferable, and does not apply to the family of the employe, and must be returned as soon as the term of employment ceases. This privilege is a free gift of the company and is no part of the contract for wages, and may be made void by the company, at its own option, without notice.

This is a practical illustration of Mr. Douglas' idea, and will surely be appreciated by the hundreds who receive the cards.

He says that he believes there are hundreds of workingmen and workingwomen who find a doctor's bill a great burden after a period of enforced idleness, and that if this is lifted from them they must feel that their employer is interested in them in some other way than simply to get all the work he can for just as little money as he can. He says also that there are men and women who keep right at work when it would be better for their health if they would lay off a day or two and have medical attendance. Then again they will now feel free to consult the doctor when they have slight troubles, which heretofore they would not do because of the cost.

The plan goes into effect to-day. Dr. S. J. Gruver has been engaged as the physician and enters upon his duties to-morrow.

The plan is a good one.

Speaking of the W. L. Douglas Shoe Co. it may be said that their factory is the only one in the city where the principle of arbitration is recognized and has full sway. Mr. Douglas is a firm believer in the principle and has been since the establishment of the state board of arbitration. He claims that labor troubles would not be as frequent as they are if manufacturers and help would recognize this great principle, and adopt it.

The firm obliges every man who is hired to sign an agreement to submit any disagreement that may arise, and which cannot be settled by the interested parties, to the state board of arbitration, the decision of that board to be final and to be binding on both sides. Pending a settlement of any disagreement the men agree to continue at work. This agreement went in force December 10, 1888, and has worked well. It is signed by the L. P. U. on behalf of the lasters.—Brockton (Mass.) Daily Enterprise.

A Community of Wives.

In Ashantee no man is ever allowed to see one of the king's wives, and should he happen, through accident, to get a glimpse of one of the "sacred creatures" he is forthwith put to death. The law of that country allows the king to have three thousand three hundred and thirty-three "helpmeets" and no more. These wives all live on two long streets in the city of Ccomasie, the Ashantee capital, the quarters occupied by them being locally known by a word signifying "heaven."

Cotton from Wood.

An artificial cotton, said to be much cheaper than the natural, is reported from France. It is made from the wood of the pine, spruce or larch, which is defibrated and then disintegrated and bleached with a hot solution of bisulphide of soda and chloride of lime. The resulting pure cellulose is treated with chloride of zinc, castor oil and gelatine, and the paste is passed through a perforated plate. This gives a thread, which is woven into a presentable fabric.

Ruskin Hated Chrysanthemums.

Mr. Ruskin was asked if he did not admire chrysanthemums in the quad. Now, he liked nothing abnormal or artificial, and he regarded the production of chrysanthemums as an unhallowed attempt to grow flowers at a season when nature meant that there should be no flowers, and so the startling answer came: "I hate chrysanthemums."—Westminster Gazette.

OVER THE HILLS AND FAR AWAY.

Over the hills and far away,
A little boy steals from his morning play,
And under the blossoming apple tree
He lies and he dreams of things to be;
Of battles fought and of victories won,
Of wrongs o'erthrown and of great deeds done;
Of the valor that he shall prove some day
Over the hills and far away—
Over the hills, and far away!

Over the hills and far away,
It's oh for the toil the livelong day!
But it mattereth not to the soul aflame
With the love for riches and power and fame!
On, O man! while the sun is high—
On to the certain joys that lie
Yonder where blazeth the noon of day,
Over the hills and far away—
Over the hills, and far away!

Over the hills and far away,
An old man lingers at close of day;
Now that his journey is almost done,
His battles fought and his victories won,
The old time honesty and truth,
The trustfulness and the friends of youth,
Home and mother—where are they?
Over the hills and far away—
Over the years and far away!

COWBOY AND CORSET.

BY CAPTAIN JACK CRAWFORD.

"I jest wish you had never went to Dallas. I wish you'd stayed here on the ranch an' kep' on a bein' yer own self, stead o' driftin' off the range to the city an' a makin' a play to be a high-tone leddy. Y'ain't like yo' used to be, Cassie."

There was a scowl on the cowboy's face as he stood before Cassie Denton, the daughter of the owner of the Texas ranch at which he was employed. The face of the bright-eyed little maiden wore a pained look as she toyed with the buckskin wrist loop which depended from the handle of the six-shooter in his belt.

"I knowed just how it would be," he continued. "When yer pop got the notion into his head that yo' must be edicated an' be a leddy, I tol' him it's spile yo'. I tol' him yo' never would be the same gal no mo', that yer little head 'd git turned there among the fine stock, an' yo' wouldn't have no mo' use fur graded critters sich as the riders o' the ranges."

"But Bob," the girl interrupted, "I am not changed in my feelings toward you. I love you just as well as I did the day pop said I could marry you, and he sent me to school for two years just to make me fit to be your wife. It was all for your sake, Bob, and it's real bad of you to act so after I had studied so hard to make of myself a lady worthy of such a man as you. I know I'm not like I used to be. I am not rough and wild like I was once, I dress better and I talk better. It's refinement, Bob—that what Miss Bentley, the teacher, said, and she said that a girl without refinement was just a wart on the face of society. That's just what she said, Bob, in her own words, and I feel like crying at the way you act."

"I'd a whole lot rather see you a good, healthy wart on the face o' society than to see yo' a dab o' bright paint on one o' its cheeks, or a string o' no 'count beads a hangin' about its neck. Style is fur them that lives in cities, Cassie, an' is jest as much out o' place in here on the ranch as a cheap herdin' greaser 'd be out o' place in glory. I'd never believed it of yo', Cassie, that yo'd come back here with your foretop curled up in a bunch, an' a corset cinched 'round yo'. I wouldn't. I swear I wouldn't. No woman kin make a rancher a good wife that wears a fashion pack-saddle, an' bunches up her mane like yours is bunched. I mout git over the curl business in time, but I ain't never goin' to have no wife that'll cinch herself up so's she can't breathe below—"

With a scream of laughter the girl placed her hand over his mouth and checked his further speech.

"Oh! Bob, Bob, you naughty boy! Is it my poor little corset that has come between us to ward off your love? Oh! I must laugh, for it's really the funniest thing I ever heard of. Why, Bob, I could never live without a corset. It is such a support and comfort, and you know, you wicked boy, that my figure is much prettier than it was before I went to Dallas. Isn't it, now?"

She placed her hands against her waist and waltzed saucily around so that he could inspect her neat form.

"No, tain't. 'Tain't free an' easy like God intended it should be. If He'd a wanted yo' pinched up like y' are now, He'd 'a built yo' that way. There'd be jest as much sense in cinchin' up cows to make 'em look purty. Yo'd laugh yer eyes out to see a cow a goin' 'round here with corsets on an', yo' hear me, it's jest as ridiculous fur a gal to do it. I'm a goin' to round up the ranges fur a gal 'at's got more savey than to wear sich monstrousities, 'relse I never will double up in matermony long as I live. Throw 'em away, Cassie, or yo' an' me won't be nothin' much to each other no mo'."

"Bob, I won't make a fool of myself for a little senseless whim such as yours. I'll wear what I please, and if it don't exactly meet with your ideas of propriety you can go and round up a girl that's willing to put up with your nonsense."

The little girl was angry now, and with a spiteful flirt of her skirts she turned from him and went into the house. Her anger was like a passing summer cloud, and when in a few moments it had spent itself she ran to her room, and, throwing herself on the bed, burst into tears. She knew Bob Taylor loved her dearly, and, rough and uneducated as he was, she almost worshiped the handsome young cowboy. She would gladly have consigned the offending article of dress to the waters of the Brazos, which ran near the house, but she could not for a moment countenance such an unreasonable whim on Bob's part, and with set teeth and clinched hands she vowed that if her lover took her to be his wife the corset must be included in the inventory of her personal effects.

Days sped by, and Bob passed and repassed her about the house, seemingly as oblivious of her presence as if she were a thousand miles away. Only once did he notice her, when, in maidenly desperation at his coldness, she asked:

"Ain't you never going to make up, Bob?"

"Not till you skin off that infernal pack saddle," was the surly reply.

Their love had been a fruitful and never stale topic of conversation among the pupils of Miss Bentley's school for girls in Dallas, and in all their confidential chats Cassie had heard of but one effective method of whipping a recalcitrant lover back into the traces: "Flirt with some other fellow." Her only fear was that if she should try the experiment Bob might lose control of his temper and shoot the other fellow, and as a result he might be locked up for a long, long time in a cheerless prison and the marriage be necessarily postponed until the misdemeanor was atoned for. The judge might be a cruel old monster with no sympathy for young lovers and might send him into retirement for years, and she might become a wrinkled or calcimined old maid before he again breathed the air of freedom. That would be terrible. But, pshaw! Bob would never be so foolish as to puff out a human light for one little girl in a country literally running over with the prettiest girls in America. Not he. Anyhow, she would risk it, and if Ben Allison, of the Diamond O ranch, came around and made eyes at her again as he had done on several occasions she would encourage him just the least bit, and then, when Bob recovered from the fit of temporary insanity into which her corset had thrown him and came to her in a penitent mood she would throw herself into his dear arms and tell him that she never did, never would and never could love anyone but him. Of course he would forgive her and kiss her tears away, and the sun of love would again burst forth and shine over them with new and exquisite luster.

Ben Allison's heart became real unruly when at his next visit to the Denton ranch Cassie met him with a welcoming smile, extended her pretty little hand and permitted him to hold it quite a little while after he had got through shaking it. After this gratifying reception his visits increased in frequency, and although, with great feminine tact, the girl kept his ardor within proper bounds, she did not repulse him, and it soon became noised about among the riders of the ranges that "Ben was sure goin' to pitch a matrimonial rope at Cassie Benton, an' the little threrbred 'd soon pack his brand."

Bob noted all this, and his heart was filled with bitterness toward his supposed rival. He never cast the look of recognition upon Cassie, yet when he would see her moving about the house or corrals or galloping about the range on her pretty little pinto pony, it began to dawn upon him that her corseted form was indeed far neater than that of any girl on all the ranges of the Brazos. After a time he was ready to swear that he had never seen anything one-half so handsome as that neat, graceful figure, and the uncorseted girls of his acquaintance seemed almost frightful in his eyes when he gazed upon their loose, dumpy forms. He began to harbor the impression that he had made a very pronounced fool of himself, but his stubborn nature asserted itself. He had said the corset must go, and go it must.

"That's a 'way-up-on-top gal sence she got back from Dallas; ain't she, Bob?" Allison said to him one day, when they met in the corral of the Denton ranch.

"You don't want to make no funny plays about that gal when I'm around," Bob hotly replied.

"I hain't never yit found out that it makes any difference who's around or who ain't around when I want to make a talk play," retorted Allison.

"Some things gits found out mighty sudden, Ben Allison, an' this ain't goin' to be fur from one of 'em. I want to tell you right now, an' to holler it out plain, too, that yo' are a nosin' 'round this ranch too plenty o' late instead of ridin' your own ranch, an' I ain't a goin' to stand it no mo'."

"Mebbe you wouldn't mind tellin' me what business it is o' yours whar' I ride. Long as the gal's throwed you to one side you ain't got no say as to other fellers pitchin' a rope at her."

"Yer a liar when yo' say she's throwed me, an' yo' know it, an' yo' want to hit the Diamond O trail right now or you an' me's a-go in' to bump together pow'ful hard. Jest top that hoss o' yours an' work him lively away from here, or a calamity's a-goin' to occur right quick."

"You talk mighty brave fur a cast-off shoe, Bob Taylor, an' you can't begin the bumpin' business any too quick to suit me, you poor, worthless sneak."

That was the limit. The two men, their eyes blazing with anger, backed away from each other, drawing their six-shooters as they went. The guns were thrown into position for quick work, just as a slight girlish form darted around the corner of the adobe stable and sprang in front of Taylor. Allison's pistol rang out before he noted the presence of the girl, and with a scream of pain she fell senseless to the ground. The man who had fired the shot fled in terror, and Bob bent over his wounded darling, calling her by the most endearing names and begging her to live for his sake.

The form of the girl was borne into the house, and a doctor from Waco, who was fortunately there, attending a cowboy who was down with the break-bone fever, was called in.

"Is she dead, doctor?" asked Bob, in tones of the most pitiable agony.

"No, only stunned. Ball struck a corset steel and glanced off. She will be all right soon, but it was a close call, my boy, and she undoubtedly saved your life."

Cassie soon recovered consciousness, and, with joy in his every tone, Bob confessed what a fool he had been, and begged for forgiveness. Of course it was sweetly granted, and he declared that the marriage must take place just as soon as she became able to stand before the minister.

"And can I wear my corset, dear?" she coyly asked.

"Wear what saved yo' fur me? Cassie, I wouldn't have you throw that away fur a million dollars. You kin wear two of 'm if yo' want to, an' if yo' say so I'll wear one myself."—N. Y. Telegram.

Electricity No Infant.

Referring to the common statement that electricity is still in its infancy, Prof. Dolbear recently said: "Electricity is not in its infancy. Despite what has been done, there is nothing in the present use of electricity that has not been known for many years. Arc lights were known eighty years ago; the telegraph is sixty years old, the telephone thirty, and the incandescent lamp ditto. We are now at work with new things or on new principles. If you are running a motor with electricity, it is not a new discovery in electricity to apply the same power to the operation of a lathe or a street car."

—La Moille river, in Vermont, was at first called La Monette, "the sea gull," from the great abundance of these birds.

BISSELL'S REPORT.

Suggestions of the Postmaster General Regarding His Department.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Postmaster General Bissell's annual report contains a number of novel, almost unique suggestions and recommendations, but these are associated with practical ideas and plans that render them of more than ordinary value and tend to incite deeper study into their scope and worth. The policy which Mr. Bissell has outlined may be briefly given in his own words. He says:

"In general I would recommend that the first and most important thing to be done is to revise the law as to second-class mail matter so as to place the post office department immediately upon a self-sustaining basis.

"2. Avoid expensive experiments, like the postal telegraph, rural free delivery, etc.

"3. Develop the postal service on existing lines of administration, viz.: (a). Extend free delivery in cities that now enjoy it; (b), accord it to towns already entitled to it under the law; (c), quicken railroad transportation.

"4. Revise and reclassify organization of the railway mail service, and reclassify clerks in post offices, and

"5. Provide for district supervision of postal affairs by appointment of expert postal officials from classified service, as recommended in my last annual report."

The most important topic in the report is treated under the explanatory caption: "Abuses connected with second-class matter." Mr. Bissell states without reserve that advertisers, book publishers and others have taken advantage of the broad construction of what constitutes matter of the second class by sending out their advertisements and periodicals under the technical disguise of newspapers and periodicals, and have thus secured the benefit of the lower rate of postage. He has discovered that the abuse has grown so great that it now costs the government eight times as much to carry second class matter as the revenue derived from it.

Mr. Bissell also states that the publications of fraternal, scientific, educational, trades professional, literary and historical organizations, admitted to the privilege of second-class matter under the act of July 16, 1894, are almost wholly of a mere advertising character, and are, therefore, not of the class to which any exceptional privilege should be given. It is in the concluding paragraphs on this topic of second-class matter that Mr. Bissell makes a suggestion of much interest.

Continuing, he says: "I do not advocate a change of rates now upon legitimate newspapers and periodical magazines. My purpose is to urge the withdrawal of low postage rates from the large class of pretended periodicals that are improperly enjoying them.

"If it be the policy of the congress to continue the privilege of second-class rates to benevolent or fraternal societies, then the remedy I would suggest would be an amendment of the law limiting this rate to them and to legitimate newspapers and legitimate periodical magazines.

"I believe that one year's experience under such limitations, with the frauds and abuses checked, would demonstrate that we have already reached the time and conditions when all such legitimate newspapers and periodical magazines may be transmitted through our mails from publishers into the hands of subscribers free of all cost."

Regarding civil service reform in the post office department, Mr. Bissell contends that it should be extended wherever practical and suggests that the lower grade—the fourth class—of postmasters might be included within the benefits of the civil service law.

Upon the subject of the postal telegraph Mr. Bissell disagrees with his predecessor, Mr. Wanamaker, with reference to the desirability. He thinks it wholly impracticable at this time, and contends that our existing postal service should be fully developed before adopting postal telegraphy, which would add enormously to the already large deficit of the post office department.

Mr. Bissell thinks the experimental free delivery should be discontinued or else extended to all villages and towns, but he cannot recommend the latter, as it would cost too much, with little benefit to be obtained. He says that free delivery in rural districts is not needed or desired by the people.

GEN. BOOTH IN CHICAGO.

Commander of the Salvation Army Explains His Social Scheme.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Gen. William Booth, the picturesque founder and present head of the Salvation army, met the representatives of the Chicago newspapers in the rooms of the Press club Thursday morning. Gen. Booth had just arrived in Chicago over the Michigan Central road from Saginaw.

Gen. Booth began by telling his hosts in a general way the object of his visit to America. He camehod to see what more could be done in the furtherance of the army's work here. He also wanted to see the American people, explain to them more fully the object of the army and the principles of his social scheme, get the prayers of more of the good people and get a little more of the rich people's money.

With reference to his social scheme, he was asked how he proposed to solve labor difficulties. He said there was only one way, and that was to transfer the surplus of laboring men. If in one spot there was work for only 1,200 men and 1,500 men were looking for jobs, the 300 who were left idle, in order to secure employment, would offer their services cheaper. This would cause strikes. The remedy in such a case would be to remove the surplus of help to some less thickly populated portion of this country and give to each man a portion of ground to till for himself.

Here the general was interrupted and asked if he did not consider the farmers one of the most miserable classes in the world to-day. He replied:

"One of the most miserable, but the trouble lies in the fact that the farmer of to-day farms for the market instead of farming for himself. If he would eat what he raised he would have plenty and still something to market. Then he would be independent. A man has an instinctive liking for a piece of land all his own, and if he could be taught to run his farm on the proper plan he would be thoroughly independent. Independence would bring contentment and among all the classes of people of this earth there is a no more happy community than a contented peasantry."

The great evil in America was the government, he said. Majorities were generally foolish in their opinions. However, he did not indorse monarchies or aristocracies. He favored the government which controlled the Salvation Army, which he said was not military in the strict sense of that term. It was a government of love. The wisest and best men should be at the head and the others to obey; that was the plan. It was David's idea of government, and it was his.

The Indiana Arrives.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.—The American line steamship Indiana, from Liverpool, was reported at the breakwater at 8 o'clock Monday night. She is just one week overdue and the friends and relatives of her 140 steerage passengers and crew of sixty men were concerned about her safety.

Suit Involving $11,000,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Hearings of the suit of the soldiers' orphans' home of St. Louis against Russell Sage and the heirs of the late Jay Gould, to compel the return of about $11,000,000 in bonds of the Texas Pacific Railroad company, has been set down for December 7 by Surrogate Fitzgerald.

Sued for $55,000.

DUBUQUE, Ia., Nov. 23.—Owners of property destroyed in the lumber fire last June have filed suits in the United States court against the Chicago Great Western railway claiming an aggregate of $55,000. They allege the fire was caused by a locomotive spark.

CHANGES FOR THE BETTER.

Dun's Report on the Commercial Interests of the Country.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

"There are some changes for the better. The gain is slow, and in some directions not very distinct, but the signs of it are a little more definite than last week. The most important of them is larger employment of labor, answering a better demand on the whole for manufactured products. Much of this is due to the unnatural delay of orders for the winter which resulted from long prolonged uncertainty, but it means actual increase in earnings and purchasing power of the millions, and so gives promise of a larger demand in the future. Prices of farm products in the aggregate do not improve, but the prevailing hopefulness is felt in somewhat larger transactions.

"A little premium on gold, for the first time since 1878, naturally excites some comment, even though it is only the smallest fraction, and apparently due to temporary causes. Undeniably it reflects a disposition to hold gold, which answers to the desire of the government to get gold without redeeming its notes. About $5,200,000 has been drawn from the treasury by redemption of notes, and it is supposed that much more will be withdrawn, perhaps after the award of bonds, so that the first payment may not raise the gold reserve higher than it was a week ago. The upward tendency of sterling exchange points the same way; the admitted need of borrowing does not increase confidence. But after the treasury reserve has been replenished greater confidence may follow.

"It is expected that a syndicate will bid for the full amount of bonds at a price making the rate 3 per cent. or a little less, and that other bids will also be large, but how much gold the treasury will get or keep is problematic.

"There is no improvement in the demand for commercial loans and money still drifts to this center, scarcely any going south and none west.

"The wheat market has lost this week the cent it gained last week, western receipts being larger and Atlantic exports are also larger —567,711 bushels against 703,026 last year—but these are of small account compared with the great visible supply. Foreign reports this week have been rather more promising, though the fact remains that the world's crop outside of the United States is probably the largest ever grown. Corn has declined 1½ cents, receipts having been increased.

"Textile industries have added a few factories to the working list, against only one or two withdrawn and there has been improvement in the demand for woolens. More supplementary orders for spring have been received and colder weather has increased the demand for heavy goods. Yet on the whole the market is not active and the manufacture is much below the capacity of works.

"The shoe industry leads all others in approaching full production. Shipments from Boston have been for November thus far 642,943 cars against 453,949 last year and 582,582 in 1892. The number of cases shipped has been larger since January 1 than in any previous year. In spite of the general demand for cheaper grades, this is a most encouraging record.

"The iron industry again records lower prices for Bessemer iron—$10.40 at Pittsburgh —and for some manufactured products. The consumption is large, and for the season fairly well maintained, but as it is not equal to the capacity of works in operation, their struggle to get business keeps prices at the bottom.

"The failures for two weeks of November have been moderately large in amount, reported liabilities being $6,562,303, of which $1,713,486 were of manufacturing and $3,831,289 of trading concerns. For the same week last year liabilities were over $7,200,000. The failures this week have been 322 in the United States, against 385 last year, and 31 in Canada, against 34 last year."

A SEVERE BLOW.

Capture of Port Arthur by the Japs Renders China Helpless.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Officials of the state and navy departments are agreed that the capture of Port Arthur renders China helpless, and no doubt is expressed that overtures for peace will be immediately submitted to Japan through the good offices of Ministers Denby and Dun.

YOKOHAMA, Nov. 27.—Latest information as to the capture of Port Arthur says the Japanese attack commenced at daybreak Wednesday. It was directed against several forts in the rear of Port Arthur. The first army advanced from the right side and the Kumammoto brigade advanced from the left, while the heavy artillery was concentrated in the center in order to bombard the castle. The first army captured a fort on the west at 8 o'clock in the morning and entered Port Arthur at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The Wagonsen fort was captured at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The Kumammoto brigade took the westward forts at 11 o'clock. The fighting was continued through the night and until the next morning, when all the coast forts were in possession of the Japanese.

The third Japanese army, which left Japan November 20, is supposed to have been sent to attack Wei Hai, where a portion of the Chinese navy remains. The dispatch adds that the place will be easily captured, as the Chinese soldiers, who were encamped for its defense at Chiliz, are deserting in thousands. The whole place is said to be in a state of utter collapse and confusion.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—A dispatch sent from Port Arthur via Hwang Ju Thursday has been received here. It says the Chinese fought vigorously. The Japanese lost 250 men, killed or wounded. The Chinese loss was over 1,000. Several thousand were taken prisoners. The Japanese have taken quite eighty guns and mortars that were in use in the captured forts and redoubts and many others that were found in the dockyard. They have also captured an immense quantity of ammunition, completely equipped torpedo stores, and large quantities of rice and beans.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The Chee Foo correspondent of the Times telegraphs that Port Arthur is still burning.

A dispatch from Paris says that the Chinese officials are telegraphing everywhere that the story of Port Arthur's downfall is a wicked invention and that 30,000 brave Chinese soldiers still defend that port.

'NEATH A FALLEN WALL

One Man Killed and Several Injured at Springfield, Ill.

Peter Weldon Loses an Arm.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Nov. 23.—Peter Weldon, one of the chief "angels" at Schweinfurth's "heaven," and son of the man who deeded the bogus Lord his 100-acre farm, had his arm torn from his body and chopped to pieces in a patent corn-husker Thursday.

One Life Lost.

YANKTON, S. D., Nov. 26.—The Central house took fire from an explosion of gasoline Saturday morning and was burned out. Lott B. Wolfe, a cripple from Worthington, Kan., was suffocated and taken out dead.

CHINESE CONSUMPTIVES.

The Mongolians Speedily Succumb to the Dread Disease.

That there is a large Chinese population in Boston is well known, and yet it is seldom that one hears of a death in the Chinese quarter. The proportion of Chinese residents, says the Boston Transcript, is small as compared with those of other nationalities, and there is no way to tell the exact number of deaths among them, as they are recorded by the city officials under the head of miscellaneous nationalities. Inquiry reveals the fact that Chinamen in nearly every case die of consumption. They are ill, as a rule, but a short time. In their native country their principal diet is rice, which, from its healthfulness, tends to lengthen life. When they begin business here all their habits change. They work early and late, seldom leaving their shops, and as they succeed they begin to eat American food. It is remarked by all with whom they have dealings that they always buy the best the markets afford. It is their custom to work until midnight or after and then enjoy a hearty meal. If they are well to do they are certain to have chickens and whatever fruit can be procured, no matter how expensive it may be. If they have just started in the laundry business it is quite likely that they will form a company and adjourn to the nearest "night lunch wagon" or restaurant.

Living, as most of them do, in such small rooms, when sickness overtakes them they cannot receive proper care and they are carried to the hospitals.

N Society women often feel the effect of too much gayety—balls, theatres, and teas in rapid succession find them worn out, or "run-down" by the end of the season. They suffer from nervousness, sleeplessness and irregularities. The smile and good spirits take flight. It is time to accept the help offered in Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It's a medicine which was discovered and used by a prominent physician for many years in all cases of "female complaint" and the nervous disorders which arise from it. The "Prescription" is a powerful uterine tonic and nervine, especially adapted to woman's delicate wants for it regulates and promotes all the natural functions, builds up, invigorates and cures.

Many women suffer from nervous prostration, or exhaustion, owing to congestion or to disorder of the special functions. The waste products should be quickly got rid of, the local source of irritation relieved and the system invigorated with the "Prescription." Do not take the so-called celery compounds, and nervines which only put the nerves to sleep, but get a lasting cure with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

"FEMALE WEAKNESS."

MRS. HOOVER.

MRS. WILLIAM HOOVER, of Bellville, Richland Co., Ohio, writes: "I had been a great sufferer from 'female weakness;' I tried three doctors; they did me no good; I thought I was an invalid forever. But I heard of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and then I wrote to him and he told me just how to take it. I took eight bottles, I now feel entirely well. I could stand on my feet only a short time, and now I do all my work for my family of five."

"YES," she said, "I'll give you your breakfast, if you'll chop down that tree for me." "Madam," Meandering Mike replied, meekly, "I don't want ter git out o' my class. I'm no Gladstone. Neither am I a George Washington."—Washington Star.

In this Work-a-Day World

Men and women continually break down through mental strain and physical effort. The true repairer of vitality thus impaired, a perennial fountain of health and vigor is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which restores digestion, enriches the blood, and healthfully stimulates the bowels, kidneys and liver when they are indolent. This comprehensive remedy also subdues malaria, rheumatism and nervousness.

DELANO DIARY

—Poultry was uncommonly cheap this Thanksgiving.

—Ferdinand Kelsey is building himself a nice workshop on North River Street.

—N. Franzin is papering and repairing his house opposite the Catholic church, for renters.

—Some of our business men have already laid in a stock of stationery for the next year. Nothing like a little judicious advertising.

—The funeral of Mrs. J. W. Powell was held at the M. E. church on Saturday, Rev. Copp, of Armstrong officiating. A large audience was present, many friends coming from out of town The remains were buried in the Delano cemetery.

—Councilman Coffin returned Monday evening from a visit with Nicollet county friends. He is more than ever pleased with our electric light plant after examining those of other places.

—R. A. Goodrich, of the Merchant's Mercantile Agency, St. Paul, was working our village this week for customers. People who are owing old debts had better drop around and pay up before they hear from that agency.

—Tuesday night was the coldest of the season, and people who were up early on Wednesday morning had the pleasure of seeing their thermometers indicate 8 degrees below zero; thus insuring solid ice for Thanksgiving skating.

—Professor F. N. Leavens, who has been sick for a couple of weeks is reported as improving and it is expected he will be able to take charge of the school again next week. Rev. Davies assisted the teachers in keeping things going this week.

—L. P. Probst, C. G. Roosen and W. M. Mowatt are the latest to hitch onto the city waterworks; and now can turn the faucet and get a supply of water without going to the pump on a cold frosty morning. Who says we ain't up to the times.

—Some of our readers will be glad to learn that through the instrumentality of the GAZETTE and Uncle Sam's mail carrier, A. Rieder, the attention of the P. M. at Rockford has been called to the fact that mail arriving there from Delano in time for the west bound train was in the habit of remaining there till the next day. Mr. Reider informed us this morning that in the future mail leaving here at 7:45 A. M. by his line will be in Buffalo at about 10:30 the same morning; a saving of 24 hours time. Now if the St. Michaels stage will make connection with Mr. Reider's line these cross lines will begin to be of some use to people.

—One of the dog-oned cases was tried before Squire Walters on Tuesday. Some time last summer, B. Yancy could not find his dog, a valuable St. Bernard, for several days. When he did learn of her whereabouts it was to find that she had been shot. George Cramer was charged with the deed and on refusing to settle had papers served on him by the dog owner. The suit dragged along until Tuesday, when Squire Billings, of Minneapolis, appeared in court and secured a dismissal of the case. Another case was at once instituted with M. A. O'Hair for complainant's attorney, and resulted in the defendant being bound over to appear at the next term of district court, at Buffalo, which meets next month.

BUFFALO GAZETTE $1.00 per year.

—Services at the M. E. church on Sunday at 10:30 A. M.

—Everywhere, by Will Carlton, is a new publication, of which we have Vol. 1, No. 3 on our table.

—Presiding Elder R. R. Atchison will preach at the M. E. church on Thursday Dec. 6, at 7:30 P. M.

—Professor Probst accidentally met a number of friends at G. P. Schaffer's store Wednesday evening and seeing a muskrat skin which the merchant had recently purchased, began a learned discourse on the subject of electricity, as developed by friction, and the desirability of the muskrat skin as a rubber. The audience grew larger and became very much interested and the Professor, no longer able to keep down the brakes, inquired in a voice trembling with excitement, "What's the price of this here muskrat skin?" On being told that it was "Five cents" and almost before the words were out of Mr. S's. mouth the Professor tore the skin open and proceeded to wrap it about his good right hand preparatory to giving an example of his skill as an electrician. The entire crowd repaired to the back room where amidst apples, Thanksgiving geese, salt fish and other mercantile commodities, a platform was erected by placing the scale boards on tumblers inverted on the floor. Augie Sieloff was placed on the scaffold and the Professor commenced the "electrocuting" by vigorously rubbing the victim oyer the spinal column and then touching the end of his nose, when lo! and behold! the lightnings flash and the thunder tones of sparks became visible and audible to the now thoroughly interested crowd that thronged about the Professor, drinking in the words of wisdom that dropped from the lips of that learned man, while the sparks continued to fly from the nasal organ of the innocent subject of experiment. After a time as the savant grew more enthusiastic he extended his rubbings and touchings to a bystander who was not insulated, and, wonderful to tell, found that contrary to all expectations, the electric sparks flashed forth with the same unerring precision and regularity, as from the insulated individual. The operator immediately sought for an explanation and soon learned that when he removed a pair of rubber shoes from his own feet his power to produce sparks on non-insulated people was gone. And the sage had made the discovery that rubber shoes are non-conductors and that the operator instead of the subject operated on may wear the shoes.

If the Professor could be induced to appear, with his experiments, in the City Hall, under the auspices of the Delano Literary Society an evening of amusement and instruction for many of our citizens would be the result.

County Cullings.

District Court convenes at Buffalo, on Monday, Dec.3. The county seat will then assume its periodical business airs for a few days.

A couple of burglars damaged the safe in the Monticello bank Sunday evening, but some of the citizens being aroused bs the noise drove them off without securing any money. They have not yet been caught.

Eagles have been known to carry off small animals quite readily, and to devour them at their leisure; but our home bird seems to have thrust her talons into rather a heavy load when she tackled onto that "French hog" and is having a serious time letting go.

Last week's Howard Lake Herald says that Senator Culkin has taken the first steps in a libel action against the GAZETTE. Mr. Culkin personally told us, in our office, on the evening of Nov. 2, nearly three weeks before, that he had instructed his attorney to bring suit. Wonder if the Herald is any less guilty for publishing the objectionable matter than was the GAZETTE? We never considered that we had transgressed in the matter. And don't now.

On the inside of this paper will be found a table giving the State vote. After all the efforts of Republican papers to make it appear that Knute Nelson got 5000 majority the official vote gives them away. Some of them are now trying to have it appear that he ran away behind his ticket, which on examination you will see is not fair. Although in our table a mistake is made in several places by putting "ahead" instean of "behind" Nelson, it is easy to figure for yourself from the figures, which show that: Nelson is short of a majority by 537; D. M. Clough is behind Nelson 2,888; R. C. Dunn is behind Nelsou 3,033; A. T. Koerner is behind Nelson 60.

A. C. Collins Post, Clearwater.

The camp fire given by the members of Post No. 122, at the hall on Tuesday evening was pronounced a grand success. Adjt.-Gen. Mertz was present as speaker for the occasion, and in addition to this each ex-soldier present was called upon to deliver a two-minute speech. A very enjoyable time was spent by all.—Minneapolis Evening Tribune.

Among Our Exchanges.

In seems inevitable that the opposition among the Republicans of Minnesota to the return of W. D. Washburn to the United States senate will crystalize around John Lind, of New Ulm. Mr. Lind represents much that is in the line of reform. His substitution for Washburn in the senate would be most creditable to the Republican party. It would go far towards restoring confidence in the promises of the party to reform present abuses. Mr. Lind is an uncompromising friend of silver. He believes in its free coinage. He believes that its demonetization by the Republican party was the crowning crime of the present century. He believes that the growing power of corporations should be curbed before it is too late. The Representative is informed that he is a strong advocate of the initiative and referendum. This makes him a pretty good People's party man.

He has no barrel, it is true, but his election to the senate in the place of Washburn would be a most creditable act upon the part of the Republicans. —The Representative.

Jadam Not A Ward.

To the editor of the Globe.

St. Paul, Nov. 26, 1894.-For frequent kindly mention in your columns I am much indebted, but beg permission to correct the impression made by an editorial paragraph in your Sunday issue. I am not a candidate for the vacant place on the Chippewa Indian commission nor for any other place. I am not a ward of the government, and have no desire to live on a reservation. As much as I love the children of the forest and their homespun clothing, I prefer an allotment in severalty and can make it myself. If there are any little chunks of jov at the disposal of the administration, let them be passed around to the boys that haven't had anything. That's the best way to hold up a party. Lots of good democrats are not so very busy just now, and wouldn't mind being pulled out of the drift with a golden harpoon.—J. ADAM BEDE in the St. Paul Globe.

A Famous Show of Beauty.

The show of distinguished beauty, transfixed by famous artists, which is now taking place at the Academy of fine arts in New York, has been anticipated by The Cosmopolitan Magazine in its November issue, in an article by Wm. A. Coffin, with illustrations of some of the more beautiful faces. The "Great Passions of History," series has for this month's subjeet the romatic career of Agnes Sorel, who influenced the destinies of France under Charles VII. "The Art Schools of America." "The Great British Northwest Territory," "The Chiefs of the American Press," and the "Public Library Movement," are amongst The Cosmopolitan table of contents. Survivors of the war and their children will find intense interest in "The Story of a Thousand," a personal narrative begun in this number by Albion W. Tourgee, who tells in a graphic way, of a regiment which saw fierce service—of its organization, its marches, its sports, and its death roll.

"There Is No Royal Road" To public favor any more than to learning. This is true, at all events, in America where intrinsic excellence is necessary to secure and retain the popular favor. The reason The North-Western Line is one of the most popular railroads is that its service is not always up to date but AWAY AHEAD OF THE DATE. In our opinion, this is the Best Line between Chicago and the Twin Cities.—The Excursionist, Chicago.

What Would We Do?

If all the world was always bright,
Without a shadow creepin';
And suns kept shinin' day an' night—
What would we do for sleepin'?

If all the skies were always clear,
An' springs jest kept a-stayin',
An' bees made honey all the year—
What would we do for sleighin'?

If everything went jest our way,
An' not a storm was howlin';
An' cash come in for work or play—
What would we do for growlin'?

Jest let the plan o' nature rest—
Be glad for any weather;
The feller who still does his best,
Brings earth an' heaven together!
—F. L. Stanton, in Atlanta Constitution.

JUDGE WILLIS will continue to hold his term of judgship until the six years are up, according to Attorney Child's decision.

MRS. HARRIES, wife of the Internal Revenue Collector, Capt. W. H. Harries, died at home in St. Paul yesterday morning.

THE Representative, of Minneapolis, announces clubbing rates with the Forskaren, a Swedish paper. As "for skaren" the people we believe the Representative still holds the palm.

MAJOR BALDWIN evidently believes in "making hay while the sun shines," and is hard at work on the bills presented by him. He insists on the upper country having the best possible outlet to the seacoast during the summer time at least.

THE Minneapolis police authorities have finally placed under arrest Harry Hayward and his brother, Adry A., for the murder of Miss Ging, a Minneapolis dressmaker, on last Monday evening. It is thought there was a conspiracy to procure her life insurance of $10,000, which was held by Harry.

HYPNOTISM is getting to be the fad now-a-days. Petty crimes and even those more vile, are said to be committed through this influence. Surgical operations are said to be performed while the patient is hypnotized, rather than by the old way, anasheltized. The dentists at the State University have been tinkering with it, until complaints have been made and an investigation called for. Possibly the faculty has been brought under this soothing influence. If the thing is as bad as it has been made out we would suggest that the investigation should be made at once and the public be apprised of the method and power of hypnotism.

LATER, The University has come out from the spell and the practice has been abolished.

A SENSATIONAL item is going the rounds of the papers concerning the actions of the proprietor of a hotel at Crescent City, Fla., who refused to allow the removal of the corpse of a young man from Illinois who had died at his house with consumption, before his hotel bills were paid. We know nothing of this instance or the parties interested further than the item itself contains. But, we do know that, usually, there is another side to such affairs, and probably the landlord had, by experience, learned this fact. It is said that the young man's brother-in-law came after the remains without sufficient funds and the physician, the undertaker and the landlord were asked to wait for their pay. It would have looked better for the parties on such a mission to have procured the money at home, among friends before starting than to expect strangers in a strange land to wait for the pay they had earned. We could cite an instance of a fond mother, able to pay, who for several years has neglected to do so, under somewhat similar circumstances.

ALTHOUGH having freed himself from all entangling alliance with political parties of the State, Mr. Donnelley is now advising a rousing meeting of the peoples party in January. We could hardly presume, so far ahead, to inform our readers of the probable actions of the sage at that time. But being now entirely foot loose, himself, we would not be surprised if, in the "greatest effort" of his eventful life, the scheming old politician would, upon that occasion, elaborate at length upon Mr. Donnelly's ideas of running this great, grand, old republic, that has stood the tests and trials and tribulations of the last century, and, when he has brought himself to believe that he has converted a majority of the convention, and every other aspirant has been completely shown as an impossibility; beyond the passing notice of the party, he will spring a grand surprise upon the unsophisticated crowd, by offering himself to head the forces of the continent for the White House in 1896, by running on a Mr. Donnelly's ticket, free and unshackled; without party brakes of any kind to impede his progress.

FROM the Wabasha Democrat we clip the following:

"Probably our populist readers will be surprised to learn that with the exception of the nominee for governor, every candidate on the democratic state ticket received more votes than their populist opponents. Becker ran 30,000 votes behind Owens, but the other nominees ran from 5000 to 15,000 ahead of the populist candidates. Considering the fact that many democrats voted the straight republican ticket and others voted the straight populist ticket, it would seem that there were some democrats in Minnesota yet. Two years hence, all of these democrats will be expected to vote for their own candidates. The Monitor is confident that its party will come to the front in good shape two years from now. With every vote that could be given him, Owens received only 85,000. The democrats have beaten that figure time and time again, without half trying. Let us pull our forces together for a supreme effort in 1896. We have had a good rest this year and ought to be able to turn out in full fighting force next time. The rest should strengthen the party and improve its fighting qualities.

SOME of the city editors certainly must have overreached themselves in trying to work up the most sensational account of the late murder of Miss Catherine Ging. To country people it seems strange that a young woman who visits saloons, indulges in intoxicants, and displays a roll of bills to the public; and who keeps company with several married men and others of so questionable a character as to necessitate the detention of them with questions and worriments equal to those of the inquisition, so far as mental agony is concerned, for 24 hours and until their nerves are nearly paralyzed, should be held up as a model lady of the city. And when this results only, in the end, to let them go free, on the evidence produced at once upon their capture. And which allows the Mayor and his associates to come in for a share of very severe criticism for the part played by them in so inhumanly treating fellow men under suspicion of even so dastardly a crime as the murder of a personal friend. Nearly all the dailies of both cities appeared to vie with each other as to which could produce the most heartrending and readable account of the murder. Murder of a plain citizen, whose vocation in life secures for her, honestly, her daily bread, by some jealous lover or avaricious gambler is bad enough. But for all the dailies to fill up most of their reading columns with highly colored and sensational yarns about the city, and some of its innocent and inoffensive citizens and officials, in this enlightened age seems to be to sell newspapers containing little else than the one highly colored story; to procure the paltry pennies of the poor, who are led, from the excitement of the occasion, to pay their pittance for products of the press, hoping to satisfy their highly aroused curiosity, only to have their brains still further racked by the ravings of some ambitious reader of yellow covered literature, or who is improving his opportunity to outsensationalize the Arabian Nights. It is bad enough to know that a woman who was respected by her many friends and acquaintances has been foully slain by the assassin's hand under cover of the darkness of night; that every effort has been, and is still being made, to ferret out the criminal and bring him to justice, without insinuating that characters painted by the writers are models of metropolitan life. And inflaming the minds of the youth of not only the city but the entire state with the subject in a wrong rather than a right light.

It would certainly be in better taste, and of more advantage to the city and its inhabitants if things were different from the statements that have been made; otherwise, to many, a city life would be very undesirable. We think the imagination has been given too much leeway by our city bretheren. While dealing the hardest possible blows at hideous crimes don't paint smaller deviations from rectitude as leading in any other direction than to an ignoble end. Whatever may have been the life of the murdered woman, and from the conflicting statements it is hard to say, though all agree that she was a business woman, successful, able to see after her own affairs, and did not make confidants of everyone she chanced to meet, a plain unvarnished statement would be better than so much romance concerning the matter.

Democrats In Earnest!

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Democratic Association last night a plan of work was agreed on which bids fair to hoist the party onto the high plain where it belongs.

BUFFALO GAZETTE $1.00 per year.

No Night Schools.

"Rox" writes asking if there are any night schools in this city, free to the working people.

(There are no public night schools this winter. The board of education was compelled to cut off the evening schools, as in previous years, owing to reduced appropriation.)—St. Paul Dispatch.

This admission looks bad for the capital of a state which boasts of her free schools; and of the vast acres of school lands, and other resources for supplying schools to her citizens. If retrenchment in expenses is necessary it would look better for the city if it could be done by dropping off a squad or so of policemen, whose services would become unnecessary if the evenings of schoolable young men and women who are obliged to earn their living by daily labor were in school instead of the resorts of wickedness and vice in that great city. Would it not be a financial benefit to have night schools?

President's Message Boiled Down.

President Cleveland has handed his Message to Congress and it has been given to the public. It is exceedingly long under the conditions of the present time. He is very pacific in his nature, advocating peace with all nations. He advises the payment of the award made by the Paris triemvirate, to the English for damage done in arresting sealing vessels, etc. He wants Congress to remove the differential duty on beet sugar, so that the Germans will again make a part of their living off of our herds and flocks. He favors a change in the banking system of the country. Advises the strengthening of our military departments. He estimates that our money in circulation amounts to $24.27 per capita. And that the expenses of the government next year will be a couple of million more than this year, and that the revenues will be about $20,000,000 short. He advocates using the law of '75 to raise money by the sale of bonds when actually necessary to maintain the nation's credit. The number of National Banks in existance at the close of October this year, was 40 less than a year ago and was 3,756. He recommends that the rank of Lieutenant-General be temporarily revived and given to Gen. John M. Schofield. He suggests the appointment of an additional circuit judge in each district. The President suggests that the abuse of the 1 cent a pound rate of 2nd class mail matter be looked after and corrected, that legitimate newspapers may derive still greater benefits from the law in the near future. He wants more battleships and torpedo boats. He would like to have Indians and not speculators derive the benefit of the sale of reservation lands; wants our forests preserved as much as possible. 1895 is expected to be high tide of pensions, and an estimate of $140,000,000 has been made. Nine daughters and three widows of the Revolution are pensioners, while 45 survivors of 1812 are on the rolls yet. He compliments Pension Commissioner Lochren's policy of rooting out frauds in high terms. The eleventh census is to be completed by March next.

He deals at length with the Agricultural Department, has faith in the weather predictions. Don't believe in the sending of seeds and agricultural reports, at the expense of the Government, promiscously about the country. Exporters of meat should pay for their own inspectors. He thinks corn will supplant wheat as an article of export. He still adheres to his Civil Service theories, and wants a National Board of Health. The Strike Commissioners' work has been well done and will be handed to Congress. He desires the tariff taken off coal and iron, and that American owners of foreign built vessels be allowed American registry. He wants our country to resume its prestige on the High Seas. Congress did not pass a bill to help him out and he was obliged to issue bonds under the law of 1875. He endorses Secretary Carlisle's currency reform proposition.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 30, 1894.

Neither President Cleveland nor Secretary Gresham has the slightest desire to create a war scare by twisting the British lion's tail, but upon representations made to Secretary Gresham by Dr. Guzman, the Nicaraguan minister to the United States, the U. S. Cruiser Columbia was ordered to Bluefields, Nicaragua, to protect the interests of the United states in that quarter, and Ambassador Bayard was cabled instructions to investigate and if the statements made to Secretary Gresham were found to be true to demand an immediate and full explanation from the British government. That is the exact status of the case at this writing. That England was influenced in its refusal to recognize the right of Nicaragua to exclusive control over the strip of land known as the Mosquito coast by its desire to get its fingers into the building or control of the Nicaragua canal is merely a plausible surmise. Nothing official or unofficial is known in Washington upon which to base a positive statement that such is the fact. No new question is involved in the matter; it is merely a reopening of an old question which was thought to be satisfactorily settled a long while ago. Not the slightest apprehension of any serious trouble with England is felt by any member of the administration. All statements to the contrary are merely sensational fakes.

President Cleveland ate his Thanksgiving turkey at his country residence, to which he has been confined for ten days by a very painful attack of rheumatic gout, and, as he needed all the time at his disposal to put the finishing touches upon his message to Congress, the family had no company to dinner. Secretary and Mrs. Carlisle entertained a large party at dinner. Among them guests were Postmaster General and Mrs. Bissell, Attorney General and Mrs. Olney, and Private Secretary and Mrs. Thurber.

Representative Catchings, of Miss., one of the democratic leaders of the House, is in town. He says: "I would like to see the popgun bills passed at the short session. But these will not mark the end of tariff agitation. Neither will the republican victory, despite the declaration of the leaders of that party to the contrary. If the leaders could control matters and remain of the same mind as now, perhaps all would remain well in that direction. But they are not calculating on the immense pressure that will be brought to bear upon them, if they should regain power, by the protected interests and their constituents. They came here to the Fifty-first congress with a firm intention of revising the tariff on a reasonable basis. But they found the pressure too strong, and went to the extreme of the McKinley bill. You can be assured that tariff agitation will not cease in this country until the whole question is settled upon democratic lines."

Chairman Spriuger, of the House committee on Banking and Currency, is not hopeful of any financial legislation at the short session, although he fully recognizes the urgent need for speedy legislation on the subject. He thinks it absolutely impossible for either President Cleveland or any other man to propose any scheme of currency reform that will secure the support of a majority of the members of the House, not to mention the Senate, where there is also a numerous assortment of disagreeing financial opinions. Others think differently, however, and believe that some common financial basis can be found upon which all good democrats can stand, although they admit that it will be so difficult as to make it improbable that an agreement can be reached during the three months that Congress will remain under democratic control. The impression is that President Cleveland's recommendations will either add to the probability of democratic agreement or will make agreement impossible.

Many democrats are pleased with the rumor that President Cleveland will include in his financial recommendation to Congress the repeal of the ten per cent tax on state bank currency and a proposition that will enlarge the use of silver by making it a part of the basis for the issue of a bank note currency. Your correspondent has been unable to either verify or disprove the rumor.

The most gratifying thing about the Congressional situation, from a democratic point of view, is the unanimity with which democratic Senators and Representatives now in Washington reply to queries as to what will be the programme of the coming session. They all say in substance: We will wait until the President has made his recommendations; we desire that whatever is done be done harmoniously, if possible. There is little doubt that many democrats who have opposed the President, are ready to meet him half way in any efforts that may be made for the good of the party, and if the hot-heads can only be kept quiet there may be some pleasant surprises for democrats.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

Fine weather for this time of the year; California cannot beat it. If the weather prognosticators foretold this beautiful weather they should be presented with a handsome chromo. Most people say they prefer this kind of weather to deep snows with the thermometer 20 degrees below zero.

Some say the times are improving since election is over and everybody has got down to business.

Quite a number are hauling loose hay to Minneapolis and for it they realize a fair price for these hard times.

Mr. Herbert Hall and Miss Melinda Hildebrant, both of Independence, were married in Minneapolis on the 27th ult.

Mrs. Mary Tomkins and Robert Mills, Jr., are on the sick list.

On last Monday night a lot of big boys, little boys and men, too, gave Mr. Herbert Hall and bride a serenade. The neighbors say there was music in in the air.

One evening last week some of the friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Enos Alger gave them a pleasant surprise party, they having just moved into their new house.

There will be services at the M. E. church in Armstrong next Sunday morning at 10:30.

Robert Mills' daughter, May, is sick with Scarlet Fever.

E. K. Smith had a chopping bee last week.

The Vote-getter Shall Be Our Ruler.

"Our Rulers," was the subject of one of the sermons delivered by Dr. S. G. Smith at the People's church yesterday. He said:

"Every organized society must have leaders. Who shall they be? This is one of the oldest of all questions. The most primitive idea is the military despotism. This is the sort that lies at the foundation of emergent social order. It is a reversion to type when a Napoleon becomes emperor of France, and Napoleon's conqurer, Wellington, becomes prime minister to England. Men saw that something better than the incarnation of force was needed and set themselves to get it. Sparta proposed to put old men in office—the ruling body to be above 60 years of age. Then ambition and passion would be dead. But, alas, strength of body fails before the consuming desires of the heart fail, as Sparta learned too well. Then Solon said in Athens the property idea is the stable one, let us rank our people by their wealth and let interest rule. And the groans of the slave responded to the arrangement in an abiding litany of pain Then philosophers began to teach that wisdom should rule. And Micchiavelli sums it all up in his treatise on 'The Prince,' where he glorifies power gained by any means, and makes a hero out of Agathocles, who mastered Sicily by the slaughter of its leading citizens, pronouncing him a man of the highest genius."

"In America, who shall be our rulers? and the response is, 'The vote getter shall be our ruler.' And who is this vote getter that we should bow down to him. He must be the prince of good fellows, that the convivial classes may shout for him. He must shut his eyes to social disorders, that the multitude who are nearer to the prison than the state house may rally for him. He must not be known for positive convictions, that the worldly wise may applaud him.

"And what can we get from such rulers? We shall have insecurity when we do not have wrong. We shall have neglect of virtue when we do not have outrage. We shall have the wisdom of the weathercock instead of the vision of the political seer. And how shall we improve the state? It can only come by an improvement of our democracy.

"This nation is a tremendous experiment in educating and uplifting voters just by letting them vote and take the consequences. We more than any others need to find out the right way. Our social order risks all upon one throw—the possible elevation of the people. Let us turn, therefore, to the Supremest Master and hear His word on this important theme. 'The Gentiles,' he says in effect, 'regard power as an end. You must regard it as a means. They lord it over their subjects. It must not be so among you. You must choose for your rulers those who show the greatest capacity for service.'

"This is a message for the political order, the social order, the religious order. Let him rule who has the capacity and the willingness to serve."—St. Paul Dispatch.

Invent Something.

"One of the best opportunities for a young man to make money quickly in these days," said a self-made millionaire to a writer in the New York Tribune, "is to rack his brains until he has invented something useful, or that the public wants. A general impression prevails that it takes a skilled engineer or a man of phenominal inventive ability to develop anything useful to manufacturers in this age of machinery. But there is a wide field open to shrewd amateurs, so to speak, to supply little articles of convenience to house-keepers, shop-keepers, etc., and designers can be had at reasonable rates to execute the idea, once it is conceived. American women are so accustomed to getting what they want that anything which lightens their labors in the household is sure to go. When I was a boy on the farm at home, my mother used to make me clean all the dinner knives on Sunday with a bath brick. Now, scraping this brick into fine powder, without lumps in it, used to be the most tedious part of the whole work. The other day I heard of a man who has made a fortune by supplying the trade with powdered bath brick in neat packages. You know how difficult it is to pick up small coins from a wooden counter. Yet the whole civilized world has growled at and endured it since coins were stamped and counters made, until the other day a young fellow invented a rubber mat with little bristles of rubber standing up thickly all over it. Coins thrown on the mat are as easily picked up as if they stood on edge. The public was quick to appreciate it, and the inventor need not work for a living any longer."—Scientific American.

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.
Square Type.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion plates, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the softer sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and it will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put it in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of the whole family.

IN 1889, according to the agricultura reports, there were raised in this country 565,705,000 pounds of tobacco. The acreage was 747,326, and the value of the product was $48,666,665.

THE pickle crop is reported short all over the world. Chicago has shipped 260 carloads of pickles to the east and to Europe, and pickles, before they grow again, will be marked among the scarce luxuries.

AT a recent New York performance two of Jefferson's grandchildren were in an upper box. When Rip Van Winkle began to upset the chairs in his poor little home, one of the grandchildren leaned over and said: "O grandpa, what will grandma say?" It was the funniest thing in the performance.

TREATED birch becomes mahogany of rare beauty, and "soaked" maple goes into all "ebony" pianos now. So cleverly is the "fake" wood "weighted" that nothing short of borings will prove the deception. Maple mahogany is soaked through to a depth of four inches, and will polish even better than the genuine wood.

IN a new work on engineering Prof. Warren discusses the "fatigue" of metals—a striking term used to describe their loss of power of resistance after having been subjected to strain. Car axles grow thus "fatigued" and finally break from the effects of jolts and strains so small that no single one of them seems to have any effect at all.

ONE part of the wedding ceremony among the Babylons was very significant. The priest took a thread from the garment of the bride and another from the garment of the bridegroom and tied them into a knot, which he gave to the bride. This is probably the origin of the modern saying about tying the knot in regard to marriage.

THE world's output of gold has increased from 702,828 tons in 1890 to 2,217,843 tons in 1893, but during the same period the yield per ton decreased from 13.36 to 10.09 pennyweights. T. A. Richards writes that "the steady decrease in the yield per ton is due to the exhaustion of the higher grade, free-milling ore near the surface."

IT is only possible for February to have five Sundays three times in each century, unless, through some chronological freak the century comes in with a leap year, with the first day of February a Sunday. The five Sunday Februarys of this century have been those of 1824 and 1852 and 1880. The next time this oddity will occur will be in the year 1920.

THE Georgia senate has passed a bill making it a penal offense for any person to make remarks or write articles that reflect upon the good name of a woman. The bill calls to mind that in the old days there were laws against scolding and tattling, as well as laws against slander, and that the ducking stool was nigh in favor as an inducer of polite conversation.

IN making treaties with China each foreign country has chosen its own name. England is Ying Kwo, the flourishing country; France is Fa Kwo, the law-abiding country; the United States, Mei Kwo, the beautiful country; Germany, Je Kwo, the virtuous country; Italy, I Kwo, the country of justice; Japan is Ji Kwo, the land of the sun, but she prefers to be called Ji Pen, the land of the rising sun.

ABOUT twenty years ago Germany adopted the system of compulsory insurance of workingmen against accidents. Since that time there has been paid into the reserve fund about $88,000,000, of which about $20,000,000 now forms the capital. In the year last reported more than $7,500,000 was paid in indemnities, and more than $3,000,000 was added to the reserve fund. It is now proposed to extend the system to apprentices and employes whose wages do not exceed $476 a year.

STATISTICS published in a Swiss newspaper show that mountain climbing has been attended with an unusual number of accidents this season. Since the 1st of July fifty-two deaths have occurred and there have been thirteen cases of serious injury. In the Swiss Alps alone there have been thirty-three fatal accidents and seven cases of injury. The rest were in the Austrian, Bavarian, Italian and French mountains. Four climbers who have disappeared are not included in these figures, although there is little doubt that they should be added to the list of the killed.

WE speak of "China" and the "Chinese," little thinking that the natives of the flowery kingdom never hear those terms until after leaving the place of their birth or coming in contact with some traveler. They have many names by which they designate themselves and the land which they inhabit, but "Chinese" and "China" are not among the number. The most ancient name of China is Tien Hia, which signifies "beneath the sky." Since the present ruling house took control of the empire in 1650 the name of Ta Tsing Kwoh has been applied to the kingdom as a whole.

THERE are some odd names for game birds far down the Chesapeake. A small shy snipe that flies with a twittering noise is called the horsefoot snipe, because of its fondness for the horsefoot or horseshoe crab. It is called also the turnstone, from its habit of overturning pebbles in search of food. The telltale snipe bears that name because it always sounds a note of alarm at the sight of a gunner. Chesapeake gunners believe that a single telltale can clear a whole region of game birds. The widgeon is called the bald pate, and the willet so called because of its cry: "Will-will-willet!"

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

Proceedings of the Second Session.

MONDAY, Dec. 3.—The second session of the Fifty-third congress commenced. In the senate, after organization and listening to the president's message, several resolutions were offered, among them being one by Senator Peffer for an investigation into the legality of the issuance of bonds. In the house the secretary of the treasury's estimate of appropriations required for the service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, aggregating $410,435,079, was received. Mr. Hartman, of Montana, introduced a bill providing for the free coinage of silver. The president's message was read.

FROM WASHINGTON.

SECRETARY LAMONT in his annual report urges an increase in the army to 30,000, and praises the men for their work during the strikes. The expenditures for the last fiscal year were $56,0-9,009, the appropriations for the current year are $52,429,112, and the estimates for the next year are $52,-218,629.

IN the seven days ended on the 30th ult., there were 289 business failures in the United States against 322 the week previous and 271 in the corresponding time in 1893.

GOVERNMENT receipts from customs during November were $10,260,692; from internal revenue, $7,784,074; from miscellaneous sources, $1,376,637, making the total receipts for the month $19,411,403, and for the last five months $136,398,917. The disbursements for the month amount to $27,567,770, making the disbursements for the five months $158,909,043.

JAMES KERR, clerk of the house of representatives, in his report shows that for the year ended June 30, 1894, the salaries of members and other expenses of the house amounted to $930,-930, of which total $256,539 was for the hire of members' clerks.

THE secretary of state declared untrue the report that Minister Denby had cabled that the legation at Peking was in danger.

TREASURY figures show the receipts from all sources during the month of November to have been $19,411,403; disbursements, $28,477,188, which leaves the deficit for the month $9,065,785 and for the five months of the present fiscal year $22,295,152.

COMPTROLLER ECKELS in his annual report advises a change from a bond to a safety fund security as a basis for bank circulation.

IT was shown by the eleventh annual report of the United States civil service commission that from July 1, 1893, to June 30, 1894, 4,372 appointments were made in the classified service, an increase of eighty-three over the previous year.

AT the mints of the United States the coinage during the month of November was as follows: Gold, $2,040,-000; silver, $1,073,000; minor coins, $94,-900; total, $3,207,900.

THE internal revenue receipts for the four months ended October 31 were $64,749,529, an increase of $10,-324,325 over the previous four months.

THE statement of the public debt issued on the 3d showed that the debt, owing to the receipts of gold for bonds, decreased $31,744,552 during the month of November. The cash balance in the treasury was $144,507,605. The total debt, less the cash balance in the treasury, amounts to $879,582,919.

THE president, in his message to congress, argues for free coal and iron, adoption of the "Baltimore plan" for a more elastic currency and removal of the differential duty on sugar.

Dynamite for a College.

BEREA, Ky., Dec. 4.—Monday night W. D. Candee and Walter Lyman, white students at the Berea college, when about to retire, were visited by masked men, who overpowered them, tied Lyman to a tree, threatening him with death if he made an outcry, and then taking Candee around near the entrance to the college, produced a dynamite bomb and ordered Candee to light it and throw it into the entrance.

He refused, whereupon they tied his hands and threw him on a pile of wood. They then lighted the fuse in his presence, threw the bomb into the entrance and ran.

Candee by a superhuman effort freed his hands, rushed to the bomb, seized it and thrust it into a barrel of water. Calling the janitor he released Lyman and examined the premises. Another bomb was found near the wood pile.

The miscreants were traced a short distance today, but not found. There has been some feeling because Berea college has admitted both black and white students, but the general feeling is that this attempt to blow up the building is purely malicious.

JOHN G. EVANS was inaugurated governor of South Carolina the 4th.

SEVERAL thousand Tongaks attacked the Japanese troop at Kong Ju, in southern Corea. The Japs were victorious and the Tongkas were slaughtered by the wholesale.

JACK PHINEAS, one of the most noted outlaws in Oklahoma, was found dead in his bed near Kildare the morning of the 4th. He was a member of the Dalton gang.

IT is announced on excellent authority that the dispatch of the Turkish commission to inquire into the outrages in Armenia will probably not be sufficient to satisfy the European powers. Advices received tend to show that more energetic action will be necessary to secure the enforcement of the Berlin treaty.

THE president and directors of the Georgetown, Md., college have issued a regulation prohibiting the playing of football.

ACCORDING to advices received from an excellent authority upon the subject, the negotiations for peace between China and Japan are not making as rapid strides as supposed. It seems certain that Japan intends to insist upon stronger and more tangible proofs of China's submission before talking of peace.

THE MESSAGE.

President Cleveland's Statement of the Affairs of the Government.

Much Valuable Information Regarding Our Relations with Foreign Countries.

Free Coal, Free Iron and Free Ships Favored; Also Partial Repeal of the Duty on Sugar.

A Currency Based on a Guarantee Fund Proposed--Recommendations Regarding Many Questions.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The following is a synoposis of President Cleveland's annual message read at the opening of the second session of the Fifty-third congress:

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES: The assemblage within the nation's legislative halls of those charged with the duty of making laws for the benefit of a generous and free people impressively suggests the exacting obligation and inexorable responsibility involved in their task. At the threshold of such labor now to be undertaken by the congress of the United States and in the discharge of an executive duty enjoined by the constitution I submit this communication, containing a brief statement of the condition of our national affairs, and recommending such legislation as seems to me necessary and expedient.

Belgium's Needless Restrictions.

I have endeavored to impress upon the Belgian government the needlessness and positive harmfulness of its restrictions upon the importation of certain of our food products, and have strongly urged that the rigid supervision and inspection under our laws are amply sufficient to prevent the exportation from this country of diseased cattle and unwholesome meat.

Our Course in Brazil.

The termination of the civil war in Brazil has been followed by the general prevalence of peace and order. It appearing at an early stage of the insurrection that its course would call for unusual watchfulness on the part of this government, our naval force in the harbor of Rio de Janeiro was strengthened. This precaution, I am satisfied, tended to restrict the issue to a simple trial of strength between the Brazilian government and the insurgents and to avert complications which at times seemed imminent.

Reciprocity Treaty Abrogated.

Although the government of Brazil was duly notified that the commercial arrangement existing between the United States and that country, based on the third section of the tariff act of 1890, was abrogated on August 28, 1894, by the taking effect of the tariff law now in force, that government subsequently notified us of its intention to terminate such arrangement on the first day of January, 1895, in the exercise of the right reserved in the agreement between the two countries. I invite attention to the correspondence between the secretary of state and the Brazilian minister on this subject.

Chilian Claims.

The commission organized under the convention which we had entered into with Chili for the settlement of the outstanding claims of each government against the other, adjourned at the end of the period stipulated for its continuance, leaving undetermined a number of American cases which had been duly presented. These claims are not barred and negotiations are in progress for their submission to a new tribunal.

New Treaty with China.

On the 17th of March last a new treaty with China in further regulation of immigration was signed at Washington and on August 13 it received the sanction of the senate. Ratification on the part of China and formal exchanges are awaited to give effect to this mutually beneficial convention.

Mediation Between China and Japan.

A gratifying recognition of the uniform impartiality of this country towards all foreign states was manifested by the coincident request of the Chinese and Japanese governments that the agents of the United States should, within proper limits, afford protection to the subjects of the other during the suspension of diplomatic relations due to a state of war. The delicate office was accepted, and a misapprehension which gave rise to the belief that in affording this kindly unofficial protection our agents would exercise the same authority which the withdrawn agents of the belligerents has exercised was promptly corrected. Although the war between China and Japan endangers no policy of the United States it deserves our gravest consideration, by reason of its disturbance of our growing commerce interests in the two countries and the increased dangers which may result to our citizens domiciled or sojourning in the interior of China.

Acting under a stipulation in our treaty with Corea (the first concluded with a western power) I felt constrained at the beginning of the controversy to tender our good offices to induce an amicable arrangement of the initial difficulty growing out of the Japanese demands for administrative reforms in Corea; but the unhappy precipitation of actual hostilities defeated this kindly purpose.

Germany Embargo on Our Beef.

Acting upon the reported discovery of Texas fever in cargoes of American cattle, the German prohibition against importations of livestock and fresh meats from this country has been revived. It is hoped that Germany will soon become convinced that the inhibition is as rediless as it is harmful to mutual interests.

Favors Partial Repeal of Duty on Sugar.

The German government has protested against that provision of the customs tariff act which imposes a discriminating duty of one-tenth of a cent a pound on sugars coming from countries paying an export bounty thereon, claiming that the exaction of such duty is in contravention of articles five and nine of the treaty of 18.8 with Prussia.

In the interests of the commerce of both countries and to avoid even the accusation of treaty violation, I recommend the repeal of so much of the statute as imposes that duty.

Behring Sea Controversy.

Early in the present year an agreement was reached with Great Britain concerning instructions to be given to the naval commanders of the two governments in Behring sea and the contiguous north Pacific ocean for their guidance in the execution of the award of the Paris tribunal of arbitration and the enforcement of regulations therein pre-cribed, for the protection of seal life in the waters mentioned. An understanding has also been reached for the payment by the United States of $425 000, in full satisfaction of all claims which may be made by Great Britain for damages growing out of the controversy as to fur seals in Behring sea or the seizure of British vessels engaged in taking seal in those waters. The award and findings of the Paris tribunal to a great extent determined the facts and principles upon which these claims should be adjusted, and they have been subjected by both governments to a thorough examination to agree upon the principles as well as the facts which they involve. I am convinced that a settlement upon the terms mentioned would be an equitable and advantageous one, and I recommend that provision be made for the prompt payment of the stated sum. Thus far only France and Portugal have signified their willingness to adhere to the regulations established under the award of the Paris tribunal of arbitration.

Recognition of the Hawaiian Republic.

Since communicating the voluminous correspondence in regard to action heretofore taken by the senate and house of representatives on certain questions submitted to the judgment and wider discretion of congress, the organization of a government in place of the provisional arrangement which followed the deposition of the queen has been announced, with evidence of its effective operation. The recognition usual in such cases has been accorded the new government.

Relations with Mexico.

Good will fostered by many interests in common has marked our relations with our nearest southern neighbor. Peace being restored along her northern frontier, Mexico has asked the punishment of the lawless disturbers of her tranquillity. There ought to be a new treaty of commerce and navigation with that country to take the place of the one which terminated thirteen years ago. The friendliness of the intercourse between the two countries is attested by the fact that during this long period the commerce of each has steadily increased under the rule of mutual consideration, being neither stimulated by conventional arrangements nor retarded by jealous rivalries or selfish distrust.

The Rio Grande.

The problem of the storage and use of the waters of the Rio Grande for irrigation should be solved by appropriate concurrent action of the two interested countries. Rising in the Colorado heights, the stream flows intermittently, yielding little water during the dry months to the irrigating channels already constructed along its course. This scarcity is often severely felt in the regions where the river forms a common boundary. Moreover the frequent changes in its course through level sands often raise embarrassing questions of territorial jurisdiction.

The Bluefields Incident.

Prominent among the questions of the year was the Bluefields incident, in what is known as the Mosquito Indian strip, bordering on the Atlantic ocean and within the jurisdiction of Nicaragua. By the treaty of 1860 between Great Britain and Nicaragua the former government expressly recognized the sovereignty of the latter over the strip, and a limited form of self-government was guaranteed to the Mosquito Indians, to be exercised according to their customs, for themselves and other dwellers within its limits. The so-called native government, which grew to be largely made up of aliens, for many years disputed the sovereignty of Nicaragua over the strip and claimed the right to maintain therein a practically independent municipal government. Early in the past year efforts of Nicaragua to maintain sovereignty over the Mosquito territory led to serious disturbances, culminating in the suppression of the native government and the attempted substitution of an impracticable composite administration, in which Nicaragua and alien residents were to participate. Failure was followed by an insurrection which for a time obstructed Nicaraguan rule, expelling her officers and restoring the old organization. This in turn gave place to the existing local government establishing and upheld by Nicaragua.

Threatened Disturbances in Peru.

Peru, I regret to say, shows symptoms of domestic disturbance due probably to the slowness of her recuperation from the distresses of the war of 1881. Weakened in resources, her difficulties in facing international obligations invite our kindly sympathy and justify our forbearance in pressing long pending claims. I have felt constrained to testify this sympathy in connection with certain demands urgently preferred by other powers.

Relations with Russia.

The sealing interests of Russia in Behring sea are second only to our own. A modus vivendi has therefore been concluded with the Imperial government restrictive of poaching on the Russian rookeries and of sealing in waters which were not comprehended in the protected area defined in the Paris award.

Occasion has been found to urge upon the Russian government equality of treatment for our great life insurance companies whose operations have been extended throughout Europe. Admitting, as we do, foreign corporations to transact business in the United States, we naturally expect no less tolerance for our own in the ample fields of competition abroad.

Salvadorians Sheltered.

The government of Salvador having been overthrown by an abrupt popular outbreak, certain of its military and civil officers, while hotly pursued by infuriated insurgents, sought refuge on board the United States warship Bennington, then lying in a Salvadorian port. Although the practice of asylum is not favored by this government, yet, in view of the imminent peril which threatened the fugitives, and solely from considerations of humanity, they were afforded shelter by our naval commander, and when afterwards demanded under our treaty of extradition with Salvador for trial on charges of murder, arson and robbery, I directed that such of them as had not voluntarily left the ship be conveyed to one of our nearest ports, where a hearing could be had before a judicial officer, in compliance with the terms of the treaty. On their arrival at San Francisco such a proceeding was promptly instituted before the United States district judge, who held that the acts constituting the alleged offenses were political, and discharged all the accused except one Cienfuegos, who was held for an attempt to murder. Thereupon I was constrained to direct his release, for the reason that an attempt to murder was not one of the crimes charged against him and upon which his surrender to the Salvadorian authorities had been demanded.

Remonstrance with Spain.

Unreasonable and unjust fines imposed by Spain on the vessels and commerce of the United States have demanded from time to time during the last twenty years earnest remonstrance on the part of our government. In the immediate past exorbitant penalties have been imposed upon our vessels and goods by customs authorities of Cuba and Porto Rico for clerical errors of the most trivial character in the manifests or bills of lading. In some cases fines amounting to thousands of dollars have been levied upon cargoes or the carrying vessels when the goods in question were entitled to free entry. Fines have been exacted even when the error had been detected and the Spanish authorities notified before the arrival of the goods in port. This conduct is in strange contrast with the considerate and liberal treatment extended to Spanish vessels and cargoes in our ports in like cases. No satisfactory settlement of these vexatious questions has yet been reached.

Turkey and the Armenians.

In my last annual message I adverted to the claim on the part of Turkey of the right to expel, as persons undesirable and dangerous, Armenians naturalized in the United States and returning to Turkish jurisdiction. Numerous questions in this relation have arisen. While this government disclaims in the asserted right of expulsion it would not consent that Armenians may be imprisoned or otherwise punished for no other reason than having acquired without imperial consent American citizenship.

Three of the assailants of Miss Melton, an American teacher in Mosul, have been convicted by the Ottoman courts, and I am advised that an appeal against the acquittal of the remaining five has been taken by the Turkish prosecuting officer.

Treaty with Venezuela.

A convention has been concluded with Venezuela for the arbitration of a long-disputed claim growing out of the seizure of certain vessels, the property of citizens of the United States.

Although signed, the treaty of extradition with Venezuela is not yet in force, owing to the insistence of that government that, when surrendered, its citizens shall in no case be liable to capital punishment.

Disturbances in Samoa.

In my last annual message I referred briefly to the unsatisfactory state of affairs in Samoa under the operation of the Berlin treaty as signally illustrating the impolicy of entangling alliances with foreign powers, and on May 9, 1894, in response to a resolution of the senate, I sent a special message and documents to that body on the same subject which emphasized my previously expressed opinions. Later occurrences, the correspondence in regard to which will be laid before congress, further demonstrate that the government which was devised by the three powers and forced upon the Samoans against their inveterate hostility can be maintained only by continued presence of foreign military force and at no small sacrifice of life and treasure.

Revenue Receipts.

The secretary of the treasury reports that the receipts of the government from all sources of revenue during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1894, amounted to $372,802,498.29, and its expenditures to $442,605,758.87, leaving a deficit of $69,803,260.58. There was a decrease of $15,952,-674.06 in the ordinary expenses of the government, as compared with the fiscal year 1893. There was collected from customs $131,818,-530.52, and from internal revenue $147,168,449.70. The balance of the income for the year, amounting to $93,815,517.97, was derived from the sales of lands and other sources.

Imports and Exports.

The value of our dutiable imports amounted to $275,199,086, being $146,657,625 less than during the preceding year, and the importations free of duty amounted to $379,795,536, being $69,748,-675 less than during the preceding year. The receipts from customs were $73,516,456.11 less, and from internal revenue $14,836,539.97 less than in 1893.

The total tax collected from distilled spirits was $85,159,250.25; on manufactured tobacco, $28,317,498.62, and on fermented liquors, $31,414,-788.04.

Our export of merchandise, domestic and foreign, amounted during the year to $892,140,-572, being an increase over the preceding year of $44,495,378.

Movement of Gold and Silver.

The total amount of gold exported during the fiscal year was $76,808,061, as against $108,-680,444 during the fiscal year 1893. The amount imported was $72,449,119, as against $21,174,381 during the previous year. The imports of silver were $13,286,552, and the exports were $50,-451,205.

Sugar Bounty.

The total bounty paid upon the production of sugar in the United States for the fiscal year was $12,100,208.89, being an increase of $2,725,-078.01 over the payments made during the preceding year. The amount of bounty paid from July 1, 1894, to August 28, 1894, the time when further payments for the operation of law, was $966,18-.84. The total expense incurred in the payment of the bounty upon sugar during the fiscal year was $130 140 85.

An Estimated Deficit.

It is estimated that upon the basis of our present revenue laws the receipts of the government during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, will be $424,247,748 44 and its expenditures $444,427,748.44, resulting in a deficit of $20,000,000.

The Circulation.

On the first day of November, 1894, the total stock of money of all kinds in the country was $2,240,773,888, as against $2,201,651,000 on the 1st of November, 1893, and the money of all kinds in circulation or not included in the treasury holdings was $1,672,083,422, or $24.57 per capita upon an estimated population of 68,807,000.

Purchase of Silver Bullion.

At the same date there was held in the treasury gold bullion amounting to $44,615,177.55 and silver bullion which was purchased at a cost of $127,779,988. The purchase of silver bullion under the act of July 14, 1890, ceased on the first day of November, 1893, and up to that time there had been purchased during the fiscal year 11,917,658.78 fine ounces, at a cost of $8 715,-511.32, an average cost of $0.7313 per fine ounce. The total amount of silver purchased from the time that law took effect until the repeal of its purchasing clause, on the date last mentioned, was 168,674,682.53 fine ounces, which cost $155,-931,002.25, the average price per fine ounce being $0.9244.

Coinage.

The total amount of standard silver dollars coined at the mints of the United States since the passage of the act of February 28, 1878, is $421,776,408, of which $378,166,793 were coined under the provisions of that act, $38,831 143 under the provisions of the act of July 14, 1890, and $5,078,472 under the act providing for the coinage of trade-dollar bullion.

The total coinage of all metals of our mints during the last fiscal year consisted of 63,485,-220 pieces, valued at $100,216,730 06, of which there were $99,474,912.50 in gold coined; $758 in standard silver dollars; $6,024,140.30 in subsidiary silver coin, and $716,919.26 in minor coin.

During the calendar year 1893 the production of precious metals in the United States was estimated at 1,739,325 fine ounces of gold, of the commercial and coinage value of $35,935,000 and 60,000,000 fine ounces of silver of the bullion or market value of $46,800,000 and of the coinage value of $77,576,000.

It is estimated that on the first day of July, 1894, the stock of metallic money in the United States consisting of coin and bullion amounted to $1,251,640,958, of which $627,923,501 was gold and $624,347,757 was silver.

National Banks.

Fifty national banks were organized during the year ending October 31, 1894, with a capital of $5,285,000, and seventy-nine with a capital of $10,475,000, went in voluntary liquidation. Twenty-one banks, with a capital of $2,770,000, were placed in the hands of receivers. The total number of national banks in existence on the 31st day of October last, was 3,756, being 40 less than on the 31st day of October, 1893. The capital stock paid in was $672,671,365, being $9,678,491 less than at the same time in the previous year, and the surplus fund and undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid, amounted to $334,121,082.10, which was $16,089,780 less than on October 31, 1893.

The Army.

From the report of the secretary of war it appears that the strength of the army on September 30, 1894, was 2,135 officers and 25,765 enlisted men. Although this is apparently a very slight decrease compared with the previous year, the actual effective force has been increased to the equivalent of nearly two regiments through the reorganization of the system of recruiting and the consequent release to regimental duty of the large force of men hitherto serving at the recruiting depots. The abolition of these depots, it is predicted, will furthermore effect an annual reduction approximating $250,000 in the direct expenditures, besides promoting generally the health, morals and discipline of the troops.

Should Have Its Full Legal Strength.

While the maximum legal strength of the army is 25,000 men, the effective strength, through various causes, is but little over 20,000 men. The purpose of congress does not, therefore, seem to be fully attained by the existing condition. While no considerable increase in the army is in my judgment demanded by recent events, the policy of sea coast fortification in the prosecution of which we have been steadily engaged for some years has so far developed as to suggest that the effective strength of the army now made at least equal to the legal strength.

Army and the Strikes.

It is hardly necessary to recall the fact that in obedience to the commands of the constitution and the laws, and for the purpose of protecting the property of the United States, aiding the process of federal courts and removing lawless obstructions to the performance by the government of its legitimate functions, it became necessary in various localities during the year to employ a considerable portion of the regular troops. The duty was discharged promptly, courageously and with marked discretion by the officers and men.

Expenses of the War Department.

The total expenditures for the war department for the year ended June 30, 1894, amounted to $56,032,003.34. Of this sum, $2,000,614.99 was for salaries and contingent expenses, $25,665,154-16 for the support of the military establishments, $5,001,682.23 for miscellaneous objects and $25,-371,555.96 for public works. This latter sum includes $19,494,037.49 for river and harbor improvements and $3,947,863.56 for fortifications and other works of defense. The appropriations for the current year aggregate $52,429,-112.78, and the estimates submitted by the secretary of war for the next fiscal year call for appropriations amounting to $52,318,039.55.

The Militia.

The total enrollment of the militia of the several states is 11,533 officers and enlisted men, an increase of 5,343 over the number reported at the close of the previous year. The reports of militia inspections by regular army officers show a marked increase in interest and efficiency among the state organizations, and I strongly recommend a continuance of the policy of affording every practical encouragement possible to this important auxiliary of our military establishment.

Further Honors for Gen. Schofield.

In recognition of the long and distinguished military services and faithful discharge of delicate and responsible civil duties by Maj. Gen. John M. Schofield, now the general commanding the army, it is suggested to congress that the temporary revival of the grade of lieutenant general in his behalf would be a just and gracious act, and would permit his retirement, now near at hand, with rank befitting his merits.

More Courts Needed.

The report of the attorney general notes the gratifying progress made by the supreme court in overcoming the arrears of its business and in reaching a condition in which it will be able to dispose of cases as they arise without any unreasonable delay. This result is, of course, very largely due to the successful working of the plan inaugurating circuit courts of appeals. In respect to these tribunals the suggestion is made, in quarters entitled to the highest consideration, that an additional circuit judge for each circuit would greatly strengthen these courts and the confidence reposed in their adjudications, and that such an addition would not create a greater force of judges than the increasing business of such courts requires. I commend the suggestion to the careful consideration of the congress.

Federal Prisoners.

Eight years ago, in my annual message, I urged upon the congress as strongly as I could the location and construction of two prisons for the confinement of United States prisoners. A similar recommendation has been made from time to time since, and a few years ago a law was passed providing for the selection of sites for three such institutions. No appropriation has, however, been made to carry the act into effect, and the old and discreditable condition still exists.

The Postal Service.

The report of the postmaster-general presents a comprehensive statement of the operations of the post office department for the last fiscal year. The receipts of the department during the year amounted to $75 080,479.04 and the expenditures to $84,324,444.15. The transactions of the postal service indicate with barometric certainty the fluctuation in the business of the country. Inasmuch, therefore, as business complications continued to exist throughout the last year to an unforeseen extent it is not surprising that the deficiency of revenue to meet the expenditures of the post office department, which was estimated in advance at about $8,000,000 should be exceeded by nearly $1,250,-0.0.

Reform in Second Class Matter.

The expenditures increase steadily and necessarily with the growth and needs of the country so that the deficiency is greater or less in any year depending upon the volume of receipts. The postmaster general states that this deficiency is unnecessary and might be obviated at once if the law regulating rates upon mail matter of the second class was modified. The rate received for the transmission of this second-class matter is one cent per pound, while the cost of such transmission to the government is eight times that amount. In the general terms of the law this rate covers newspapers and periodicals. The extensions of the meaning of these terms from time to time have admitted to the privileges intended for legitimate newspapers and periodicals a surprising range of publications and created abuses the cost of which amounts in the aggregate to the total deficiency of the post office department.

Growth of the Service.

The total number of post offices in the United States on the 30th day of June, 1894, was 69,856, an increase of 1,413 over the preceding year. Of these 3,428 were presidential, an increase of that class of 68 over the preceding year. Six hundred and ten cities and towns are provided with free delivery. Ninety-three other cities and towns are entitled to this service under the law have not been accorded it on account of insufficient funds. The expense of free delivery for the current fiscal year will be more than $12,800,000 and under existing legislation this item of expenditure is subject to constant increase. The estimated cost of rural free delivery generally is so very large that it ought not to be considered in the present condition of affairs. During the year 830 additional domestic money-order offices were established. The total number of these offices at the close of the year was 19,264. There were 14 304 041 money orders issued during the year, being an increase over the preceding year of 994,396. The value of these orders amounted to $138,763,-570.40, an increase of $11,217,145.84. There were also issued during the year postal notes amounting to $12,640 094 55.

During the year 218 international money order officers were added to those already established, making a total of 2,665 such offices in operation June 30, 1894. The number of international money orders issued during the year was 917,823, a decrease in number of 1,8.176 and their value was $13,792,435.31, a decrease in amount of $2,549,382.55. The number of orders paid was 361,180, an increase over the preceding year of 60,263, and their value was $6,538,-493.75, an increase of $1,285,118.08.

From the foregoing statements it appears that the total issue of money orders and postal notes for the year amounted to $165,225,129.35. The number of letters and packages mailed during the year for special delivery was 3,3-1,-970. The special delivery stamps used upon these letters and packages amounted to $343,-647. The messengers' fees paid for their delivery amounted to $261,300.70, leaving a balance in favor of the government of $82,487.30.

The Navy.

Attention is called to the report of the secretary of the navy, which shows very gratifying progress in the construction of ships for our new navy. All the vessels now building, including the three torpedo boats authorized at the last session of congress and excepting the first-class battleship Iowa, will probably be completed during the coming fiscal year. The estimates for the increase of the navy for the year ending June 30, 1896, are large, but they include practically the entire sum necessary to complete and equip all the new ships not now in commission, so that unless new ships are authorized the appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1897, should fall below the estimates for the coming year by at least $12,000,000.

More Battleships Needed.

The secretary presents with much earnestness a plea for the authorization of three additional battleships and ten or twelve torpedo boats. While the unarmored vessels heretofore authorized, including those now nearing completion, will constitute a fleet, which it is believed is sufficient for ordinary cruising purposes in time of peace, we have now completed and in process of construction but four first-class battleships and but few torpedo boats. If we are to have a navy for warlike operations, offensive and defensive, we certainly ought to increase both the number of battleships and torpedo boats.

MILKED A WHOLE COW.

At a pleasant home in Covington the other evening a happy company were gathered. The host and hostess had just returned from a trip to Mackinac, and the young wife was relating to her guests some of the incidents of the journey.

"Oh, I learned so many things while we were gone," she said, and her

The manufacture of armor requires expensive plant and the aggregation of many skilled workmen. All the armor necessary to complete the vessels now building will be delivered before the 1st of June next. If no new contracts are given out contractors must disband their workmen and their plants must lie idle. Battleships authorized at this time would not be well under way until late in the coming fiscal year, and at least three years and a half from the date of the contract would be required for their completion. The secretary states that not more than 15 per cent. of the cost of such ships need be included in the appropriation for the coming year. I recommend that provision be made for the construction of additional battleships and torpedo boats.

The secretary recommends the manufacture not only of a reserve supply of ordnance and ordnance material for ships of the navy, but also a supply for the auxiliary fleet. Guns and their appurtenances should be provided and kept on hand for both these purposes. We have not to-day a single gun that could be put upon the ships Paris or New York of the International Navigation company or any other ship of our reserve navy. The manufacture of guns at the Washington navy yard is proceeding satisfactorily, and none of our new ships will be required to wait for their guns or ordnance equipment.

Transfer of Coast Survey.

Both the secretary of the navy and the secretary of the treasury recommend the transfer of the work of the coast survey proper to the navy department. I heartily concur in this recommendation. Excluding Alaska and a very small area besides, all the work of mapping and charting our coast has been completed. The hydrographic work, which must be done over and over again by reason of the shifting and varying depths of water, consequent upon the action of streams and tides, has heretofore been done under the direction of naval officers in subordination to the superintendent of the coast survey. There seems to be no good reason why the navy should not have cent re charge hereafter of such work, especially as the hydrographic office of the navy department is now, and has been for many years, engaged in making efficient maps entirely similar to those prepared by the coast survey.

Civil Service in the Navy.

The system adopted a few years ago regulating the employment of labor at the navy yards is rigidly upheld and has fully demonstrated its usefulness and expedien y. It is within the domain of civil service reform inasmuch as workmen are employed through a board of labor selected at each navy yard and are given work without reference to politics and in the order of their application, preference, however, being given to army and navy veterans and those having former navy yard experience. Amendments suggested by experience have been made to the rules regulating the system. Through its operation the work at our navy yards has been vastly improved in efficiency and the opportunity to work has been honestly and fairly awarded to willing and competent applicants. It is hoped that if this system continues to be strictly adhered to there will soon be as a natural consequence such an equalization of party benefits as will remove all temptation to relax or abandon it.

The Public Domain.

The report of the secretary of the interior exhibits the situation of the numerous and interesting branches of the public service connected with his department. I commend this report and the valuable recommendations of the secretary to the careful attention of the congress. The public land disposed of during the year amounted to 10,406,100.77 acres, including 28,876.05 of indian lands. It is estimated that the public domain still remaining amounts to a little more than 600,000,000 acres, including, however, about 260,000,000 acres in Alaska as well as military reservations and railroad and other selections of lands yet unadjudicated. The total cash receipts from sale of lands amounted to $2,674,285.79 including $91,881.03 received for indian lands. Thirty-five thousand patents were issued for agricultural lands and 3,100 patents were issued to Indians on allotments of their lands in severalty, the land so allotted being inalienable by the Indian allottees for a period of twenty-five years after patent. They were certified and patented on account of railroad and wagon road grants during the year. During the year 85,546.45 acres of land and at the close of the year 20,000,000 acres were embraced in the lists of selections made by railroad and wagon-road companies and awaited settlement. The selections of swamp lands and that taken as indemnity therefor since the passage of the act providing for the same in 1849, amount to nearly or quite 85,500,000 acres, of which 58,000,000 have been patented to states. About 138,000 acres were patented during the last year. Nearly 820,000 acres of school and education grants were approved during the year, and at its close 1,280,363.81 acres remained unadjusted.

Protection of the Lands.

It appears that the appropriation for the current year on account of special service for the protection of the public lands and the timber thereon is much less than those for previous years and inadequate for an efficient performance of the work. A larger sum of money than has been appropriated during a number of years past on this account has been returned to the government as a result of the labors of those employed in the particular service mentioned, and I hope it will not be crippled by insufficient appropriation. I fully indorse the recommendation of the secretary that adequate protection be provided for our forest reserves, and that a comprehensive forestry system be inaugurated. Such keepers and superintendents as are necessary to protect the forests already reserved should be provided. I am of the opinion that there should be an abandonment of the policy sanctioned by present laws under which the government for a very small consideration is rapidly losing title to immense tracts of land covered with timber which should be properly reserved as permanent sources of timber supply.

A Land Court Needed.

An exceedingly important recommendation of the secretary relates to the manner in which contests and litigated cases growing out of efforts to obtain government land are determined. The entire testimony upon which these controversies depend in all their stages is taken before the local registers and receivers, and yet these officers have no power to subpoena witnesses or to enforce their attendance to testify. These cases, numbering 3,000 or 4,000 annually, are sent by the local officers to the commissioner of the general land office for his action. The exigencies of his other duties oblige him to act upon the decisions of the registers and receivers without an opportunity of thorough personal examination. Nearly 2,000 of these cases are appealed annually from the commissioner to the secretary of the interior. Burdened with other important administrative duties, his determination of these appeals must be almost perfunctory and based upon the examination of others, though this determination of the secretary operates as a final adjudication upon rights of very great importance. I concur in the opinion that the commissioner of the general land office should be relieved from the duty of deciding litigated land cases; that a nonpartisan court should be created to pass on such cases, and that the decisions of this court should be final, at least so far as the decisions of the department are now final.

Allotments in Severalty.

I have always believed that allotments of reservation lands to Indians in severalty should be made sparingly or at least slowly and with the utmost caution. In these days when white agriculturists and stock raisers of experience and intelligence find their lot a hard one we ought not to expect indians, unless far advanced in civilization and habits of industry, to support themselves on the small tracts of land usually allotted to them. If the self-supporting scheme by allotment fails the wretched pauperism of the allottees which results is worse than their original condition of regulated dependence. It is evident that the evil consequences of ill advised allotments are intensified in cases where the false step cannot be retraced on account of the purchase by the government of reservation lands remaining after allotments are made and the disposition of such remaining lands to settlers or purchasers from the government.

Honesty in Dealing with the Indians.

Whenever allotments are made and any Indian on the reservation has previously settled upon a lot and cultivated it, or shown a disposition to improve it in any way, such lot should certainly be allotted to him and this should be made plainly obligatory by statute, in the light of experience, and considering the uncertainty of the Indian situation and its exigencies in the future. I am not only disposed to be very cautious in making allotments, but I incline to agree with the secretary of the interior in the opinion that when allotments are made the balance of reservation land remaining after allotment, instead of being bought by the government from the Indians and opened for settlement with such scandals and unfair practices as seem unavoidable, should remain for a time at least as common land or be sold by the government on behalf of the Indians in an orderly way and at fixed prices, to be determined by its location and desirability, and that the proceeds, less expenses, should be held in trust for the benefit of the Indian proprietor.

Indian Schools.

The intelligent Indian school management of the past year has been followed by gratifying results. Efforts have been made to advance the work in a sound and practical manner. Five institutes of Indian teachers have been held during the year and have proved very beneficial through the views exchanged and methods discussed, particularly applicable to Indian educat on. Efforts are being made in the direction of a gradual reduction of the number of Indian contract schools, so that in a comparatively short time they may give way altogether to government schools, and it is hoped that the change may be so gradual as to be perfected without too great expense to the government or undue disregard of investments made by those who have established and are maintaining such contract schools.

The appropriation for the current year ending June 30, 1895, applicable to the ordinary expenses of the indian service amounts $6,733,003.18, being less by $653,240.64 than the sum appropriated on the same account for the previous year.

Pensions.

At the close of the last fiscal year, on the 30th of June, 1894, there were 969,544 persons on our pension rolls, being a net increase of 3,532 over the number reported at the end of the previous year. These pensioners may be classified as follows: Soldiers and sailors, survivors of all wars, 753,968; widows and relatives of deceased soldiers, 215,162; army nurses in the war of the rebellion, 414. Of these pensioners 32,039 are surviving soldiers of Indian and other wars prior to the late civil war, and the widows and relatives of such soldiers. The remainder, numbering 937,505, are receiving pensions on account of the war of the rebellion, and of these 469,344 are on the rolls under the authority of the act of June 27, 1890, sometimes called the dependent pension law. The total amount expended for pensions during the year was $139,804,461.05, leaving an unexpended balance from the sum appropriated of $25,205,712.05. The sum necessary to meet pension expenditures for the year ending June 30, 1896, is estimated at $140,000,000.

Pension Frauds.

The barefaced and extensive pension frauds exposed under the direction of the courageous and generous veteran soldier now at the head of the bureau leaves no room for the claim that no purgation of our pension rolls was needed or that continued vigilance and prompt action are not necessary to the same end. The accusation that an effort to detect pension frauds is evidence of unfriendliness towards our worthy veterans, and a denial of their claims to the generosity of the government, suggests an unfortunate indifference to the commission of any offense which has for its motive the securing of a pension and indicates a willingness to be blind to the existence of mean and treacherous crimes which play upon demagogic fears and make sport of the patriotic impulse of a grateful people.

Eleventh Census.

The completion of the eleventh census is now in charge of the commissioner of labor. The total disbursements on account of the work for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, amounted to $10,385,676.81. At the close of the year the number of persons employed in the census office was 679. At present there are about 404. The whole number of volumes necessary to comprehend the eleventh census will be twenty-five, and they will contain 22,270 printed pages. The assurance is confidently made that before the close of the present calendar year the material still incomplete will be practically in hand, and the census can certainly be closed by the 4th of March, 1895. After that the revision and proof-reading necessary to bring out the volumes will still be required. The text of the census volumes has been limited, as far as possible, to the analysis of statistics presented. The method, which is in accordance with law, has caused more or less friction, and in some instances individual disappointment, for when the commissioner of labor took charge of the work he found much matter on hand, which, according to this rule, he was compelled to discard. The census is being prepared according to the theory that it is designed to collect facts and certify them to the public—not to elaborate arguments or to present personal views.

Department of Agriculture.

The secretary of agriculture in his report reviews the operations of his department for the last fiscal year, and makes recommendations for the further extension of its usefulness. He reports a saving in expenditures during the year of $800,000, which is covered back into the treasury. This sum is 13 per cent. of the entire appropriation. A special study has been made of the demand for American farm products in all foreign markets, especially Great Britain.

That country received from the United States during the nine months ending September 30, 1894, 305,970 live beef cattle, valued at $26,500,000, as against 182,611 cattle, valued at $16,634,000, during the same period for 1893. During the first six months of 1894 the United Kingdom took also 112,000,000 pounds of dressed beef from the United States, valued at nearly $10,000,000. The report shows that during the nine months immediately preceding September 30, 1894, the United States exported to Great Britain 222,675,000 pounds of pork; of apples, 1,900,000 bushels, valued at $2,500,000, and of horses, 2,811, at an average value of $139 per head. There was a falling off in American wheat exports of 13,500,000 bushels, and the secretary is inclined to believe that wheat may not, in the future, be the staple export cereal product of our country, but that corn will continue to advance in importance as an export as a result of the new uses to which it is constantly being appropriated.

The exports of agricultural products from the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, amounted to $628,393,038, being 72.28 per cent. of American exports of every description, and the United Kingdom of Great Britain took more than 54 per cent. of all farm products finding foreign markets.

The Weather Bureau.

The amount appropriated for the weather bureau was $951,100; of that sum $138,500, or 14 per cent., has been saved and is returned to the treasury. As illustrating the usefulness of this service, it may be here stated that the warnings which were generally given of two tropical storms occurring in September and October of the present year resulted in detaining safely in port 2,305 vessels, valued at $36,283,913, laden with cargoes of probably still greater value. What is much more important and gratifying many human lives on these ships were also undoubtedly saved.

Bureau of Animal Industry.

The appropriation to the bureau of animal industry was $850,000, and the expenditures for the year were only $495,429.24, thus leaving unexpended $354,570.76. The inspection of beef animals for export and interstate trade has been continued, and 12,944,096 head were inspected during the year at a cost of 1¼ cents per head, against 4¼ cents for 1893. The amount of pork microscopically examined was 35,437,937 pounds, against 20,67,410 pounds in the preceding year. The cost of this inspection has been diminished from 8¼ cents per head in 1803 to 6½ cents in 1894.

Valuable Experiments.

The office of experiment stations, which is a part of the United States department of agriculture, has during the past year engaged itself almost wholly in preparing for publication works based upon the reports of agricultural experiment stations and other institutions for agricultural inquiry in the United States and foreign countries. The secretary, in his report for 1893, called attention to the fact that the appropriations made for the support of the experiment stations throughout the union were the only moneys taken out of the national treasury by act of congress for which no accounting to federal authorities was required. Responding to his suggestion the Fifty-third congress, in making the appropriation for the department for the present fiscal year, provided that:

"The secretary of agriculture shall prescribe the form of annual financial statement required by section 3, of said act of March 2, 1887; shall ascertain whether the expenditures under the appropriation hereby made are in accordance with the provisions of said act, and shall make report thereon to congress."

The best service of the statistician of the department of agriculture is the ascertainment, by diligence and care, of the actual and real conditions, favorable or unfavorable, of the farmers and farms of the country, and to such causes which produce these conditions, to the end that the facts ascertained may guide their intelligent treatment in obedience to this law the department of agriculture immediately sent out blank forms of expense accounts to each station, and proposes in addition to make, through trusted experts, systematic examination of the several stations during the year, for the purpose of acquiring by personal investigation the detailed information necessary to enable the secretary of agriculture to make, as the statute provides, a satisfactory report to congress. The boards of management of the several stations, with great alacrity and cordiality, have approved the amendment to the law providing this supervision of their expenditures, anticipating that it will increase the efficiency of the stations and protect their directors and managers from loose charges concerning their use of public funds, besides bringing the department of agriculture into closer and more confidential relations with the experimental stations, and through their joint service largely increasing the usefulness to the agriculture of the country.

Acting upon a recommendation contained in the report of 1893, congress appropriated $10,000 to enable the secretary of agriculture to investigate and report upon the nutritive value of various articles and commodities used for human food, with special suggestion of full, wholesome and edible rations less wasteful, and more economical, than those in common use. For this appropriation the department has prepared and now has nearly ready for distribution an elementary discussion of the nutritive value and pecuniary economy of food. When we consider that fully one-half of all the money earned by the wage-earners of the civilized world is expended by them for food the importance and utility of such an investigation is apparent.

The department expended in the fiscal year 1892, $2,345,809.56, and out of that sum the total amount expended in scientific research was 45.6 per cent. But in the year ending June 30, 1894, out of a total expenditure of $1,948,998.33, the department applied 51.8 per cent. of that sum to scientific work and investigation. It is, therefore, very plainly observable that the economies which have been practiced in the administration of the department have not been at the expense of scientific research.

An Agricultural Census.

A further important utility in agricultural statistics is found in their elucidation of the relation of the supply of farm products to the demand for them in the markets of the United States and of the world. It is deemed possible that an agricultural census may be taken each year through the agents of the statistical division of the department. Such a course is recommended for trial by the chief of that division. Its scope would be:

1. The area under each of the more important crops.

2. The aggregate products of each of such crops.

3. The quantity of wheat and corn in the hands of farmers at a date after the spring sowings and plantings and before the beginning of harvest; and also the quantity of cotton and tobacco remaining in the hands of planters, either at the same date or at some other designated time.

The cost of the work is estimated at $500,000. Owing to the peculiar quality of the statistician's work and the natural and acquired fitness necessary to its successful prosecution, the secretary of agriculture expresses the opinion that every person employed in gathering statistics under the chief of that division should be admitted to that service only after a thorough, exhaustive and successful examination at the hands of the United States civil service commission. This has led him to call for such examination of candidates for the position of statisticians, and also of candidates for chiefs of sections in that division.

Civil Service Reform.

The advantages to the public service of an adherence to the principles of civil service reform are constantly more apparent, and nothing is so encouraging to those in official life who honestly desire good government as the increasing appreciation by our people of these advantages.

To Protect Public Health.

I am entirely convinced that we ought not to be longer without a national board of health or national health officer charged with no other duties than such as pertain to the protection of our country from the invasion of pestilence and disease. This would involve the establishment, by such board or officer, of proper quarantine precautions, or the necessary aid and counsel to local authorities on the subject, prompt advice and assistance to locate boards of health or health officers in the suppression of contagious disease, and in cases where there are no such local boards or officers the immediate direction by the national board or officer of measures of suppression, constant and authentic information concerning the health of foreign countries and all parts of our own country as related to contagious diseases, and consideration of regulations to be enforced in foreign ports to prevent the introduction of contagion into our cities and the measures which should be adopted to secure their enforcement.

The Labor Inquiry.

By virtue of a statute of the United States passed in 1888, I appointed, in July last, Hon. John D. Kernan, of the state of New York, and Hon. Nicholas F. Worthington, of the state of Illinois to form with Hon. Carroll D. Wright, commissioner of labor, who was designated by said statute, a commission for the purpose of making careful inquiry into the causes of the controversies between certain railroads and their employes which had resulted in an extensive and destructive strike, accompanied by much violence and dangerous disturbance with considerable loss of life and great destruction of property. The report of the commissioners has been submitted to me and will be transmitted to the congress with the evidence taken up on their investigation. Their work has been well done, and their standing and intelligence give assurance that the report and suggestions they make are worthy of careful consideration.

Favors Free Coal and Iron.

The tariff act passed at the last session of the congress needs important amendments if it is to be executed effectively and with certainty. In addition to such necessary amendments as will not change rates of duty, I am still very decidedly in favor of putting coal and iron upon the free list.

The Sugar Schedule.

So far as the sugar schedule is concerned, I would be glad, under existing aggravations, to see every particle of differential duty in favor of refined sugar stricken out of our tariff law. If, with all the favor now accorded the sugar refining interests in our tariff laws, it still languishes to the extent of closing refineries, and thousands of discharged workmen, it would seem to present a hopeless case for reasonable legislative aid. Whatever else is done or omitted, I earnestly repeat here the recommendation I have made in another portion of this communication, that the additional duty of 1-10 of 1 cent per pound laid upon sugar imported from countries paying a bounty on its export be abrogated. It seems to be that exceedingly important considerations point to the propriety of this amendment.

An Argument for Free Ships.

With the advent of a new tariff policy not only calculated to relieve the consumers of our land in the cost of their daily life, but to inure a better and more equitable distribution and create for us closer and more profitable commercial relations with the rest of the world, it follows as a logical and imperative necessity that we should at once remove the chief if not the only obstacle which has so long prevented our participation in the foreign carrying trade of the sea. A tariff built upon the theory that it is well to check imports and that a home market should bound the industry and effort of American producers, was fitly supplemented by a refusal to allow American registry to vessels built abroad though owned and navigated by our people, thus exhibiting a willingness to abandon all contest for the advantages of American trans-oceanic carriage. Our new tariff policy, built upon the theory that it is well to encourage such importations as our people need, and that our products and manufactures should find markets in every part of the habitable globe, is consistently supplemented by the greatest possible liberty to our citizens in the ownership and navigation of ships in which our products and manufactures may be transported.

The Issue of Bonds.

During the last month the gold reserved in the treasury for the purpose of redeeming the notes of the government circulating as money in the hands of the people became so reduced, and its further depletion in the near future seemed so certain, that in the exercise of proper care for the public welfare it became necessary to replenish the reserve and thus maintain popular faith in the ability and determination of the government to meet, as agreed, its pecuniary obligations. It would have been well if in this emergency authority had existed to issue bonds of the government bearing a low rate of interest and maturing within a short period, but the congress having failed to confer such authority, resort was necessarily had to the resumption act of 1875, and pursuant to its provisions bonds were issued drawing interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, and maturing ten years after date of issue, that being the shortest time authorized by the act. I am glad to say, however, that on the sale of these bonds the premium received operated to reduce the rate of interest to be paid by the government to less than 3 per cent.

I cannot believe that any of our citizens are deliberately willing that their government should default in its pecuniary obligations or that its financial operations should be reduced to a silver basis. At any rate I should not feel that my duty was done if I omitted any effort I could make to avert such a calamity.

Change in Currency System Advocated.

The absolute divorcement of the government from the business of banking is the ideal relationship of the government to the circulation of the currency of the country. This condition cannot be immediately reached; but as a step in that direction, and as a means of securing a more elastic currency, I would be made in another portion of this communication, that the additional duty of 1-10 of 1 cent per pound laid upon sugar imported from countries paying a bounty on its export be abrogated. It seems to be that exceedingly important considerations point to the propriety of this amendment.

An Argument for Free Ships.

With the advent of a new tariff policy not only calculated to relieve the consumers of our land in the cost of their daily life, but to ins

—Regular services at the M. E. church next Sunday at 7:30 P. M.

—Rev. Webb will hold Episcopal services at the Presbyterian church on Monday evening, Dec. 10, at 7:30.

District Court and the county commissioners are in session at Buffalo this week. Mr. Kemper of Victor takes Ole Mattson,s place on the board.

—The Delano Furniture Company invites the attention of everyone to the latest thing in "merry-go-rounds", one of which they have in their store. It is a good advertisement and no mistake.

—There seems to have been some misunderstanding about the location of the shut-offs in the waterworks mains at Czock's corner. The council have had a man digging there for sevrzl days, trying to find them.

—The M. E. Sunday School held a sociable at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Frazee on Monday evening. It was a success, both socially and financially, the young folks enjoying themselves thoroughly and the neat sum of $3.00 being raised.

—Quarterly meeting services were conducted vesterday evening at the M E. church by P. E., R. R. Atchison. Quarterly Conference was held at the parsonage in the afternoon and a reception for the P. E., at Mrs. Jonas Johnson's in the evening after church.

—If the Eagle tells the truth and members of the village council do as she says they threaten, our citizens may expect in the very near future to see some of that body complained of, arrested, and INCARNATED! No wonder the minutes of this ghostly body are not revealed to the general public, as they ought to be through the newspapers.

—As Miss Margeret Wittman was riding up River street on Wednesday, she met the large white team with the beer delivery wagon, running away. Her means of locomotion at once took fright and wildly plunged Miss W. and her carriage into a narrow alleyway between the buildings near the Johnny Arup stand. Sufficient help was soon procured to extricate the young miss from her predicament. And she went on up street, not nearly so frightened as was her "team", a very nicely matched and usually docile one.

—At a special meeting of the Village Council last Monday evening all the members were present. The rules and regulations drawn up by the committee appointed to establish the water and electric light rates were accepted. The recorder was instructed to have 300 copies of the rules printed. All parties using city water or electric lights were requested to call at the recorder's office and settle before Dec. 10. The following bills were allowed: C. W. Kerrick, agent for General Electric Co., $225.50; C. W. Kerrick, $229.30.

—The Epworth League met on last Saturday evening at the residence of Dr. T. J. Catlin; Rev. J. W. Powell acting as President, Miss Rosa Belt as Secretary. Miss Estella Astrope was elected a member, and Mrs. E. Strickland and Mr. Charles Hawker entered by card. Miss Irene Cheeley was elected President of the League for the next six months; Mrs. Leon Frazee, first Vice President; Miss Mary Catlin, second Vice President; Dr. T. J. Catlin, third Vice President; Mrs. A. E. Johnson, fourth Vice President. Meeting adjourned.

DYNAMO, VOLT, OHM, AND AMPERE.

A dynamo is a large machine made with two electro-magnets which have massive cores on which are wound large coils of cotton covered copper wire. One of these, called the field-magnet, is usually shaped like a common steel horseshoe magnet, and has two large pole pieces, which partly inclose a circular space in which the other magnet, called the armature, and shaped like a ring or cylinder, revolves. A steam engine or water wheel is required to revolve this armature in opposition to the magnetic attraction, which tends to keep it from revolving, and is very slight at first, but increases with the rotation, so that, in a second or two, a powerful force is required to turn the armature; and this rotation generates electricity in the wire coils, which are connected with the wires by which it is conveyed to the houses.

Volt, ohm and ampere are merely convenient terms used to represent the units by which the pressure, resistance and volume of the current are measured. The volt is the unit of pressure, used to measure the pressure by which the current is forced through the wires, as steam, gas or water is forced through pipes. The ohm is used to measure the electric resistance to the wire, which opposes this pressure as friction in pipes opposes and limits the flow of steam, gas or water. The ampere is used to measure the volume of current which can be forced through a wire by a pressure of one volt in opposition to a resistance of one ohm; the volume of the current, in amperes, being ascertained by dividing the pressure, in volts, by the resistance in ohms. A current having a pressure of one hundred volts, and a resistance of one hundred ohms, would have a volume of one ampere; while a current having a pressure of one-hundred volts, and a resistance of ten ohms, would have a volume of ten amperes, and so on. ### The Toledo Weekly Blade.

Of the now nearly twenty thousand regular publications in the United States, there are but two or three weekly newspapers published for general circulation in every rtate and territory, and of these the Toledo Weekly Blade is the best and most popular of them all. It is the oldest, best known, and has the largest circulation. For more than twenty-five years it has been a regular visitor to every portion of the Union, and it is well-known at every of the sixty-thous odd post offices of the country. It it made especially for family reading. It gives the entire news of the world each in such condensed form as will save reading scores of pages of daily papers to get less information. Republican in politics, Temperance in principle, always on the side of justice and right, it is just the paper for the rising generation, and a great educator for the whole family. Serial stories, wit and humor, short stories, Household department Question Bureau, Farm department Camp Fire, Sunday School and Young Folks, are a few of the many other prominent features of this great paper. A specimen copy will be mailed free on application, and the publishers invite any person to send in a long list of addresses to whom they will mail a couple of hundred specimens to readers of this county. The Weekly Blade is a very large paper, and the price is only one dollar a year.

Address The Blade, Toledo, Ohio.

UNCLE SAM'S officials or some one else, must have some particular spite at the St. Paul News-Record to keep the anti-election numbers so long on the road. Several back numbers have been received recently. This morning, Dec. 7, we got the Nov. 2 number. The News-Record should be able to get 40 miles on a straight road a little quicker than that; as it is one of the livest and most independent and cleanest of the Twin City dailies.

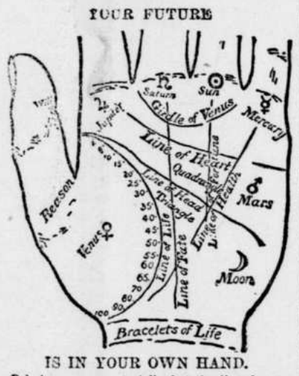
YOUR FUTURE



IS IN YOUR OWN HAND.

Palmistry assumes to tell what the lines in your hand indicate. It will amuse you, if nothing more. The above diagram almost explains itself. The length of the LINE OF LIFE indicates probable time to which you will live. Each BRACELET gives you thirty years. Well marked LINE OF HEAD denotes brain power; clear LINE OF FORTUNE fame or riches. Both combined mean success in life; but you must keep up with modern ideas to win it. You will find plenty of these in Demorest's Family Magazine, so attractively presented that every member of the family is entertained. It is a dozen magazines in one. A CLEAR LINE OF HEART betokens tenderness; a straight LINE OF FATE, peaceful life; the reverse if crooked. A well defined LINE OF HEALTH spares you doctors' bills; so will the health hints in Demorest's. No other magazine publishes so many stories to interest the home circle. You will be subject to extremes of high spirits or despondency if you have the GIRDLE OF VENUS well marked; keep up your spirits by having Demorest's Magazine to read. By subscribing to it for 1894 you will receive a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides the superb premium picture, 15x22 inches, "I'm a Daisy!" which is almost a real baby, and equal to the original oil painting which cost $300; and you will have a magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep you posted on all the topics of the day, and all the facts, and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and you get with it, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2.00, and you will really get over $25.00 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send for a specimen copy. A large QUADRANGLE means honesty; a large TRIANGLE, generosity; long FIRST DIVISION OF THUMB, strong will; LONG SECOND DIVISION, reasoning faculty. The MOUNT OF JUPITER betokens ambition; that of SATURN, prudence; the SUN, love of splendor; MARS, courage; MOON, imagination; VENUS, love of pleasure; and MERCURY, intelligence. Take our advice as above and you will be sure to possess the last and most valuable quality.

ACCORDING to I. Donnelly the country press and the will of God are on the same side; neither in favor of his being in office.

IT seems to be the opinion of the country press that I. Donnelly will be about the "biggest toad in the puddle" when the populist party meeting gets together in January.

ATTORNEY HALL and Mayor Eustis in highly eulogistic letters have sought to correct the idea that had gotten out that Miss Ging was not above reproach. Attorneys should be a little more careful in their investigation of cases.

MONDAY morning's Pioneer Press contained a cut and a short biographical sketch of Senator elect from Wright and Sherburne counties, W. E. Culkin. The P. P. has been giving one or more each day for some time, of our legislators.

INDICTMENTS have been found against Harry Hayward and Claus Blixt for the murder of Miss Catherine Ging. They are to plead today and have their trial in January. Erickson has been released from custody. Adry is still in the Ramsey county jail.

THE two Hayward boys have been taken to the St. Paul jail for safe-keeping. C. A. Blixt is still kept in Minneapolis jail. It is said that Bill Erwin will take a hand in the defense of Harry Hayward. The grand jury of Hennepin county had Adry Hayward before it this week, taking his statement concerning the murder of Catherine Ging.

AFTER the recent exposures concerning the death of people insured that somebody may draw the insurance, it will doubtless be rather difficult to get people to do much trading or borrowing money on their policies. Most people would prefer poverty to plenty borrowed on a policy for which their life must be given in order to satisfy avarice or some reckless gambler's passion.

IT looks as if some of the papers are trying to cover Minneapolis and Hennepin county officials with a great deal of honor for having run down the Haywards and Blixt for murdering Miss Catherine Ging. How near to discovering them would the authorities now be but for the letter of Elder Stewart, telling of Adry's story to him before the murder and which he considered as wholly improbable of accomplishment? And what have any of them done more than their duty, in case they have been instrumental in wringing confessions from two of the supposed criminals.

Diversification Increasing.

It is a great gain that the attention of the people in all parts of the country is being called to the absurd results of their failure to diversify agricultural industry. The state of Washington, it is said, paid out last year $3,500,000 for pork and $6,000,000 for dairy products brought into the state from outside Oregon paid out a great deal more for imports of the same commodities. In the South they are changing their system rapidly, considering the slowness of new ideas to make their way in that section as a rule. South Carolina doubled her corn crop this year, and the gain in Mississippi was 10,000,000 bushels, in Arkansas 6,000,000 and in Texas 8,000,000 bushels. All these are instances of a beginning of the attempt to adapt production to the needs of the immediate market. It is the most extraordinary thing in the world, explicable only by the absence of general information that it was not done years ago.

In every other business except farming there is some attempt to fit supply to demand. Manufacturers and merchants take trade journals, feel the state of the market and would not dream of trying to force a commodity on the people after the people had quit buying it, or were willing to buy it only for less than cost of production. There should be information accessible to the farmer. In every state the commissioner of statistics should ascertain, as nearly as may be, what are the products of the soil which the state might produce, but which it does not produce in quantities sufficient to supply the home demand. These facts should then be placed in the hands of every farmer in the state, so that production might be regulated accordingly. It is a simple imbecility that the farmers of Minnesota or any other state should busy themselves with producing something that they have to send thousands of miles to market, and sell at a price that keeps them constantly under the harrow of poverty, while the people of the same state as a whole are sending away hundreds of miles to get pork or dairy products or eggs or chickens that they consume. If we could have diversification of agricultural industry, and if we could have it diversified according to the plain needs of the consumers as shown by the records of trade, the attention of the farmer would be fixed upon supplying the home market. In that lies the greatest profit and the highest interest to the whole community.—Pioneer Press.

If we are to profit by the Pioneer Press's advice we must, of course, raise less pork, less butter and cheese for Washington and Oregon; and must get out our own basswood lumber; catch suckers from our own rivers, and let them eat their salmon under their cedar roofs and use their fine trees for firewood.

The P. P. says South Carolina doubled her corn crop this year, while other Southern states have raised big corn crops. We must then stop raising so much corn for the South to buy our clothing with; we must put in a few rows of cotton, for our own use; or, as the South raises corn and has no cotton to spare we must go without.

Diversified farming within certain limits is very good. But when each state in the union is self-sustaining, where will Minnesota get her fruits, her apples, peaches, grapes, California pears, etc., etc. Where will she get her cotton and silk goods. Furs, even, are growing scarce. We think best not to be too selfish. There's lots of things we would like from other states and other countries than our own. Coffee and tea, for instance, we could not raise, nor cocoanuts, nor bananas, not even sweet potatoes, but of course squashes would take the place of the latter article of diet, while we could do as our grandmothers did, toast bread crusts or wheat, and make coffee, while catnip is plenty for tea. Nothing like necessity as a mother of invention. But as for us we would prefer to take off all tariff, pay our own taxes, know how much they are, and then it would be much less than under the present system, and have the products of the world to live on, as God in His infinite wisdom saw fit to give them to us. When each farmer lives from the products of his farm and furnishes his own home market; Railroads will not be longer needed and sea vessels will go out of fashion, save as passenger or mail carriers.

A Timely Warning.

Judging from newspaper reports there is going to be a raid on the state treasury this winter that will exceed in extravagance anything ever before heard of in this state. It might just as well be understood and remembered first as last that if the incoming legislature is not an economical body the republican party will have to shoulder the responsibility and it ought to do so. The republican majority is so overwhelming that there can be no pretence of shifting responsibility and it will be utterly impossible to deceive the people on the issue. Economy that economizes must be the watchword or the present republican majority will melt away as it has done before. If the legislature does its whole duty by the people of this state it will so manage the state expenditures as to reduce the state taxes and the rate of state taxation can easily and without detriment to any state institution be reduced at least one half. There is a constant effort to devise new modes of taxation, but the people have never yet received any benefit from any of these new sources of revenue. The only result thus far has been increased appropriations and unnecessary expenditures. Four years ago the republicans lost control of the legislature on account of their extravagance. Employees in the House and Senate were multiplied beyond all former precedent. Large numbers of men were provided with places where no services were required or rendered. Committees were appointed in both branches to look into the matter and the result was that in the Senate a number of useless hangers on were dismissed but in the House every man hung to his job to the end. The result was that at the next session the republicans were in the minority. They will be in the minority again unless they meet the expectations of the people. There is always a great scramble for clerkships and at the beginning they are all satisfied if they can get a place at $5.00 per day but no sooner do they get their positions than they begin to scheme for a raise and generally towards the last end of the session they get it. All such business is dishonest and wrong and nothing less than a robbery of the people. Thousands of dollars are voted away at every session contrary to public honesty and without any warrant in law. If these abuses continue during the coming session there will be no trouble in fixing the responsibility where it justly belongs, and these abuses cannot continue without the people knowing it.—Buffalo Journal.

Broad Tire Wagons.

BY JAMES HARVEY IN AMERICAN FARMER AND FARM NOTES.

While the subject of good roads is being agitated in every part of the country those most interested in the subject are doing their best to make bad roads still worse by using narrow tires on their wagons. Heavy loads are drawn over our mud roads on these narrow tired wagons and deep ruts cut into them, that in wet weather make them almost and sometimes, entirely impassible. I have a sort of pity for a man who urges his team along a muddy road all the time grumbling about the badness of it when he might reduce the labor of his team from one third to one half by using wide tires at very little additional cost to himself and to the great saving of team and temper. It is to be hoped that the first legislation looking to the improvement of the roads of the country will be in the way of encouraging the use of wide tires, for one narrow tired wagon will do more damage than a dozen with wide tires if the roads are at all soft. No one disputes the philosophy of wide tires and no one seems to have any good reason to offer why they should not be used. Our farmers simply follow precedent and go on using narrow tires because their fathers did before them. Lumbermen and freighters use wide tires almost universally and save money by doing so, but it seems that farmers do not care to economize in this direction. The condition of our roads costs us more than any other single item of waste in this country and the common use of wide tires would reduce this waste of energy to a large extent.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Dec. 7, 1894.

The democratic Senators have made earnest efforts this week to agree upon a programme for the session. Two conferences have been held for the exchange of views, but the same old obstacle to harmony—too many different views and too many would-be leaders—still stands in the way. There is still hope, however, that some sort of an agreement may be reached, but it is altogether too much like the hope indulged in by a very sick man that he will get well to please those democrats who have no sympathy with the attitude assumed by certain Senators elected as democrats, at the last session, which is still maintained by them. They then adopted a rule or ruin policy and notwithstanding the ruin which their rule has already accomplished they still stick to it.

The democrats of the House have deferred holding their caucus until next week so as to give the senators time in which to decide what is to be done, or attempted this session.

That the democrats in Congress are doing some hard thinking on the financial plan proposed by Secretary Carlisle and endorsed by President Cleveland is shown by their reluctance to commit themselves at this time either for or against the proposed plan. The short time at their disposal will, of course, increase the chances against the adoption of such a comprehensive financial measure, although there is a disposition on the part of the Southern democrats to try to pass a bill embodying that part of the plan that provides for the exemption of the currency of such state banks as may adopt the regulations provided, from Federal taxation. President Cleveland says he considers the plan proposed by Secretary Carlisle the most statesmanlike financial document ever submitted to Congress, and that he proposes to stand by it to the end of his term.

A subcommittee of the House committee on Banking and Currency was appointed at the last session to consider the numerous bills before that committee and to formulate either from them, or as an original measure, something to take the place of the national banking law. Representative Cox, of Tennessee, is chairman of this subcommittee, and the other democratic members are Culbertson, of Texas, and Cobb, of Missouri, the republicans being, Brosius, of Pennsylvania, and Haugen, of Wisconsin. Mr. Cox says the subcommittee will hold daily meetings until it has agreed to some measure to be reported to the full committee or has demonstrated the impossibility of reacing such an agreement. In addition to the financial bills introduced at the last session the subcommittee will consider the plan for increasing the currency of the national banks and for the exemption of state bank currency from Federal taxation, under specified conditions, proposed by Secretary Carlisle and endorsed by President Cleveland. Unless there is a very decided change in the attitude of members of the committee there is very little possibility of an agreement being reached, more's the pity, for something ought to be done.

Chairman Bland, of the House coinage committee, says he will endeavor to get that committee to report his free coinage bill to the house, and that if the committee does so the bill will certainly pass the House. While it is known that a majority of the Coinage committee favor free coinage, there are several of them who would not vote to report the bill to the house at the last session, because they knew it could not become a law. Whether any of the gentlemen have changed their minds remains to be seen.

The "Press Claims Co.", of Washington, well known to the publishers of the country through its schemes to obtain advertising, is once more before the courts, as defendant, in a suit which has been brought by a Kansas City publisher, who wants $840 in cash for the advertising he has done for the "Press Claims Co.", instead of the worthless shares of stock in that Company, which he says were misrepresented when the original contract, which he now wants cancelled, was made. The suit is against John Wedderburn, manager of the "Press Claims Co" and William Hearst, of the "Examiner Bureau of Claims." Mr. Hearst has no connection with the concern, he having in a suit against Wedderburn repudiated the whole business, but he was at one time associated with Wedderburn, or rather his name and that of his paper, the San Francisco Examiner, was, in the "Examiner Bureau of Claims"; hence his figuring in the present suit.

Nothwithstanding the black eye given the Nicaragua canal bill by the failure of President Cleveland to endorse it in his message, the friends of that measure are preparing to make a determined effort to push it through the House. Its principal opponents are democrats who believe the measure to be unconstitutional, and who say they will defeat it if possible.

CORRESPONENCE

ROCKFORD RIPPLES.

J. Benner, D. R. Thompson, Miss Irving and Mrs. Douglas were among those who visited the city on Wednesday.

Miss Mabel Dorman is visiting her parents during the holidays.

Mr. Frank Spurzen returned to Loretto Saturday. It is said he made quite an impression on some of the gentler sex during his stay. "They miss you Frank."

The river is nearly clear of ice, something that has not been heard of for years.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

It was Thomas Campbell, the Scottish poet that wrote the "Pleasures of Hope," which starts out thus:

"At summers eve when Heaven's aetherial bow, Spans with bright arch the glittering hills below."

Hope is good to breakfast on but poor diet for supper. It has been the hope of the rank and file of the democrat party that this administration might make a record worthy of going down to future generations yet unborn, but designing men with principles of the jackass variety have so manipulated things that the honest politician has but little left to vindicate himself with. Much has been said in one way or another about last fall's election, and the democrats have become a byword to the ignorant and more unlearned of the other parties. But might does not always make right and if Cleveland has misled his party he should be made the scape goat and not the whole party. True democratic principles are just as good today as they were half a century ago, and there are good men who adhere to them. But if the politics of this country could be spread upon canvas with Mark Twain's comments there on it would be worth more to each individual than a trip to the Polar Seas. The politics of this country have almost become a stench in the nostrils of the better class of society. Bonaparte had an ambition to conquer the world at the sacrifice of an army of men but it seems that now we have designing men who would sacrifice a whole nation for the golden calf and self-aggrandizement. France once wrote upon the gates of her cemeteries, "Death is an eternal sleep," but Milton wrote thus:

Then it seems, according to Milton's version, and from a Biblical standpoint, too, that sometime out from under the drift and mire, the dark and gloom of an unholy, unrighteous political drunken people will come a regenesis and many sheaves will be gathered from the harvest. But, Mr. Editor, I did not start out to write a sermon, for I do not consider myself equal to the occasion. Josh Billings says when a fellow or party or anything else gets started down hill everything is greased for the occasion. So it is thought by many that last fall's election started the democrat party down the hill, (or western slope) and the republicans are furnishing the grease and without a locomotive headlight we will land in the middle of the Pacific ocean or the Chinese empire. But I hope sometime between now and 1896 the democrat party will find somewhere a Moses hidden in the bulrushes that will be able to lead the democrat party on to victory, but he who wishes to be a leader must come well recommended from the four winds of the continent. We are living in the twilight of 1894 and also of the 19th century with a job on our hands bigger than had the ancients when they built the Egyptian pyramids, that of revolutionizing the politics of this country. The spoils system that Andrew Jackson introduced more than half a century ago has been a bad precedent for the politics of this country, like the treating habit of the patrons of saloons, it has worked much evil. But it will be only a few days now and our state will have an all wool, Simon pure, republican Legislature and then we may expect a reform movement, such as passing a high license liquor law and electing W. D. Washburn to the U. S. Senate. Some seem to think that no one but a republican and a Minneapolis man knows enough to go to the United States Senate from this state. But I had rather see a man sent to the Senate from the western part of the state, out from among the hazelbrush, with an honest face and a clean record than that our state should be represented only from the twin cities. The republican party has now got on their peacock apparel although it is of the spring goods variety, yet it looks well when the sun shines. The democrats, the populists and the prohibitionists of this state are left orphans but we hope to be remembered by our friends who are now masters of the situation and at least grant us a reservation somewhere in the public domain; at the headwaters of salt river would be preferable.

Congressman Boen, who was defeated recently for re-election says he is going to spit on his hands and try it over. He'll have to resort to something besides spit to win in the future.—Litchfield News-Ledger.

Hon. E. G. Rogers, of St. Paul, is mentioned as an agressive candidate for Senator Washburn's place. His friends are urging him strongly and he bids fair to become a potent factor in the coming Senatorial contest.—Litchfield News-Ledger.

A St. Paul legislator proposes to introduce a bill lowering the saloon license in cities to $500. He better not monkey with the buzz saw. If he does the license is more likely to be doubled than halved.—Elk River Star-News.

Hon. Moses E. Clapp, who has been mentioned as a good man for U. S. Senator, has been receiving many very complimentary notices in many of the county weeklies. If he would annouce himself a candidate he would make things decidedly interesting for Mr. Washburn.—Litchfield Review.

President Cleveland struck Congress straight from the shoulder when he said of the recent bond issue: "It would have been well if in this emergency authority had existed to issue the bonds of the government bearing a low rate of interest and maturing within a short period, but, Congress having failed to confer such authority, resort was necessarily had to the resumption act of 1875."—St. Cloud Times.

John S. Billings in Hutchinson Leader. I quit smoking last spring, having puffed a pipe or cigar for over thirty years. I quit because I was getting nervous and losing my health. I have recovered my health and lost the nervousness. I wish I could recover the money I have lost by smoking. The young man or boy who goes to using tobacco exhibits such a serious kind of weakness that he ought to be placed in the care of a guardian.—Litchfield Independent.

A. H. Bertram ass't com'r and sec'y of the Dairy and Food Commission was the guest of Warden Wolter a few days last week, and during the time made a complete round of the prison including The Mirror office. Mr. Bertram is an old newspaper man and gave us timely advice, and much encouragement through his pleasant mention of The Mirror's get up, and his promise to aid our rapidly increasing circulation. There is always a cushion chair in our sanctum for the genial commissioner.—Prison Mirror.

Editor Joubert, of the Litchfield News-Ledger, chairman of Third District Republican committee, has published a statement showing that the expenses of conducting Mr. Heatwole's campaign as candidate for Congress amounted to $4,000, of which $900 was subscribed and the remainder was furnished by Mr. Heatwole. Accepting the statement as true and that it covers the full amount expended, it emphasizes the necessity for a change in election methods. Why should it be necessary or allowable that so large an amount of money should be expended to elect one Congressman? And maybe Heatwole's opponent expended a larger sum. No country editor or man in other vocation in moderate circumstances certainly can afford to pay out any such a sum as $3,100 in order to serve the people two years in Congress. The election of a member of Congress is the people's business. They should bear all necessary expenses, and all others ought to be prohibited. Elections ought to be provided for by law, and no man be allowed to buy his election.—Moorhead News.

Senator C. K. Davis advocates a constitutional convention and says our state constitution "is like a house patched up by constant additions and repairs until it is almost a deformity." He also advocates the reapportionment of the state and says "the legislature ought to be a larger body, especially the lower house. The opportunities for corruption will then be less and smaller constituencies will hold their members to account in a much greater degree than in a constituency extending over an area so large that a man may have to travel a hundred miles to have it out with his representative." The Senator knows what he is talking about in advocating a larger legislature for the reasons given. There are other good reasons why a larger legislature would not be detrimental to the public good, though the idea is ridiculed by many. We believe that the nearer the common people legislation can be brought the better for the public good. It has been demonstrated that big political conventions are a success. A convention of a thousand men can transact the business before it just as expeditiously as one a quarter of that size, and the results give far greater satisfaction.—Star-News.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft tail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to mother sex. every one of whom should subscribe for Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and then will admit that saving these THUMBS has put you in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of a whole family.

If there is a double track you need only watch one of the opposite rails out of the window and count the joints.

Frank E. Snyder calls the great dam over the Colorado river at Austin, Tex., "a second Niagara." It is 1,360 feet long and 58 feet high, raising the stream 60 feet above low-water mark. Not only will it furnish the city with electric light and power for the pumps of the water works, but there will be a large surplus of power for mills and factories. The lake formed by the dam is twenty-five miles long and covers an area of 2,000 acres.

The United States now has about forty vessels engaged in whaling—the remnant of a fleet which once volunteered 500 ships. The demand for whale oil has so greatly decreased that the industry has dwindled away. It is now supported chiefly by the demand for whalebone, which is always greatly in excess of the supply. American whalers which go so far north as Baffin's bay in midsummer generally spend the winter frozen up in Hudson's bay.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

Proceedings of the Second Session.

Wednesday, Dec. 5.—Mr. Vest addressed the senate in advocacy of a change in the rules by which debate could be closed. Mr. Peffer's resolution calling for information regarding the issuance of bonds was adopted. Bills were introduced for the free coinage of silver, making the silver dollar to consist of 412½ grains of standard fineness; to form the state of Indianola out of portions of the Indian territory, and for an amendment to the sugar clause in the present tariff law striking out all the provisions except that to remove the one-eighth differential on sugar. In the house a resolution was introduced repealing section 3 of the act providing for the resumption of specie payment, which authorizes the secretary of the treasury to sell bonds.

Thursday, Dec. 5.—Senator Turpie spoke in the senate in favor of the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people. Bills were passed exempting from duty foreign exhibits at the Portland (Ore.) exposition, and for the national dedication of the Chickamauga and Chattanooga national park on September 10 and 20, 1895. Adjourned to the 10th. In the house a joint resolution was introduced proposing an amendment to the constitution making the president ineligible to a second term. The bill making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense for the fiscal year 1895-'96 ($7,357,703) was reported.

Friday, Dec. 7. — The senate was not in session In the house the greater portion of the session was devoted to a continuation of the discussion on the bill to so amend the interstate commerce act as to permit railroad companies to pool their earnings.

Saturday, Dec. 8.—There was no session of the senate. In the house bills were introduced to permit the mailing of second-class matter elsewhere than at the place of publication; to provide for the appointment of a currency commission to consider the past and present condition of the currency of the United States and the necessity for increasing its volume or changing banking laws now in force. The military academy appropriation bill ($451,676) was reported and the railway pool measure was defeated.

Monday, Dec. 10. — In the senate a resolution was offered calling on the president to begin negotiations to secure the independence of Cuba. Senator Morgan spoke in favor of the Nicaragua canal bill. In the house bills were introduced to annex that portion of Arizona north of the Colorado river to Utah; to prohibit the printing of any words or devices upon the American flag by individuals, and to provide for the settlement of labor troubles by arbitration.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The officials of the national home for disabled soldiers state in their annual report that more veterans applied for admission during the year than could be accommodated. The aggregate average number kept was 70,762, and the whole number cared for during the year was 35,564. The annual cost of the maintenance of each man was $127.45, a decrease from the previous year of $13.50; the deaths were 1,050, an increase of 20.

Adry Hayward Clears Up the Mystery of the Miss Ging Affair—Overwhelming Evidence Against Barnes' Murderers Brings Them Down.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 11.—The authorities are satisfied they have all the parties connected with the murder of Miss Catherine Ging. The confession of Adry Hayward has cleared up the mystery and it is known that had one man acted upon information given him by Adry Hayward the murder might have been prevented. According to the confession, the crime was planned months ago by Harry Hayward, who induced C. A. Blixt to kill the woman. The fact that the murder was to be done and the motive were known to Adry Hayward long before the fatal night. Adry Hayward tried to dissuade his brother from carrying the plan into execution and told Levi M. Stewart of the plot. The latter scouted the idea, did not report the matter to the police and Catherine Ging was killed. Her death was accomplished by Hayward, whose sole motive was to secure her life insurance. After the crime had been committed Stewart came forward, told all he knew and rendered the authorities valuable aid.

From the confession of Adry Hayward it has been the theory of the police that C. A. Blixt, the engineer of the Ozark flats, where both Miss Ging and Harry Hayward resided, committed the murder at the instigation of Hayward.

Blixt's Confession.

Blixt made a confession in which he at first charged Harry Hayward with the actual killing of Miss Ging, but shortly after midnight admitted that his confession was untrue, and that he, himself, had committed the murder. Hayward had interested Miss Ging in a "green-goods" scheme and drove with her from the West house, until they reached the corner of Hennepin and Franklin avenues, about 2 miles from where the murder was committed. There they met Blixt whom Hayward pushed into the buggy with instructions to drive to where they would meet Hayward, who would have the goods with him. Previous to that Hayward had induced Miss Ging to entrust what money she had, Blixt did not know how much, to him. Blixt and Miss Ging drove around the end of the lake and Miss Ging became anxious and began to ask about Hayward. When they reached the scene of the murder she was looking out the side of the buggy and while in this position Blixt shot her. He drove about the country about an hour and when he was satisfied that she was dead he threw the body out and went home.

Had Other Jobs on Hand.

Blixt tells of several other jobs which had been proposed by Hayward but which fell through, and says that after this job, for which he was to receive $2,000, or one-fifth of the life insurance involved, he was to receive $400 for "doing" a Chicago man.

Blixt also tells a story to the effect that Harry Haward wanted his assistance in disposing of the father and mother of a young woman in Minneapolis whom he wanted to marry and secure her property.

THE CHICAGO HORROR.

Janitor of an Apartment Building Slain in Cold Blood.

Chicago, Dec. 10.—A. D. Barnes, who was employed as janitor of the Hiawatha apartment building, 258 East Thirty-seventh street, was murdered in a shockingly brutal manner Thursday night in the basement of the building, and an elaborate effort was made by his slayer and accessories after the fact to conceal the crime by hiding the hacked and mutilated corpse in a hole under the sidewalk on South Park avenue, just south of the elevated railroad tracks on Sixty-third street.

Confessions of Guilty Parties.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—Alfred Barnes' murderers have confessed. Saturday, after overwhelming evidence of their guilt had been obtained, they broke down and told how the crime was committed. Wednesday night at 10:15 o'clock in the basement of the Hiawatha flats he was struck down with an ax by Edward Jordan, his assistant, in self-defense, as the assassin claims—in cold blood, as other circumstances indicate. An hour later Jordan brought in to view his bloody work Mrs. Ann Mahoney, formerly Barnes' most intimate friend, now his bitterest foe. Together, by the dim light of a lantern, they removed the evidences of the crime, the woman washing away the bloodstains from the floor. The dead man was left lying on a pile of coal a whole day while the murderer and his accomplice plotted a more elaborate plan of concealment. The next day the body was packed in a box. At night it was removed in an express wagon driven by Tommy Donahue, the woman taking an active leading part in every separate scene. It was dumped on South Park avenue, near Sixty-third street, where it was found Friday morning, the two conspirators feeling assured that they had successfully effaced all trace of their part in the crime.

These facts comprise the essence of a series of full confessions obtained Saturday from the guilty individuals by Inspector Hunt and his officers. The horrible details of the crime were told by the Mahoney woman with a degree of exultation at Barnes' death which horrified her hearers, and fully expressed her extreme hatred of the man who she said had betrayed, abused, scandalized and robbed her.

Jordan's Confession.

After Annie Mahoney confessed her share of the crime, Jordan was brought to the inspector's room and Annie told her tale in the murderer's presence. Jordan then confessed her story was correct. But he explained that he was afraid of Barnes; that Barnes had poison in the house, and that he (Jordan) was afraid Barnes would kill him.

Jordan continued: "Barnes came into the basement and began to quarrel with me. He asked me where the screwdriver was and when I told him I did not know he called me a liar and made a smash at me with his fist. When he came at me again I gave it to him with the ax."

COUNT DE LESSEPS DEAD.

Distinguished French Financier and Engineer Passes Away.

Paris, Dec. 8.—Count Ferdinand de Lesseps, who has been one of the most prominent characters in France for more than a quarter of a century, is dead. The end of his life came after a protracted illness, induced and aggravated by the severe strain to which

[Ferdinand Marie, Viscount de Lesseps, was born in Versailles, November 11, 1805. He received his early education in Paris, but finished it with his father, a consular agent, and lived with him in Philadelphia in 1819-22. He was consular agent at Lisbon in 1825 to 1827, and served afterwards at Tunis, Alexandria, Cairo, Rotterdam, Malaga and Barcelona. He was then appointed successively minister to Spain and to Rome. While on a visit to Egypt in 1854 he disclosed the project of a Suez canal to Said Pasha and two years later secured the desired concession. The canal was opened for steamers of light draught in 1865, and the full plans were carried to completion in 1869. Since 1873 Count de Lesseps has concentrated his attention to the Panama canal.

It was in 1875 that de Lesseps inaugurated the movement that culminated in the canal congress of 1879 and the adoption of the scheme for uniting the Atlantic and Pacific at the isthmus of Panama. From the beginning the aged engineer and diplomat seems to have been as badly deceived and victimized as the public. Lying circulars were issued, and the Paris and Panama papers were induced to aid in the deception of investors. The magic of the name of de Lesseps caused the thrifty peasantry all over France to open their woolen stockings, and gold poured into the Panama treasury in a flood. The story of the extravagance and corruption which followed is still fresh in the public mind. It constitutes one of the most disgraceful, as well as one of the most gigantic swindles in history.

At the time the exposure came the actual cost of the completed fraction of the canal—variously estimated at one-fourth, one-fifth and one-tenth—was $260,000,000, more than double the first estimate of the entire work. The money had gone into extravagant and useless outlay and into the pockets of the conspirators and those of leading statesmen and journalists in Paris. There was not sufficient evidence that either de Lesseps or his son had received any of the money in a corrupt way, but to satisfy the public rage both were convicted, although the sentence against de Lesseps, Sr., was never carried out.]

IVES THE CHAMPION.

He Defeats Schaefer in the Chicago Tourney by 769 Points.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—For the second time in a month Frank C. Ives has shown himself the master of Jacob Schaefer at balk-line billiards, with the anchor nurse barred. By winning Saturday night's game Ives won the six nights' tournament of 3,600 points up, 600 points of which were played each night, legitimate title of "champion," a stake of $5,000 and the net door receipts. The title of champion was not involved in this tournament, but having beaten Schaefer twice in a month the young Napoleon may fairly lay claim to it. Ives showed greater skill in nursing the balls throughout the contest and made fully as many difficult shots as his antagonist. Schaefer's average was 62 14-15 Friday night—the biggest of the tournament. Ives twice broke the record with runs of 334 and 359. Schaefer's biggest run was 217.

At the conclusion of the tournament the score stood: Ives, 3,600; Schaefer, 2,831. Schaefer was beaten 769 points. Ives' grand average was 41 33-87, and Schaefer's 32 47-87. In New York Ives' average was 48 27-37, and Schaefer's 41 20-37. The score on Saturday night was: Ives, 600; Schaefer, 456. Ives' average, 40; highest run, 165. Schaefer's average, 32 8-14; highest run, 125.

HOLDS ITS OWN.

But Very Little Change Is Apparent in Business Circles.

New York, Dec. 8.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

"It is difficult to detect any change in current business. Prospects for business after January 1 are quite generally considered more hopeful in some branches. There are larger orders and the west-bound shipments of merchandise are larger. But the working force is naturally diminished near the end of the year, and the holiday traffic brings just now a temporary activity which is not of much general significance. The meeting of congress and the announcement of the new currency plan and of various bills proposed have not affected the situation perceptibly. Payments for bonds have been completed without disturbance, but did not prevent the shipment of some gold to Europe Friday. On the whole, agricultural products are scarcely stronger, and wages o labor do not advance, but there is reason to expect the employment of a somewhat larger working force after the holidays.

"The liabilities in failures for the last week of November were $2,038,407, against $2,904,476 for the same week last year, but the decrease was wholly in manufacturing liabilities. $427,644, against $1,675,027 last year, while trading liabilities were $1,567,348, against $1,208,449 last year. For the four weeks of Novemb the aggregate was $10,581,873, against $20,841,621 last year. The failures this week have been 385 in the United States, against 385 last year, and 40 in Canada, against 42 last year."

SEVEN DROWNED.

Two Skaters Go Through an Air Hole—Would-Be Rescuers Follow.

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 12.—News has reached here of the drowning of seven persons on Saturday at the town of Littleton, a town in Buchanan county. George and Hannah Cook went skating on the mill pond near the village, and on their failure to return home search was instituted. A crowd gathered round an air hole, through which it was supposed the children had fallen, when suddenly the ice gave way and twelve persons were precipitated into the water. Seven were rescued by bystanders, but the other five were taken out dead. The remains of the Cook children were also found. The dead are Fred Hanks, John Morton, George Roberts, C. H. Hanks, George B. Floss George Cook and Hannah Cook.

An Outlaw Killed.

Perry, O. T., Dec. 11.—A fight occurred between some officers of Grant county and five escaped prisoners in the Creek nation, in which Dr. Bowman, a noted outlaw, was killed, and two other prisoners and one officer were wounded. All the fugitives were captured.

Shoot Folly as It Flies,

Says the bard. The difficulty is that the folly of some folks don't fly, it sticks. We cite, as a forcible illustration, the folly of people who keep on dosing themselves with objectionable drugs for disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, easily and pleasantly curable with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which not only remedies these, but also restores vigor and strength, and banishes malaria, rheumatism and nervousness.

Kitty—"What do you suppose her age is?" Tom—"I don't know. But a woman's age doesn't matter so much as how long she has been that age."—Puck.

THE BUSINESS MAN'S LUNCH.

Hard Work and Indigestion go Hand in Hand.

Concentrated thought, continued in, robs the stomach of necessary blood, and this is also true of hard physical labor.

When a five horse-power engine is made to do ten horse-power work something is going to break. Very often the hard-worked man coming from the field or the office will "bolt" his food in a few minutes which will take hours to digest. Then too, many foods are about as useful in the stomach as a keg of nails would be in a fire under a boiler. The ill-used stomach refuses to do its work without the proper stimulus which it gets from the blood and nerves. The nerves are weak and "ready to break," because they do not get the nourishment they require from the blood, finally the ill-used brain is morbidly wide awake when the overworked man attempts to find rest in bed.

The application of common sense in the treatment of the stomach and the whole system brings to the busy man the full enjoyment of life and healthy digestion when he takes Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets to relieve a bilious stomach or after a too hearty meal, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify, enrich and vitalize the blood. The "Pellets" are tiny sugar-coated pills made of highly concentrated vegetable ingredients which relieve the stomach of all offending matters easily and thoroughly. They need only be taken for a short time to cure the biliousness, constipation and slothfulness, or torpor, of the liver; then the "Medical Discovery" should be taken in teaspoonful doses to increase the blood and enrich it. It has a peculiar effect upon the lining membranes of the stomach and bowels, toning up and strengthening them for all time. The whole system feels the effect of the pure blood coursing through the body and the nerves are vitalized and strengthened, not deadened, or put to sleep, as the so-called celery compounds and nerve mixtures do—but refreshed and fed on the food they need for health. If you suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia, nervousness, and any of the ills which come from impure blood and disordered stomach, you can cure yourself with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which can be obtained at any drug store in the country.

WHEN SUMMER BREEZES BLEW.

O soft and sweet the morning bright
Breaks o'er the hilltops blue;
Adown the mead the beams of light
Glint on the drops of dew;
The brook that babbles through the grove
Sings soft its lullaby;
O sweet is life and sweet is love
When summer breezes sigh.

The blue bird's note at early dawn
The drooping silence breaks;
The robin skims the dewy lawn,
New day with song awakes;
And mists from out the valley move,
The wind-swept pine breathes low!
O sweet is life and sweet is love!
When summer breezes blow.

The soft-eyed cow the clover crops,
Nor counts the leaves before;
While down the glade the milk maid trips
And counts them two, three, four;
"Heigho," she sings the milk above,
"One he comes, and two he tarries,"
O sweet is life and sweet is love!
When reign the summer fairies.

The farmer boy goes fresh afield,
Heeds not the apple blossoms
That in his path their fragrance yield,
Or nature's sweet taught lessons.
His wistful eyes towards the city rove,
Their dreams his heart entrances;
O sweet is life and sweet is love!
When glows youth's golden fancies.

Now autumn winds around us sweep,
Sad echoes fill the air:
The leaden clouds drop low to weep,
No songs the breezes bear;
O memories sweet! that fancy wove,
When summer roses grew;
O sweet was life and sweet was love!
When summer breezes blew.

—Henry Wetherby, in Brooklyn Eagle.

UNNUMERABLE are the ways in which unexpected marriages do come about," said old Aunty Smith, addressing the members of the sewing circle assembled in the clergyman's residence one Friday afternoon— "how they do come about, to be sure! Seems to be a special Providence in 'em—sometimes for a blessin' and sometimes for a cuss."

"Mostly for a cuss," said Miss Jones, still a spinster at sixty-five.

"And two people, or any one of two people, can make a marriage a curse or a blessing, as they choose, after the ring is on," said Mrs. Brown.

"Until that horrid word 'obey' is struck out of the service," began Miss Jones, "I feel sure—"

"I don't see why that should bother you," cried Aunty Smith.

"Aunty Smith is right about one thing," interrupted the minister's wife in her turn, perhaps to avert the impending squabble. "The most unexpected matches are always being made. Just the people we think ought to come together never do; and just the people whose names we never couple, do it for themselves. Now, twenty years ago no one would have fancied that I would be Mrs. Calvin Richards. I'm sure I wouldn't have believed a prophecy to that effect myself."

"Why, I've allers said you were sent down from Heaven ticketed for each other—you'n the dominie," said Aunt Smith.

"If we were," said Miss Richards, "I had certainly lost my ticket. I was a very lively girl, Aunt Smith. I loved to dance and sing, and enjoy myself generally. I doted on a good play"—here Miss Jones was heard to groan quietly over her back stitching—"and I had beaux enough with tastes like my own. A clergyman's wife I had often vowed I never would be. And I felt more certain about it than ever whenever my father entertained clergymen. They were, it seemed to me, never young and never handsome. Their very smiles were solemn, and they generally had weak lungs."

"Yes, poor dears, that's very true," said Aunty Smith. "About the lungs, I mean."

"I had a notion," said Mrs. Richards, "that to be very handsome a man must be a little wicked. The handsomest man I ever saw was a gambler. When I was a little girl, nine or ten years old at most, an old uncle of mine had said to me once as I stood at the window of his parlor in New York: 'Emma, did you ever see a gambler? That's one. His name is Thompson.' It was as though he had said: 'Did you ever see Satan?' I stared with all my might and I have never forgotten the face I saw then. 'That a gambler?' said I. 'Oh, uncle, it can't be.' 'She knows a handsome man when she sees one, already,' said my uncle. And I always did," laughed Mrs. Richards. "When I was a girl I looked first at a man's face and then at his figure, and, if they did not suit me, I never asked about his virtues. As for his talents, I don't believe that either man or woman ever fell in love with talent yet. And you know," continued Mrs. Richards, "Mr. Richards is not a handsome man."

Aunty Smith remarked, with great truth, that "beauty was only skin deep," and Mrs. Richards went on:

"He's portly now, though, and wears whiskers. He is very much improved indeed, outwardly. Has a will of his own, and shows it. He hasn't weak lungs at forty-five. But when I first saw him he was pale and thin and nervous and had a bad cough. And, though, as pastor of our church, I saw him every Sunday, I forgot him every Monday. Anyone I knew seemed more likely to please me than he did. And when he first began to call on me, I've many a time been wicked enough to send down word that I was out and hide in the closet; while ma, who had not heard me give the message to the servant, looked for me in all the rooms of the house.

"The young man I used to run about with most drank himself to death ten years ago; but he had cheeks like peaches then and eyes as blue as a baby's. And how he could sing! And I went down on my knees and thanked God, when I heard the news, that it was not I who wept over his grave the day they buried him.

"But I'm running away from my point. Mr. Richards preached to me Sundays and called on me Thursdays and took tea with us over and over again, and my heart never went pitapat once on his account. I began to respect him greatly and to think he spoke well in the pulpit and to feel sorry for him somehow, though I couldn't say why, but nothing more. And Jack Falconer took me out to ride, and Will Hunter rowed me across the river, and young Jefferson sent me bouquets; and all that was enough to put a pale young fellow with a low voice and no idea of gallantry and not a bit of impudence in him out of any woman's head entirely.

"And to crown all, there came upon my birthday—my nineteenth birthday—a present of a watch and chain from my uncle in New York and an invitation to spend the winter with his wife and himself. A gay winter it would be, I knew.

"I had my new watch in the parlor, showing it to Fanny Peel that Thursday, when he rang the bell—and, as I had my hair in papers, I ran away. Fannie took them out for me, and I went down. She would not go in with me. And I found Mr. Richards, paler and more fidgety than usual, waiting for me. I could not help knowing that he thought a great deal of me by this time, and of course, you know, a girl must like a man a little for that; but I thought I did not like him enough to let him say what I was afraid he had come to say. Then, too, the congregation was expecting him to marry, and I thought it was rather that he liked me best, than that he loved desperately, as I wanted to be loved. Cool affection may do for some women; it never would for me—never.

"So I misunderstood and changed the subject, and all that. And off he went at last, so pale that I felt sorrier than ever for him. And I went to my room and had a cry, I didn't know why. And it was only that night that I remembered my watch. I had left it on the table in the parlor, but it was there no longer; in fact, it was not in the house. We did not suspect Hepsiba, who had lived with us twenty years. There was no one in the house to suspect. But the watch and chain were valuable. The police force of our town consisted of two very old men, and father sent for a New York detective to ferret out the theft. He came down at once and felt sure of success. I cried about my watch a good deal, and cried a little more about poor Mr. Richards, who had received news that his mother was dangerously ill, and had gone, probably, to her deathbed. But tears hurt no one at nineteen, and I was enjoying my tea very thoroughly, when a tap at the door and a 'May I come in?' announced Mr. Sharp, the detective.

"'Success,' he said, rubbing his hands. 'Your watch is found, miss. The thief was off for——, with it loose in his pocket. Number 785,694; Geneva, full jeweled; enameled in blue; plate marked "Emma, from her uncle." All correct?'

"'I was so glad. 'Oh, thank you,' I said. 'Who is the man, sir?'

"'A regular one,' said the detective. 'Slim and genteel, disguised as a clergyman. Says he's going to his mother's deathbed. Calls himself Rev. Calvin Richards. Says he took it in a fit of abstraction. I say, ma'am, what's the matter?' for mother had screamed; and I turned faint and clung to papa.

"'"It's our pastor,' said mamma. 'It is a mistake. He's picked it up. He does such things often. Went off with a napkin once from our table. He has a way of picking up things. Where is he?'

"'"It's a bad way,' said the detective; 'and he's in jail, ma'am, locked up for the night, and the queen of England couldn't get him out until morning. If your parson is a kleptomaniac, I can't waste my time for nothing.'

"'"I'll pay you, only get him out,' cried papa.

"'"He ain't a what's-his-name maniac. He's abstracted,' cried mamma.

"'"He's abstracted that there watch, anyhow,' said Mr. Sharp. 'And, perhaps it's an impostor under the name. Wait until morning.'

"We did wait. I did not sleep, however.

"At seven next morning we were off for the jail. They were just bringing a burglar, a beggar, and Rev. Mr. Richards into court.

"Of course we all knew it was caused by his abstraction. Such fits of it as he used to have, ladies! And the judge made quite a joke of it. But he had been in jail all night and his mother might be dead and he not with her. And in a little musty room, where we were left alone a few minutes, he turned to me such a sad, pale face.

"'My mortification is extreme, Miss Emma,' he said. 'I know you do not believe me a thief, but I must have lost your esteem entirely, and—I wanted it so much. I—intended to strive for it.'

"'You have my esteem, sir,' I said. 'You have done nothing to forfeit it.'

"We looked into each other's eyes then, and we had never looked just so at each other before.

"'I have your esteem,' he repeated, 'but—I—'

"'Well?' I said.

"'I wanted more,' he answered. There was a step coming along the corridor. 'I wanted your love,' he whispered.

"And I whispered back: 'You have it.'

"And so he had. I had given it to him somehow in the night, while he lay in prison, and I awake in my own room.

"Then the rest were there, and we parted without even a kiss; and he went to his mother's bedside, but not to see her die, for she came to our wedding six months after—just such a dear old lady as his mother ought to be."—N. Y. News.

An Important Decision.

"How did you come out in the breach-of-promise suit?"

"Got a verdict in my favor."

"I thought the young woman had a clear case against you."

"Well, so did I; but the jury held that a man is not responsible for what he says at the seashore."—Judge.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

School System.

The committee appointed by the congress of county school superintendents, held in Minneapolis in August, to develop a plan for changing from the present system of district to a system of township schools, met again at St. Paul. Those present were Dr. Kiehle, Supt. McIntosh, of Washington county; Supt. A. M. Sperry, of Dodge county; S. A. Farnsworth, principal of the Cleveland school, St. Paul, and Supt. Pendergast.

The whole question was discussed at some length, and it was finally decided to recommend the establishment in each township of a board of three trustees to have charge of all the schools in the township, with the exception of such independent schools as desire to remain independent. The plan is to conduct the schools of each township on the same principle as city schools are now run, the board of trustees being elected by the voters of the whole township without regard to locality. This will result in an equalization of the school taxes and make all the scholars sharers in the public funds, according to the cost of running them.

Slaughtered Deer.

An evidence of the uncalled-for slaughter of deer in the north part of the state during the hunting season, there were shipped from Park Rapids, 934 saddles and 40 whole deer, besides the large number which were eaten by the hunters and residents. The largest number ever shipped before was 700. Many deer were bought at that point by men who made no secret of the fact that they were buying to ship to other states At this rate it will not be long before it will be impossible for any one to find any game in the state.

Prison Population.

The fruits of the general terms of the district court now being held throughout the state are clearly shown by the large number of arrivals at the Stillwater prison. During the month of November the population increased from 504 to 531, and since the first of December it has increased to 539. Many prisoners are now confined in county jails in different parts of the state, and the population will soon reach 550.

News in Brief.

Robbers attempted to chloroform Mrs. B. F. Heatstand, of Hills, before gaining admission to the house, they were frightened away by her husband, who arrived unexpectedly on the night train.

The cash earnings of the state's prison last month were $60,219.55, of which $54,402 was of binder twine account.

A statement compiled by the state railroad and warehouse commission shows that on Nov. 13 the price of No. 1 hard wheat at Duluth was 1.35 cents higher than 8,000 bushels of No. 1 hard Manitoba sold for in Liverpool, deducting freight and insurance on the same.

Mike Teberg's barn near Pipestone was burned, with six head of horses, 20 head of cattle, windmill, threshing machine, 10,000 bushels of grain and a new header. The loss is over $5,000, partly insured.

W. P. Andrus, executive agent of the State Game and Fish commission, proposes several amendments to the present state law. One is to change the open season for deer so it will begin on Nov. 10 and close on Dec. 1. Another amendment is to prohibit the spring shooting of ducks. In regards to fishing, he favors extending the winter season to Feb. 1, providing it be done in a legal manner.

A 4-year-old child of Anton Weber, of East St. Cloud, while playing on the railroad track, was run down by a freight train and its foot taken off.

A sneak thief entered Erbly's barber shop at Faribault and carried off nearly all his tools.

A. M. Bailey, a machinist in the employ of the Marinette Iron Works, at Duluth, after returning from church, went up to his room, lay down on the floor with a mirror in his hand and severed his neck from ear to ear. He was 35 years old and unmarried. No reason can be assigned for his act.

A livery barn, 10 horses and a feed mill burned at Hills, the property of O. M. Rand. Loss, $2,000. The fire was set by the feed mill engine. The town was saved by hard work.

The residence of E. B. Sperry, at St. Paul Park, was destroyed by fire. He barely had time to escape in his night clothes.

Miss Annie Nelson, of St. Paul, fell dead while working in the kitchen.

The seventh annual convention of the Journeyman Barbers' International Union was held in St. Paul.

At Anoka as a Northern Pacific extra pulled in to the depot an unknown man from Minot, N. D., stepped on the track and walked toward the engine. He was run over and died in a short time. The only name found on his person was Frank Guimont, Osseo, Minn. He talked a few minutes before the accident and said he was there looking for work.

A. M. Beal, of Tama, Io., committed suicide at the Great Northern hotel, in St. Paul, by taking strychnine.

A fellow passing for an Illinois snow fence inspector started in to rob the town of Hills. He opened one safe, but was frightened away before securing the money it contained.

Trust deeds aggregating $1,500,000 were filed at Duluth. They are from the consolidated Elevator Company to the Franklin Trust Company, of Brooklyn. The deeds are to secure bond issues made by the Lake Superior, Union Improvement and Northern Pacific elevator companies, all of which have been succeeded by the Consolidated Elevator Company.

J. H. Burns, ex-county auditor of Ramsey county, was arrested upon a warrant sworn out by his mother-in-law, Mrs. Reidel, on a charge of embezzlement. Burns is already under two indictments for obtaining money under false pretenses.

A local grain dealer estimates the wheat crop of Goodhue county this year at 400,000 bushels, and the barley crop at 1,250,000 bushels.

Two agents of the dairy commission returned from an inspection tour in the Iron Range. During this trip they have confiscated 1,700 pounds of oleomargarine found in stores, restaurants, hotels and boarding houses. The commission will prosecute in all these cases where it is possible, and the investigation will be continued.

Between 200 and 300 turkeys were stolen from the farmers around Montrose.

A WOMAN'S HEART.

One Disease That Baffles the Physician.

The Story of a Woman Who Suffered for Nine Years. How She Was Cured.

(From the Newark, N. J., Evening News.)

Valvular disease of the heart has always been considered incurable. The following interview, therefore, will interest the medical profession, since it describes the successful use of a new treatment for this disease. The patient is Mrs. George Archer, of Clifton, N. J., and this publication by the News is the first mention made of the case by any newspaper. All physicians consulted pronounced the patient suffering with valvular disease of the heart, and treated her without the slightest relief. Mrs. Archer said: "I could not walk across the floor; neither could I go upstairs without stopping to let the pain in my chest and left arm cease. I felt an awful constriction about my arm and chest as though I were tied with ropes. Then there was a terrible noise at my right ear, like the labored breathing of some great animal. I have often turned expecting to see some creature at my side.

"Last July," continued Mrs. Archer, "I was at Springfield, Mass., visiting, and my mother showed me an account in the Springfield Examiner, telling of the wonderful cures effected by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. My mother urged me to try the pills and on November 25th last I bought a box and began taking them, and I have taken them ever since, except for a short interval. The first box did not seem to benefit me, but I persevered, encouraged by the requests of my relatives. After beginning on the second box, to my wonder, the noise at my right ear ceased entirely. I kept right on and the distress that I used to feel in my chest and arm gradually disappeared. The blood has returned to my face, lips and ears, which were entirly devoid of color, and I feel well and strong again.

"My son, too, had been troubled with gastritis and I induced him to try the Pink Pills, with great benefit. I feel that everybody ought to know of my wonderful cure and I bless God that I have found something that has given me this great relief."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are now given to the public as an unfailing blood builder and nerve restorer, curing all forms of weakness arising from a watery condition of the blood or shattered nerves, two fruitful causes of most every ill that flesh is heir to. These pills are also a specific for the troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, all forms of weakness, chronic constipation, bearing down pains, etc., and in the case of men will give speedy relief and effect a permanent cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature. The pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box or 6 boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

BOTH IN THE SAME FIX.

An Error Which Called Down Anathemas on a Conductor's Head.

A tired looking traveler who was fast asleep submitted to a vigorous poking in the ribs and a sound shaking by the coat collar from the railroad conductor on board the Albany express the other evening.

"Here, rouse up!" shouted the conductor. "I'm getting played out on this business. This is the second man sleeping like the dead I've had to shake up to-night."

"Are we near Poughkeepsie?" asked the man, rousing up.

"Poughkeepsie?" echoed the conductor. "Don't you begin talking no 'Poughkeepsie' to me any more to-night. You're just into your own station, New York. I promised to call you and here you are. I called up one chap at Poughkeepsie, and good thanks I got. After carrying him to the platform he swore like the dence after me when the train steamed out and prayed to the Lord I might be tumbled down a precipice. I've got enough Poughkeepsie, and New York, too, for one night."

"Do you mean to tell me, you scoundrel," said the now fully roused man, "that you've allowed me to be carried to New York after giving you half a dollar to put me off at Poughkeepsie?"

"Good land!" said the astonished conductor, "I put off the wrong chap at Poughkeepsie. That's the reason he came tearing back on the platform after the train started to swear blue devils at me. Here, sir, here's your half dollar. I'd give more than one to get the two of you changed round to-night. I'm mighty sorry."

"Keep your coin," said the irate man, repressing his readiness to swear. "You've put me into a precious nasty fix, but some one else is there, too. It's pretty bad all round, but abuse won't mend it. In future I'll take good care not to pin my faith on conductors."
N. Y. Herald.

Dominant Races of the West.

Capt. Mahan in a recent magazine article described our "vaunted European and American civilization" as "an oasis set in the midst of a desert of barbarism." It is a rather large oasis, however, since the number of people who speak European languages is fully 460,000,000. About 110,000,000 of these are English speaking, the Germans and Russians coming next on the list with 75,000,000 a piece. French is spoken by 51,000,000; Spanish by 43,000,000; Italian by 33,000,000, and Portuguese by 13,000,000 human beings. Of the "outer barbarians" nearly 290,000,000 live in India under British rule, and the 300,000,000 or more inhabitants of China seem destined to come within the sphere of western influence through the instrumentality of the 40,000,000 Japanese. The "oasis of civilization" will soon compass every part of the inhabited globe. The triumph of the western world is even now all but complete.—Philadelphia Record.

FIRESIDE FRAGMENTS.

—Potato Balls.—Flouring the hands, work cold mashed potato into small round cakes and fry brown in lard, with a sprinkle of salt, or meat drippings, which is better. Parsnips are nice cooked in this way.—Housekeeper.

—To Fry Oysters.—Have a brisk fire, put on a deep skillet full of lard. Prepare your oysters by draining and wiping each one dry on a clean tea towel, then season and roll in cornmeal. When the lard is boiling drop in the oysters and let them fry until brown. Be sure the lard is boiling hot. St. Louis Republican.

—Grape Pie.—Crush the grapes, removing their skins, and simmer the seeds and pulp together in a porcelain kettle, pressing through a colander to remove the seeds. Then put skins and pulp together, sweeten to taste, stir in a teaspoonful of flour if very juicy, and pour into a pie plate lined with paste. The pie is baked with an upper cover. —N. Y. Observer.

—A Sunday Pudding.—Two eggs, their weight in butter, flour and sugar. Beat the butter and sugar to a cream, add the eggs, and lastly the flour, which has had half a teaspoonful of baking powder mixed in it. Butter a shallow pie dish, spread with a layer of small stewed figs, cut finely, pour the batter mixture over, and bake for half an hour.—Leed's Mercury.

—Cocoanut Tarts.—Dissolve half a pound of sugar in a half a pint of water; add a pound of grated cocoanut and stir over the fire for five minutes. Let cool. Add the beaten yolk and the white of one egg. Line little tart pans with puff paste; fill with the mixture and bake. A lemon or almond mixture may be used to fill the tarts in place of cocoanut if desired.—Western Rural.

—Custard Souffle.—Rub two scant tablespoonfuls of butter to a cream, add two scant tablespoonfuls of flour. Pour over this gradually one cup hot milk and cook eight minutes in a double boiler, stirring often. Beat the yolks of four eggs, add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, stir into the milk and set away to cool. Half an hour or so before serving beat the whites of four eggs stiff and add to mixture lightly. Bake in a buttered pudding dish in a moderate oven thirty-six minutes. Serve at once.—N. Y. Ledger.

—Apple Pandowdy.—This is another old-time dish, none the less delectable on account of its antiquity. Line the bottom and sides of a deep baking dish with thin slices of buttered bread, letting them take the place of the usual paste lining. Put in as thick a layer of thinly sliced apples as the dish will accommodate, sprinkle with nutmeg or cinnamon, and turn over a cupful of brown sugar dissolved in half the volume of hot water. Over the top put another layer of the bread, cover the dish with a plate, and bake slowly for an hour and a half. It is served hot, inverted on a platter, with liquid sauce or cream.—Good Housekeeping.

EARLY INFANTRY EQUIPMENT.

Very Crude as Compared With Modern Arms.

Among the arms now obsolete, which formed a large part of the infantry equipment in the days when the army was started, was the pike, which was in the form of a spear, with a flat and pointed head, mounted on a staff from thirteen to eighteen feet long. The firearm in general use at the time was the matchlock.

What would a sergeant major of the present day, with his men, armed with the magazine rifle, think of such a weapon as this: "Attached to the lock of this musket was a pan, also a cock, the hammer of which was somewhat in the form of a bird's, serpent's, or dog's head: this head was split, and a screw compressed or eased the slits. The piece being loaded first with powder and then with ball, some powder was poured into the pan; the pan was then shut to keep this 'priming' from dropping out, and to keep it dry. When the soldier wished to fire, he fastened his burning match into the slit of the cock, opened the pan, looked to his priming, presented, and pulled the trigger; the match, falling into the powder in the pan, fired it.

"Between the pan and the breach of the barrel communication was established by means of a small hole; when the piece was being loaded, the grains of powder were naturally rammed and shaken down close to this hole, and when priming, the soldier took care to perfect the communication of the powder in the pan with that in the barrel; thus the explosion in the pan caused the ignition of the charge."—All the Year Round.

Odd Waists or Blouses.

A waist of cherry Henrietta to be worn with brown, gray or navy skirts, has a shirring at the center fronts, leg-of-mutton sleeves, crush belt and collar, and circular epaulettes. All edges are finished with three rows of No. 1 black satin ribbon. One of striped blue and beige flannel has a pointed yoke stitched on the one-piece back, leg-of-mutton sleeves having deep cuffs, turn-over collar and three box-plaits in front. This is worn with a blue ribbon belting belt, such as sells from thirty-nine cents at this season. For nicer wear an old rose surah has a round yoke of three puffs, leg-of-mutton sleeves, crush collar and belt. All edges are finished with an inch-wide edging of white guipure lace sewed under the silk edge. For all kinds of wear changeable brown and blue or green taffeta is made with the inevitable leg-of-mutton sleeves, crush collar and belt, epaulettes ending as revers, or a shirred yoke without any revers. These waists are worn to school, church, at home, girls' parties and to dancing-school.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Poverty of the Bonapartes.

Some time before the death of his father, Gen. Marbeuf had married, and the pecuniary supplies to his boy friend seem after that event to have stopped. Mme de Buonaparte was left with four infant children; the youngest, Jerome but three months old. Their great-uncle, Lucien the archdeacon, was kind, and Joseph, abandoning all his ambitions, returned to be, if possible, the support of the family. Napoleon's poverty was therefore no longer relative or imaginary, but real and hard. Drawing more closely than ever within himself, he became a still more ardent reader and student, devoting himself with an industry akin to passion to the works of Rousseau, the poison of whose political doctrines instilled itself with fiery and grateful stings into the thin, cold blood of the unhappy cadet.—Prof. Sloane, in Century.

DELANO DIARY

—The Delano Flouring Mill is now running full blast, and turning out good flour.

—Quite a number of Delanoites are at the Countyseat today trying to find out "who killed Yancy's dog."

—Friendship Rebecca Lodge No. 37 will give an invitation dance in the City Hall on the evening of Dec. 31.

—Baled hay is being shipped to the cities from this place. We think from reports there must be considerable profit in the business.

—Recorder Mealey receives the money for the use of lights and water, at his jewelry store. Delinquents are taxed 20 per cent additional.

—An interesting essay on "The Kangaroo" appears in another column through the kindness of Prof. Vernon Wilder, in whose school appears to be a literary talent.

—Delano is head center for liquids; two beer wagons and the Standard Oil Company wagon with four horses, supplying neighboring towns. As for herself, well and Crow River water, and electric lights are good enough.

—We see by some of the Carver county papers that a receiver has been appointed for the Watertown Flouring Mill. It is hoped that the differences may be adjusted and the mill again take its place among the solid institutions of our neighboring village.

—People have often had an opportunity to learn how much of a detriment to business muddy, rough and bad roads are. For the past few weeks they have had a chance to see what smooth and good roads can do for the people. As large loads are now being hauled on wagons with as much ease as is generally done on snow.

—E. J. Swedeback has traded his Third Street dwelling to I. Gutzwiller, for a farm near Montrose. Mr. S. will occupy rooms upstairs in his brick building on River Street, where he expects to be supplied with all the modern conveniences now being furnished by the city. Mr. Gutzwiller, now that he really has a cage, will of course be expected to catch a bird, anyway by early spring.

—Frank Davis, of Watertown, was in town Fair Day, and as usual imbibed a little too freely and waxed abusive, and it is said was kicked and abused so that he is dangerously hurt. In case of his demise from the effects of the bruising a rather serious lawsuit may await somebody. People who are well known to drink too much for their own and other people's good should not be allowed to have any at all, especially on Fair Days.

—Who says advertising doesn't pay? Evenson Bros. used a conple of pages of the Herald a few weeks ago and on Tuesday sold a stove and cooking outfit to a man a mile and a half beyond Gaylord, who stated that he was prompted to come here by that advertisment. This by the way is the time to advertise. Printers Ink, an authority on advertising, says that one of the best months for advertising is December. The others are November, October, August, July, September, May, June, April, January, March, and February. —St. Peter Herald.

"There Is No Royal Road To public favor any more than to learning. This is true, at all events, in America where intrinsic excellence is necessary to secure and retain the popular favor. The reason is that its service is not always up to date but AWAY AHEAD OF THE DATE. In our opinion, this is the Best Line between Chicago and the Twin Cities.—The Excursionist, Chicago.

Mrs. I. H. Grafft, of Hamline, Sundayed with Delano relatives and friends. She made the GAZETTE office a brief call before leaving.

Clint J. Crandall, of Pipestone, was in town this week. The little Indians will, in future, remain untutored so far as Clint is concerned.

County Cullings.

The Wright County Medical Society meets at Buffalo on Wednesday, Dec. 19. A full attendance and interesting meeting is expected.

This week's Eagle claims that she was the only Wright county paper to publish the President's Message last week. Readers of the GAZETTE of course know that the Eagle did not tell the truth when she said that, any nearer than she does about many other things. The GAZETTE published the Message in full last Friday.

At the County Commissioners meeting on the the 3d and 4th inst. the full board was present.

Abatement of taxes was recommended to the State Auditor for J. Williams and Josephine Norwack.

The tax matter of Groneruel & Cheeney was rejected.

The Co. Treas. was instructed to accept the personal tax and penalty regardless of cost of Edward Kohler, Delano; Creamery Co., Rockford and B. Peltier, Albion.

The county surveyor was employed to copy into the Road Record Book all surveys not yet recorded.

The Road and Bridge committee was authorized to confer with R. and B. committee of Hennepin Co. to arrange for planking the Dayton bridge.

The tax matter of Groneruel & Cheeney was reconsidered and laid over till February meeting.

The Treasurer's bond was fixed at $75,000, Auditor's bond $5000, Coroner's bond $2000.

The usual number of bills were allowed and the meeting adjourned.

District Court.

Judge Robert Jamison, of Minneapolis, presided over the court proceedings at the county seat last week, this week and probably will next week.

County attorney Culkin, Sheriff Carpenter with Deputies Johnathan Miller, Adam Wood, Owen Graves and Mark Wooley; Clerk of Court O'Leary with deputy William Cochrane and stenographer Richard A. Mabie, assisted in their respective departments.

The following were jurors:

Honor For Davis.

Senator Davis has been invited to deliver the principal address at the unveiling of the statue of Daniel Webster in Memorial Hall of the capitol building at Washington. Elaborate preparations for the event are now under way, and the selection of Senator Davis as orator of the occasion is high honor for him and for Minnesota.—Duluth News-Tribune.

School Composition.

The following composition wus written by Ida Schaar, aged twelve years, a student in the A grade of District No. 40. The standing of the composition was 92 per cent., the highest in the A grade. VERNON WILDER, Teacher.

The Kangaroo.

Kangaroos are peculiar animals. They inhabit the country of Australia and some of the surrounding islands. Most of the animals in Australia are pouched animals. Well, the kangaroo is the most singular of these pouched animals in Australia.

There are several kinds of kangaroos of which the "Giant Kangaroo" is the largest species. Some are small and some are large while some of the largest are about twelve or fourteen feet in length.

The "Tree Kangaroos" don't differ much from the other. It lives in trees most of the time.

There are two other kinds of kangaroos which are the "Rock Kangaroo" and the "Brush Kangaroo". The Rock Kangaroos inhabit the rocky situations, as rocky cliffs on the mountains. The "Brush Kangaroo" resembles the rabbit, very much like the others. It jumps round in the bushes just like the rabbit, most of the time.

They look rather funny; such pouched animals with short and feeble fore legs while the hind legs are long and very strong. They have a large tail and a head shaped something like that of a horse, only smaller. Their ears are like a cow's ear but smaller and stick more upright.

Their eyes are sharp and small and their mouths are also small trimmed with a little moustache.

Their short fore legs and strong hind legs assist them in jumping.

They sit on their hind legs and peep around to see if there is any danger near, and then take long leaps.

The mother kangaroo has a kind of a little sack between her two fore legs, in which she carries her young. The young kangaroo is carried in here till it is old enough to take care of itself. You can only see the head stick out when they are in this pouch.

The shortest description of a kangaroo is this:

The timid kangaroo frequents
The wild Australian brakes;
With long hind legs and fore legs short,
Tremendous leaps he takes.

This little description is found in many books which contain short descriptions of animals. IDA SCHAAR.

WHAT SAVED HIM.

He was ragged and tanned
And his hair was long—
And he looked as though
He had done much wrong.
His eyes were red
And his clothing thin
And St. Peter seemed loath
He should enter in.
But he thought he would ask
What wrong he had done,
And inquire if on earth
Any glory he'd won.
Azrael that moment came along
And saw the figure ragged and wan
He looked at him closely and said, "St. Peter,
You can pass him in—I know that man!"
St. Peter referred to his pond'rous book
And found against him many a crime—
And, alas! as he looked on the other page,
He saw that the man had been "serving time."
"I know it!" said Azrael, looking quite sad,
As he gazed on the applicant meek and mild,
"There's one thing, I'm sure that will pass him in—
He ne'er broke a promise he made to a child!"
—Howard Sixby, in Cincinnati Times-Star.

BUFFALO GAZETTE $1.00 per year.

SAGE DONNELLY gives out considerable savor on being called by a Lake Benton paper, dead. He's an awful strong corpse.

IF the country press has the power attributed to it by Mr. Donnelly, David R. Ramalley will will surely continue in office as Expert Printer. The press seems almost a unit on the subject.

A YOUNG prize fighter named Bowen, was knocked out and killed by Kid Lavignae at New Orleans a few days ago. Boxing is nearly as dangerous as football, but only one at a time gets killed in the ring.

SENATOR EATON, who has had experience advises the 38th Legislative District delegation to keep out of combines and meetings until the Legislature convenes. He says they are not calculated for good to the members who mix in them, and A. Y. knows what he is talking about He's been there.

THE city dailies are trying hard to elect a Speaker of the House and a United States Senator, and to secure the privelege of making their own laws and the St. Paul papers would like a fine new Capitol building, and then the measley set of lawmakers from the rural districts will have no need to come every two years and spend their time sitting around the first class hotels expectoratjng tobacco spit over the floors, and dictating to city people as to how they shall run their money-making schemes.

CLAUS BLIXT who is under arrest for the murder of Miss Ging at Minneapolis, and who it was thought would plead guilty has selected R. R. Odell as his attorney in the case and a plea of not guilty has been entered and a fight on the line that Harry Hayward exercised undue influence, etc., over Blixt, is to be made to free him from the almost certain hanging that has appeared for a couple of weeks to await him. W. W. Erwin is interested in the Hayward's case. A long tedious trial of these cases that appeared at first so plain is now expected, with a possible setting at liberty of men whom the populace was about ready to hang without further ado, a few days ago. Such is law.

Debs Found Guilty.

Last Friday Judge Wood, of Chicago, announced his decision in the case of Debs and his associates as "Guilty of Contempt." In disregarding the injunction issued against them, and which the judge held was valid, lies the contempt. Debs and his associates were charged with a conspiracy to hinder and interrupt interstate commerce and the carriage of the mails upon the railroads centering in Chicago by means and in a manner to constitute within the recognized definitions a public nuisance. The judge claimed that for contempt he could decide the case, for the other question a jury would be needed; but that the punishment could be included under the one head, for contempt, and proceeded to sentence the defendants with their official positions. President Debs, Vice President Howard, Secretary Keihler, Treasurer Rogers, Directors Elliot, Burns, McVean, Hogan and Gillman each to three months in jail except McVean against whom enough evidence was not had to hold him, released and President Debs, considered more guilty, six months in jail.

St. Paul Bound to Run on its Own Hook.

The St. Paul dailies seem bent on having St. Paul for the hub on which hangs the balance of the wheel of the state and then turn the hub to suit themselves regardless of the rest the state, including Minneapolis. The Pioneer Press now advocates the passage of a law by the legislature, allowing cities of over 10,000 inhabitants to be governed by their own laws, without reference to how their neighbors do. And this after giving some of the points of difference between the forms of government of the two cities, St. Paul and Minneapolis, and saying that neither would be willing to give up her own for the system of the other. Then, as the law against special legislation, one of the best laws enacted for years by our state legislature, is in the way of cities having half the time of our law makers taken up with petty laws for the benefit of this or that ward politician, the P. P. wants a general law allowing each city of over 10,000 inhabitants to make its own laws. What then will our solons work at in the future? What need for a legislature, after delegating their powers to legislate away in this style? Why, they had just as well, while about it, make a law that the state furnish each man, woman and child in the state with a copy of "Every Man His Own Lawyer," and turn them loose to run themselves and not be troubled with the expense and turmoil of a legislature. Why don't the P. P. say so and be done with it at once? What is the use of beating about the bush?

Scored The Lawyer.

Boise, Idaho, Dec. 17.—(Special)—The supreme court today handed down a decision in the Perry murder case, sustaining the position of the court below, as a result of which Perry must hang for the murder of McNamara, near Pocattello, some time last spring. The case has attracted wide attention because of the peculiar circumstances attending the conviction of the prisoner. Judge Huston gave a dissenting opinion, claiming that Perry should have a new trial. He denounced the action of J. Ed. Smith, attorney for Perry, in the most scathing terms. From the evidence submitted on appeal, it seems that Perry employed Smith to defend him. Smith slept all night with the prosecuting attorney, visiting his client immediately afterwards, and received from him a $10 bill as a retainer. with information where certain other money was buried, which Smith was to obtain.

Smith went immediately to the prosecuting attorney, gave him the $10 bill on the pretext of wanting change, all folded as Perry had given it to him. The bill had marks on it which proved, on analysis to be human blood. By a strange coincidence, on the night when Smith went to dig for the money hidden, both the sheriff and his deputy were on hand who pounced upon Smith from which sufficient evidence was obtained to convict Perry of murder in the first degree.

An appeal was taken on the ground that the conviction was secured by the evidence of a nature, sacred and confidential between lawyer and client. Justice Houston, among other things, said the crime of which Smith was guilty was without parallel in history, and had no name because one so black had never disgraced the bar. It is thought that executive clemency will be asked for in Perry's behalf.—Minneapolis Times.

Silence More Becoming.

An attitude of diffidence and discreet peaceableness would much better become our republican bretheren than the one of cocksureness which they assume towards the proposed currency plan of Secretary Carlisle. The engineer whose bridge was broken down from his miscalculation of the effect of strains is hardly the person to criticise the plan for the new bridge proposed by other engineers. The doctor whose medications have brought the patient to the brink of the grave should maintain a discreet silence while other doctors are making a diagnosis of the case and proposing other remedies, instead of forcing his voice into a consideration of the case.

A much more consistent position is that of a few of the republican papers which insist that the present currency system is the best possible, and that it should not be changed in the least. With Jack Bunsby they say, "What I says I stand to." But those other republican papers which admit the necessity of currency reform, or, not admitting it, do not insist upon the retention of the present conglomerate, but attack the various features of the Carlisle plan, are not in a favorable position to either advise, criticise or condemn.

For thirty years or more their party has been framing the financial legislation of the country. It gave us the greenback and it stopped its redemption. It gave us the gold certificate, designed to save the bankers and capitalists from loss from the abrasion of their coin, and furnished a precedent for the silver certificate. It stopped the access of silver to the mint at a time when the legal ratio undervalued silver, and thus contributed to the depreciation of that metal, and, then by way of a palative for the mischief it had wrought, committed the country to the policy of buying silver and stowing it away in its vaults and issuing paper certificates in the purchase thereof. It pursued this policy until it culminated in the Sherman act, a measure which so plainly led the way to a silver basis as to shake the confidence of the investors in our securities, which distrust grew and developed into the panic of 1893. With this record of incapacity, this mixture of finance and politics, this making, as in the Sherman act, the currency of the country the marked cards of the game of policies and the awful disaster in which it culminated last year, republicans ought to be diffident and keep silence when another party is endeavoring to restore the currency to a different basis. They are in no position either to advise or criticise.—Globe.

Arbitration Board.

Washington, Dec. 18. — Messrs. Wright and Kernan, two of the commissioners appointed by President Cleveland to investigate the recent labor troubles in Chicago, have, after several conferences with Congressmen Erdman, Springer and McGann, prepared an arbitration bill which is entitled "A bill concerning carriers engaged in the interstate commerce and their employees," which will be introduced into the House tomorrow. It is modeled on the lines of the interstate commerce act, inasmuch as nearly every section of the act has received judicial sanction. It provides that it shall apply to common carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers and property by railroads and by water between the states, and to all persons and corporations leasing cars used for such transportation, and all their employees; and that the wages paid in such transportation and handling, and the rules and regulations, shall be reasonably just—not, however, taking away the right to make contracts.

A commission consisting of five persons shall be appointed by the president and confirmed by the Senate, and shall be called the "United States Board of Conciliation and Arbitration." Not more than three of the commissioners shall be appointed from the same political party. One of the five shall have had some experience in the management of railways, and the others shall be selected from some incorporated association of railway employees. The commission shall have authority to inquire into the terms and conditions of all employees subject to the act, and shall have the right to obtain from common carriers all the information necessary. The provisions of the interstate commerce act are closely followed in this respect. The commission has the power to make all the necessary rules and regulations, may administer oaths and shall have a seal The salary of each commissioner shall be $7,500 per annum, and the secretary to be appointed shall have a salary of $3,500. The principal offices of the commission shall be in the city of Washington, where its general sessions shall be held, but special sessions may be held anywhere in the United States.

An annual report shall be submitted and the publication of the reports and decisions may be authorized and shall be competent evidence in all courts of the United States. Whenever it shall come to the knowledge of the commission that a strike or controversy between those subject to the act is threatened or has occurred, it shall be its duty, as soon as practicable, to put itself in communication with both parties, and endeavor by mediation and conciliation to effect a settlement. Likewise upon the request of employees or incorporations, as well as of its own volition, it may make an investigation. All reports of investigations and mediations, and the findings of facts therein, shall be prima facie evidence as to each and every fact and be given due weight in all judicial proceedings, and the attorney general of the United States, to whom the same shall be transmitted, shall take such action as is necessary. It is also provided that written submissions may be made by the parties, as well as the processes for the enforcement of the details.

During the pendency of an arbitration it is not lawful for an employer to discharge an employe, nor for such employees or associations to aid or abet strikes, nor to quit employment without thirty days notice. The violation of this provision is made a misdemeanor. Whenever receivers appointed by the federal courts are in control of a railroad, the employees shall have the right to be heard in the court room upon all questions affecting the terms of their employment, and no reduction of wages shall be made by the receiver without the authority of the court after due notice.

It is further made a misdemeanor for any officer or employer to require employees to enter into an agreement not to become a member of a labor organization, or to threaten an employee with loss of employment or discrimination because of such membership or to require such employe to become a member of a beneficial organization.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Dec. 14, 1894.

Secretary Carlisle has every reason to feel proud of the hearings granted by the House committee on Banking and Currency, this week, on his plan for currency reform. His plan has not suffered by comparison with the plans and opinions of the prominent financiers who have appeared before the committee. On the contrary, it has been most decidedly strengthened, and it is now the general belief that the committee will shortly report to the House a bill, which, if not precisely the same as that submitted to the committee by Secretary Carlisle, will certainly be along the same or similar lines. It is hoped that the committee can report the currency bill before the holiday recess, in order that the people may have an opportuity to study it and express their views before the House takes it up for final action.

Many statements have been made as to how democrats will vote on this bill, but the most of them are guesses. Of course it is probable that the democrats of the House will, with a few exceptions, support the bill that will be reported by the Banking and Currency, but that they should wait until the bill is reported before committing themselves is perfectly natural. Your correspondent knows that the democratic Senators are much more favorably inclined towards the plan proposed by Secretary Carlisle than they have been reported to be, and that they are anxiously awaiting the action of the House, although the refusal of the Senate to change its rules, which was emphasized by the defeat by a vote of 34 to 24 of Senator Vest's motion to take up his resolution providing for cloture under certain conditions, has materially lessened the chances for getting a currency bill, or any other bill that is opposed by the republicans, through the Senate.

The vote on the bill amending the Interstate Commerce law so as to make freight pooling by railroads legal, was not governed by party politics. In the vote for the bill the names of such prominent democrats are found as Black, of Illinois, (who, by the way, was this week unanimously confirmed as U. S. Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, a positition to which he was nominated by President Cleveland without his knowledge); Catchings, of Mississippi; Culbertson, of Texas; Hatch, of Missouri, Outhwaite, of Ohio; Richardson, of Tennessee; Springer, of Illinois, and Wilson, of West Virginia, while in the votes cast against it may be found the names of equally prominent democrats. For instance, Bryan, of Nebraska; the two Coopers, of Florida and Indiana, respectively: Dockery, of Missouri; Heard, of Missouri; Holman, of Indiana; McCreary, of Kentucky; McMillin, of Tennessee; Sayers, of Texas, and Turner, of Georgia. The division of the republicans was not quite as marked, as a big majority of them supported the bill. There is little doubt that the bill will be passed by the Senate, if it can be brought to a vote: but it is far from certain that it can be. It will all depend upon how determined the opposition is.

Three democratic Senators—Blanchard, of Louisana; Martin, of Kansas, and Roach, of North Dakota—and all the populist senators voted with the republicans to defeat Senator Gray's motion to take up the bill reported from the Finance committee at the last session, as a substitute for the House free sugar bill, which was lost by a vote of 27 to 23. Among the democratic Senators who did not vote were Brice, Gorman, Irby, Morgan, Murphy, Gibson, Turpie, and Smith. It is not thought that any further tariff legislation will be attempted at this session.

The President, Mrs. Cleveland and the children are now back at home in the White House. The President has entirely recovered from his long and troublesome attack of rheumatism and is now apparently in perfect health. He is reported to have said that the administration had done its duty in pointing out to Congress what it believed ought to be done and that it now remained for Congress to do them or not to do them, leaving the final judgment to the people.

The republicans are opposed to the bill making all ships free, but they are willing to support a bill allowing a single foreign built ship an American register as often as parties having sufficient "pull" ask for it. This week the Senate passed one of that nature. The democratic idea is to extend the privilege of receiving an American register to all vessel owners who desire it, instead of by special legislation to the favored few.

The opponents of the income tax were only able to muster 54 votes in the House when they attempted to defeat the preliminary appropriation, to organize the machinery for the collection of the tax, which is in the emergency appropriation bill.

Among Our Exchanges.

If ex-Senator Sabin can dictate who shall be the republican United States senator from Minnesota, it is about time the republican party went out of business.—Sherburne County Star-News.

Where are the printed proceedings of the annual business meeting, held last February, of the Minnesota Editor's and Publisher's association? Is not a period of 9 months long enough to print a pamphlet of the size required to cover those proceedings, or is the failure due to lack of funds? Perhaps business is so brisk in the Twin City printing offices that they have not been able to do this job. If so, better send it to a country office next time. We think it would be a popular innovation to do this anyway.—Moorhead News.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the nimble sex, every one of whom should subscribe for Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and it will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put you in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of the whole family.

GEN. GREELY of the signal service says that the work of constructing "flying" or temporary telegraph and telephone lines for military purposes has been carried to such perfection that telegraph and telephone connection can now be at once established between the headquarters of the army and its different divisions, or between the headquarters of a regiment and its several companies. If the system operates as well in practice as in theory it will revolutionize military methods and make the result of the battle depend more on the telephone connection than on the cannon.

THE CURRENCY QUESTION

Carlisle Outlines His Views Before the House Committee.

Editor White Also Formulates a Measure—Mr. Ferris' Ideas—Banker Cornwell Has a Plan—Dodsworth Is Heard.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The hearing before the house banking and currency committe on the question of a reorganization of the currency laws was resumed in the room of the ways and means committee, but did not move off very promptly.

It was expected that Secretary Carlisle would present his currency bill and continue his statement of Monday, but as the secretary was late in arriving, Mr. White, editor of the New York Evening Post, opened the hearing. Mr. Johnson asked Mr. White's opinion on Secretary Carlisle's currency plan. Mr. White answered that he did not think the secretary's plan would give the elastic currency it sought to secure. It compelled banks to put up thirty cents every time they issued seventy-five cents.

At the close of Mr. White's statement he submitted his bill on the lines of the Baltimore plan. Mr. Homer stated that the committee of national bankers had not yet formulated their bill.

The following is a synopsis of the bill presented to the banking and currency committee by Horace White.

The first section provides that no banking association shall be required to deposit United States bonds either as preliminary to the commencement of banking business or for the security of circulating notes to be hereafter issued.

Section 2 provides that in lieu of the deposits of bonds each national bank association shall be entitled to receive circulating notes from the comptroller to the amount of —— per cent. of its paid-up, unimpaired capital, upon paying to the treasurer lawful money to the amount of 2 per cent. of such circulating notes, and thereafter a tax at the rate of one-half of 1 per cent. per annum upon the average amount of its circulation for the year, to constitute a guarantee fund for the redemption of notes of insolvent national banks, and the tax is to be collected until the fund amounts to not less than 5 per cent. of the entire circulation issued. This fund is also to be in addition to the 5 per cent. redemption fund now provided by law.

Section 3 provides that in addition to the amount of the circulating notes provided for each association shall be entitled to receive from the comptroller circulating notes to the amount of 25 per cent. of its paid-up, unimpaired capital upon paying to the treasurer 2 per cent. of such additional circulation, and that the tax of one-half of 1 per cent per annum upon the average amount of the same outstanding and an additional tax at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum upon the amount of such additional circulation outstanding for the year, all of which sums are to be a part of the guaranty fund.

Section 6 is devoted to the insolvency of national banking associations, and it is provided that when such insolvency shall be ascertained in the case of any particular association its outstanding circulating notes shall be redeemed by the treasurer of the United States out of the guaranty fund if that be sufficient, and if not sufficient out of any fund in the treasury. After the loss on the account of any particular failure has been made good to the guaranty fund the United States is first to be paid for all advances made.

Sec. 7. Associations applying for circulation after the first payments into the guaranty fund shall have been made may receive circulating notes from the comptroller upon paying into the fund a sum bearing a ratio to the circulation applied for and allowed which the guaranty fund bears to the total circulation outstanding.

Section 9 provides that whenever bank notes are issued to any association under this act it shall be the duty of the secretary of the treasury to cancel legal tender United States notes and treasury notes to the amount of 80 per cent. of the bank notes so issued.

Section 10 provides that any association may retire its circulation or any part of it at any time upon depositing with the treasurer an amount equal to the sum desired to be withdrawn.

Section 12 repeals section 9 of the act of July 12, 1882, and also the portion of the act of June 20, 1874, which provides that the amount of bonds on deposit for circulation shall not be reduced below $50,000 and provides that any association heretofore organized desiring to withdraw its circulating notes in whole or in part may do so under the provisions of the act of June 20, 1874, modified as above indicated.

Carlisle's Bill.

At the conclusion of Mr. White's remarks Secretary Carlisle appeared and presented a draft of his proposed bill. A synopsis is as follows:

In the first section all acts regulating the deposit of United States bonds to secure circulating notes of national banks are repealed.

The second section provides for the issuing of circulating notes to a national bank equal o 75 per cent. of the paid-up and unimpaired capital, upon depositing legal tender notes with the United States treasurer equal to 30 per cent. of the circulating notes applied for. These circulating notes shall be in denominations of $10 and multiples of ten, and shall be uniform in design.

Section 3 levies a duty of ¼ per cent. for each half year upon the average amount of a bank's notes in circulation.

Section 4 provides for the mode of redemption and retirement of a bank's circulation.

Section 5 creates the safety fund for the prompt redemption of circulating notes of failed national banks. Each bank shall pay to the United States treasurer in the months of January and July in each year a tax of ¼ per cent. for each half-year upon the average amount of its circulating notes outstanding until said fund amounts to 5 per cent. of the total amount of national bank notes outstanding, and thereafter said tax shall cease. A bank retiring or reducing its circulation shall be entitled to withdraw any part of this fund. The mode of procedure in case of a bank's failure is outlined.

Section 6 allows the secretary of the treasury to invest money belonging to the safety fund in United States bonds.

Section 7 provides that on July 1, 1895, national banks now having bonds on deposit may withdraw them and substitute the 30 per cent. guarantee fund.

Section 8 repeals previous acts conflicting with this measure.

Section 9 provides that the secretary of the treasury may, in his discretion, redeem and retire United States legal tender notes; that no United States or treasury notes authorized by the act of July 1, 1890, of a denomination of less than $10 shall be issued.

Section 10 states that banks duly organized under the laws of any state which transact no other than a banking business shall be exempt from taxation under the laws of the United States under certain conditions regulating state banks.

Section 11 provides that state banks shall not issue notes similar in design to United States notes or certificates or national bank notes

Thursday's Session.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—There was again a large attendance at the meeting of the house committee on banking and currency Thursday morning. A number of eastern bankers and financiers were present and presented their views on the Carlisle and Baltimore plans.

Mr. Ferris' Ideas.

A letter was read from R. B. Ferris, vice president of the Bank of New York. It said:

"There seems to be no good reason why existing national banks who have United States bonds on deposit with the comptroller should not be allowed to continue as they are until their charters expire or the deposited bonds are paid off. Section 7 of Mr. Carlisle's bill seems like forcing the banks to do what they have not been consulted about.

Mr. Ferris advocated the establishlishment of central redemption agencies, which would, he thought, enhance the elasticity of circulation based on a deposit of bonds. Referring to section 10 of the Carlisle bill, providing for the issue of notes by state banks without the provision of a sinking fund, Mr. Ferris said:

"It makes the bill simply an inflation measure modified by the deposit of 30 per cent. in legal tender notes and the provision to cancel United States notes to the extent of 70 per cent. of new circulation issued when the treasury has the means to do it."

Banker Cornwell's Views.

William C. Cornwell, president of the City bank of Buffalo, N. Y., and president of the New York State Bankers' association, said his recommendations were as follows:

1. The greenback and treasury notes should be redeemed and canceled; the real business of the government as regards money is to stamp upon gold and silver their fineness and weight. A government has no right to issue paper with nothing back of it, and to make it legal tender—to create a currency and by an act of law force the people to take it at full value without regard to the intrinsic worth. All such issues up to date have ended in trouble. The greenbacks and treasury notes are of this character. They are the government's notes to the extent of $500,000,000, payable on demand and in gold. They have caused trouble enough already. They are a constant menace to the gold reserve. They should be paid up.

2. The vacancy should be filled with bank notes. The best currency of the best nations to-day is mainly bank notes, which are a first lien upon the assets of the bank. These assets are commercial possessions, representing the product of the brain and muscle of millions of people. They are the wealth of the nation. What better basis for circulation can there be than this—the actual wealth of the nation?

3. To perfect the system further and make out the complicated and delicate problems attending this an impartial expert commission should be appointed.

Editor Dodsworth Talks.

The next speaker was Mr. W. Dodsworth, of New York, editor of the Journal of Commerce. He said that it will be manifestly desirable to adopt a course least calculated to disturb existing banking arrangements that need no change, but that the power of issuing notes should be conceded to the banks operating under state laws, conditioned upon the terms that they shall conform to the terms of issue imposed upon the national banks, thereby securing from all banks a uniform circulation. He continued:

"Any course short of this would be not only a political injustice but an unwarrantable discrimination against a class of banks in every way deserving the privilege and upon whose operations the business interests of the country are largely dependent. The state banks of the country have a total capital of about $275,000,000 and are the custodians of $750,000,000 of the people's deposits. Their capital bears a ratio of 36 per cent. to their loans, while in the case of the national banks the proportion is only 33 per cent., and their ratio of capital to deposits is 37 per cent., which is identical with that of the national institutions."

Regarding the proposal of Secretary Carlisle that banks be required to keep a reserve on account of deposits, he said that when banks are pressed by emergencies they have more respect for their interests than to hestitate to disregard the statute, which meant that in practice the reserve law fails of its purposes. Some panics might have been wholly avoided had banks been free to use their money resources according to their discretion. So that the result designed to protect bank depositors really imperiled them.

REVIEW OF TRADE.

R. G. Dun Says More Men Are at Work Now Than a Year Ago.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

"Dun's Review is enabled, by the kindness of several thousand manufacturers who have forwarded statements of their pay-rolls for November this year in 1893 and in 1892, to make a very encouraging comparison of earnings for that month, which shows an increase in total payments of 15.2 per cent. over last year, but a decrease of 18.3 per cent. in comparison with 1892. The accompanying statement of hands employed shows that in the establishments 10.2 per cent. more persons were employed than a year ago, but 8.6 per cent. less than in 1892. The average earnings for over 250,000 hands is 4 per cent. larger than in 1893, but is 14½ per cent. less than in 1892, and this statement takes no account of hours of work in the months compared or of the establishments not working at all this year. In some of the industries more hands are at work than in 1892, but in others the decrease is large.

"Contradictory changes in business are quite in order at this season. Neither the larger orders in some branches, nor the depression of prices in others, afforded a safe indication of the general movement. But the working force does not lessen more than usual for the time of year, the demand for goods does not seem to diminish, though in most departments it is considerably below the capacity of works in operation, and the volume of business transacted is a little larger in comparison with last year than in November.

"The failures during the month have been swelled by many misfortunes at the south, apparently due to the extreme depression in cotton, so that the liabilities for the first week of December amounted to $4,036,805, of which $1,427,415 were of manufacturing and $2,491,451 of trading concerns, the aggregate for the corresponding week last year being $4,761,400. For the month of November the complete statement of liabilities covers $11,094,306, of which $3,282,599 were of manufacturing and $7,680,050 were of trading concerns. The failures for the past week have been 349 in the United States, against 359 last year, and 40 in Canada, against 40 last year."

FEARED EXPOSURE.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., Dec. 18.—John Huntington, remittance clerk in the Citizens' state bank, of this city, shot and seriously wounded F. N. Hayden, of Chicago, and A. Cromwell, of Minneapolis, respectively superintendent and inspector of the Fidelity and Casualty company, of New York city, and then committed suicide by shooting himself through the head Sunday morning at about 11:15 o'clock in the private office of the bank, at the corner of First avenue and Main street.

There was a shortage in the bank accounts of $500, and this caused the act. The shortage dates from last July. On the 19th of that month four $500 checks passed into the Citizens' bank. Only three of those checks have ever been accounted for. A most searching investigation was held, and resulted in the production of strong circumstantial evidence that the amount had been misappropriated by Huntington.

A NOVELIST DEAD.

Robert Louis Stevenson Passes Away in His Samoan Home.

AUCKLAND, Dec. 18.—Advices from Apia, Samoa, of the date of December 8, are that the novelist, Robert Louis Stevenson, had died suddenly of apoplexy. His remains were interred on the summit of Pala mountain, 1,300 feet high. At the time of his death Mr. Stevenson had half completed the writing of a new novel.

Some time ago Mr. Stevenson, who was suffering from lung trouble, came to the South Pacific for his health. He became enraptured with the Samoan islands and decided to take up his residence and spend the rest of his days there. He took a close interest in Samoan affairs and has written many letters to the newspapers in favor of the natives as against the treaty powers under whose direction the government of the islands is conducted.

TWO REPORTS.

Presented to the House on the Carlisle Currency Bill.

The Majority Urges Its Early Consideration and Adoption—The Minority Deplores Haste and Wants It Referred.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Mr. Springer, of Illinois, chairman of the banking and currency committee, submitted on Monday his report accompanying the Carlisle bill. The committee, the report states, is of the opinion that a security to the full amount of the circulating notes issued is no longer necessary for the safety of the notes. The bill, the passage of which is recommended by the committee, does not require the deposit of bonds of the United States or of any other interest-bearing obligation, but in lieu of such security provides as follows:

1. A guarantee fund consisting of treasury notes, including the notes issued under the act of congress approved July 14, 1890, equal to 30 per centum of the circulating notes applied for.

2. A safety fund, which will amount, when it reaches its maximum, to 5 per cent. upon the total amount of national bank notes outstanding.

3. A first lien upon all the assets of the association issuing the same.

In case the guarantee and safety funds and the assets of a failed bank are not sufficient to redeem the notes of such bank, a pro-rata assessment upon all other banking associations, according to the amount of their outstanding circulation, is to be made by the treasury department, and the banks so assessed shall have a first lien upon the assets of each failed bank for the amount properly chargeable to such bank on account of the redemption of its circulation. It is believed by the committee that the funds thus provided will be amply sufficient to secure the notes of failed banks. The bill limits the amount of circulating notes which any bank may issue to 75 per cent. of its capital stock. During the great financial crisis of 1893 158 national banks suspended payment, having a capital stock of $30,350,000. The report says:

The facts set forth demonstrate conclusively that if the proposed bill had been in force during the crisis of 1893, if all the banks had theretofore taken out circulation to the maximum amount allowed by law, and if the failed banks had also taken out their maximum circulation, the guarantee and safety funds would have been ample for the payment of the entire circulation of the outstanding notes, and would have left a surplus of over $11,000,000 still in the safety fund without the necessity, even in a great crisis of that kind, of making any assessment on the resources of the other national banks. In view of these facts your committee are of the opinion that should the proposed bill become a law the notes which would be issued under it would be absolutely safe under any and all possible business conditions.

In conclusion the committee say:

The extraordinary conditions which confront the treasury department have constrained the members of the majority of the committee, while not agreeing to all the provisions of the bill nor to all the reasoning employed in this report, to concur in reporting the measure to the house for its consideration, each reserving to himself the right to offer such amendments as he may deem proper, and to vote on the bill finally as he may determine.

The report of the minority was presented by Mr. Walker (rep., Mass.). It refers to the haste with which the party majority—not the voting majority—of the committee presented the measure, and says this haste is all the more inexplicable in view of the fact that Secretary Carlisle testified that this bill, which he had drafted himself for the relief of the treasury, would not in any event relieve it materially for five years and might not for twenty years.

The report states that the whole action of the party majority of the committee was most extraordinary and not approved by its voting majority. The bill was only read in committee in part, on one occasion and an opportunity to consider or amend it was refused both to the democratic and republican members. The report continues that it is the opinion of a number of the most clear-headed and eminent financiers of the country that if the Carlisle bill is enacted into a law that it will within twenty days precipitate a panic far more severe than that of 1893, as it would compel the forced sale upon the market of nearly $200,000,000 worth of United States bonds within six months.

The report says that whatever legislation is had with reference to the finances of the country or banking in its effects upon national banks should be permissive and not mandatory as to national banks while their present charters continue.

In the opinion of the minority, the provisions of exemptions as to state banks would drive every existing national bank that desires to to take out circulating notes into the state bank system if the bill were enacted. The taxation of national banks would amount to $5,000,000 annually under the present bill, which there is no reason to believe would be imposed upon them under the state system.

The report directs attention to the fact that all of the witnesses who appeared before the committee objected seriously to the bill, and those who did not, repudiated many of its sections upon cross examination.

The report continues:

"The passage of the Carlisle bill may meet some political exigency of which we do not know, but we do know that its passage will aggravate, rather than relieve, the perplexities of the financial situation, and especially that of the United States treasury. The United States legal tender notes withdrawn from circulation, did all existing national banks take out all the circulation permitted under the bill, would only be $181,000,000, still leaving $350,000,000 to vex the treasury. This would not afford any substantial relief to the constant drain of gold from the treasury. It would make still more conspicuous and thus more urgent the demand for gold upon the treasury and the notes issued under the bill would make confusion worse confounded in the currency by adding from one to forty-five more kinds of money to those already existing.

"Finally, we are of the opinion that it is not safe for the house to enter upon the line of legislation proposed until some bill is brought before it that has received far more attention than the Carlisle bill, and we recommend that it be indefinitely postponed."

Epworth League to Meet at Chattanooga.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Dec. 18.—The general committee has located the international conference of the Epworth league for 1895 in this city. The dates fixed are June 27, 28, 29, 30. It was decided to hold the meeting in the south and Chattanooga forcibly presented the advantages of the historic surroundings of the city, as well as good hotel and railroad facilities, and has secured the conference. An attendance of 10,000 to 15,000 is anticipated. One open-air meeting will be held on Lookout mountain. There are now 1,000,000 members of the Epworth league in the United States.

THOSE DREADED DRAUGHTS.

How They Are Caused and Avoided in Window-Tight Rooms.

As the season is now on when the bald, the thin-blooded, and those whose rheumatics always are in evidence when the glass is in the neighborhood of 30 degrees, start in to look about for draughts about the house, I wish to give my experience in this matter. Several years ago, in the fall of the year, I was sick for weeks, and when at last I was able to sit up I sat in my sitting room, which faced the northwest, during the daytime, and, wishing to see the passing, I had my place near a large window. The room had an open grate, also furnace heat, and the thermometer easily registered 70 to 75 degrees, but with all this warmth there was a draught—as I thought—on my head and neck.

Every one said the cold air came in at the window sash. I sent for the weather-strip man, and, of course, he discovered—or thought he did—the cause, and put on his rubber molding so that the sash when closed was tight. "Now," he says, "you will have no more trouble in that direction."

The next cold snap the same old gale of wind appeared. When my doctor came in I spoke to him in regard to it, when he informed me that it was not the cold air from the outside that I felt, but the warm air of the room, which went to the top of the window, struck the cold glass, cooled, and then "fell down" as the cold air would had not the casing been air tight. He then said, "Drop your curtain about one-third and keep it there."

I did as he directed, and the gale stopped; and I had no trouble after that. He told me that the same trouble existed in most houses, even those that were heated in the halls and bedrooms, the heat going to the top, cooling and falling back, so that one coming from a warm room down stairs and going up would often think that there must be windows open above. Of course, double windows would remedy this cooling-off process in the rooms, but with the curtains down a little they prevent the instant cooling of the warm air—and there is your draught. You will notice that these "draughts" are about during the day more than at night, and always less in the room where there is a lamp. Why? Simply when you light your lamps or the gas you draw down the shades, and the heat does not strike the cold glass.—Boston Transcript.

Indigestion Cured

"I suffered with indigestion. Food distressed me very much. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla after meals, and before one bottle was gone I could eat heartily without distress. I have recommended Hood's Sarsaparilla to many. I never heard of its failure to cure. Recently our station agent had the grip. After he was able to get up he had a disagreeable sensation in his head. He said it felt as large as a stove and he was unable to perform his duties. He took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after using one and a half bottles he was fully cured. Truly, there is no humbug about Hood's." JOHN BENNETT, Sunman, Ind.

"MERRY Christmas to you all!"
Resounds like music on the air;
Silent the snows of winter fall.
Yet fadeless flowers are everywhere:
Within our hearts they blossom gay.
And shed their fragrance free and far;
'Tis always so on Christmas day,
In memory of His golden star!

The race of man had waited long
To see that lily in the sky—
To hear the perfect angel-song,
"Of peace to earth and praise on high."
Oppressive night of Egypt lay,
Till with its glow love's star arose;
In hope and cheer of Christmas day,
The yearning centuries found repose!

'Twas like the change the morning brings,
Awaking men to duty bright:
'Twas like the song the bluebird sings—
Of lovely spring and her delight;
'Twas like the coming of the May,
Refreshing age, rejoicing youth—
So beautiful was Christmas day
In its creative hope and truth!

The Heaven and earth we know are one;
God cares for earth as worlds above;
Wherever stars in peace look on,
There shineth His abiding love;
But nearer to our hearts there lay
A longing for the Man Divine,
And so there came the Christmas day,
And in the east His star did shine!

What tender tones of kindness sweet,
We speak because of His new birth;
In happiness the virtues meet—
To tell His story to the earth:
Good will and peace have ample play,
Naught seems our paradise to mar,
Because it is the Christmas day,
And all the world beholds His star!

Our children shout and dance in glee!
Surprises sweet await this morn;
Like ships across the summer sea,
Good gifts to them and us are borne:
The holly glistens with its spray,
The mistletoe makes mirth and cheer—
It is glad-hearted Christmas day,
The merriest day of all the year!

—William Brunton, in Good Housekeeping.

THE poor woman was in despair. The theatrical company with which she had left Denver for a tour through the mining towns had gone to pieces. The manager had fled, and Mrs. Maynard, his leading woman, known on the bills as "Miss Etta Baker," sat in the cheerless mining camp hotel, her eyes red with weeping and her brain almost distracted. Her trunks, with others, were held in the stage office for the fares of the company from the last stand, her purse was empty, and she trembled at every approaching step, fearing it might be that of the rough-speaking landlord, coming to give her notice that she must vacate the room.

Mrs. Maynard was a widow with one child, a sweet little flaxen-haired cherub who had a child's part in the play. Her late husband was an apparently well-to-do man, and at their home in an eastern city they lived in peace and plenty until the dread destroyer, pneumonia, left her a widow at the age of twenty-one. After the funeral of her husband she learned, to her consternation, that his debts largely outweighed his property, and ere the first great grief over his death had been blunted by the hand of time, she found herself homeless and penniless. In the days of her girlhood and early married life she had taken a prominent part in amateur theatricals, and the talent she displayed in that line had excited favorable comment and had gained for her merited recognition in the columns of the city press. When left alone in the world and compelled to labor for the support of herself and little daughter, her thoughts naturally turned to the stage, and she soon found herself enrolled as a member of a company bound across the continent on a California tour. At Denver she was taken ill and the company was obliged to leave her there, and when, after a long battle with mountain fever, she regained her strength, her money was exhausted and she was without employment. Then it was that an irresponsible manager secured her services, with the result above stated.

The weather was bitterly cold, and the small sheet-iron stove in the room occupied by Mrs. Maynard and her daughter seemed incompetent to battle with the keen temperature which penetrated the thin walls of the rough structure dignified with the name, "The Cosmopolitan Hotel." The partition walls which separated the different apartments were of canvas stretched on infrequent joists, and reaching but little higher than the head of a person standing erect.

"Midget," as the wee mite of a daughter was called, sat near the stove with a shawl thrown about her delicate shoulders to protect them from the cold. Looking up into her mother's tearful eyes, she said:

"Mamma, please don't cry so much, for it makes me feel awful bad to see your tears. I am sure God will not forget us, for I prayed every time I woke last night for Him to take care of us, and after I prayed I always felt so good and happy, just as if I had heard Him whisper to me that He heard my prayers and would answer them."

"Bless your trusting little heart, you are a great comfort to me, Midget," the mother replied. "But for your sweet, cheering words I would give up all hope and pray God to take us both home to your angel papa. We have only God to look to in our troubles, daughter, and we must not lose our faith in the dear Saviour whose birth will be celebrated all over the world to-morrow."

"O, mamma, is to-morrow Chris—"

The little one had looked up with a quick, hopeful glance, then as she checked the speech upon her lips a shade of pain swept over her face and her eyes drooped. The mother caught the changing expression on the little one's features, and her heart swelled almost to bursting, as the tears came anew into her swollen eyes.

"O, mamma, don't—please don't," Midget pleaded. "I don't care about Santa Claus and won't hang up a single stocking, for I know he would never come to hunt me in this far-away place. He will look for me back at home, and, when he finds I am gone, will give my presents to some little poor girl."

"Yes, you do care, Midget, darling, but in your brave little soul you try to hide your disappointment that it may not grieve mamma. No, darling, I fear good Santa Claus will not find you this time, as he has done every other Christmas since your birth, and it breaks my heart to think you must be so neglected."

"Don't you mind it a bit, mamma, for I just ain't going to care. If you will only smile and look happy like you used to, it will please me more than anything good old Santa could bring me in his great pack,"

The mother drew the little one to her bosom and kissed her fondly, and she started when a deep sigh, which Midget tried in vain to repress, escaped from the baby's breast. Her face wore a look of desperate resolution as she released her loved one and said:

"Midget, darling, you will hang up your little stockings to-night, as you have always done, and good Santa Claus may come here when he visits the few children in this dreary town. I somehow feel that he will do so, and when you go to bed to-night you must ask God in your prayers to tell the good children's friend where you are. He may find you, darling, but if he does not you must not grieve too greatly over it. Mamma is going out for a little while, and you must stay close to the stove and try to keep warm until she gets back. I will go to the post office, and I may hear from the Denver manager to whom I wrote for an engagement. Good-by, baby, and try to think that Santa Claus may find you, even in this cheerless place."

If the thin muslin wall which separated her room from the adjoining one had vanished Mrs. Maynard would have seen sitting near it a great big, rough miner, with tears sparkling like diamonds in his honest eyes. She did not know that, as she left her room, "Big John" Rogers, as he was known, quietly arose and followed her from the house and waded after her through the deep snow in the street.

He saw her enter the post office, and a few minutes later come forth again with a look of distress and disappointment on her face. She raised her eyes to look about her, and he noticed that they were full of tears, but, when just across the street, they encountered three gilded balls, her face brightened and she seemed about to start toward them. Then a cloud of pain swept over her features and she stood with bowed head, as if irresolute. She stood thus for several moments, then her lips compressed, and, rapidly crossing the street, she entered the pawnbroker's shop.

"Big John" read the story at a glance. Some cherished keepsake was going, in order that her baby daughter might not miss the expected visit from Santa Claus—and how dear that keepsake must be, for what an effort it required to bring herself to the determination to part with it. The warm heart of the miner was yet swollen from the conversation which he had heard between the mother and daughter, and he crossed over to tender his assistance, when the shop door opened and the woman came forth. Addressing him, she said:

"Can you tell me, sir, if there is a shop or store in the town where toys and candies are kept? Such things as children like for Christmas, you know?"

The great-hearted miner was about to tell her that he had overheard her conversation with her little girl, and that she must go right back to the house out of the cold and have no fear that Santa Claus didn't know his business, but her pretty, intelligent face, musical voice and air of quiet refinement awed him, and he feared a tender of assistance and a confession that he had been eavesdropping might offend her, so he bluntly answered:

"Yes ma'am, the big store right where you see that awnin' packs all sich truck."

She thanked him and walked hurriedly away, and the miner entered the pawnshop.

"What did that woman put up here, Sol?" he asked.

"A ring, Shon. A heavy gold ring, worth not less than twenty dollars. That woman vas a lady, Shon, and I vas sorroy now I took de pledge from her. She kissed it before she handed it to me, and I baed you a hundred dollar it vas her marriage ring and she don't got no husband some more."

"How much did you let her have on it?"

"Two dollar. I told her she could have five, but she didn't would take it. She said she might not be able to raise so much to redeem it."

"Now look here, Sol, you know me, an' you know I wouldn't do anything that's crooked," John said. "I'll give you ten dollars for the ring, and I'll promise you that the woman will wear it in its old place on her finger to-morrow."

"Oh, my cracious, Shon, I couldn't do dat. De ring is a pledge und I vas responsible for it, und I don't vould dare gif it to anybody but de owner. Do you know the lady, Shon?"

The miner reflected for a moment, and then in his old blunt way told the man what he had heard through the canvas partition. His strong voice grew soft and mellow as he repeated the little one's words, and a tear stole down his bronzed cheek as he told of the mother's grief and of her resolution that her baby should not be deprived of her Christmas pleasures. Then he detailed his plans, and concluded by saying:

"Sandy Claws is on that little 'un's trail, Sol, an' he's a goin' to run onto her camp in great shape, an' to-morrow mornin' when she wakes up that ring ought to be among the stuff she finds in her stockin's."

"Holy Moses, Shon, dat vas a gray horse mit some more colors. Dat vas different, und you baed your lifetime dat ring vill be dere, und you dond pay me von cent, too. That two dollar vill be my chip in mit the poys. Und see here, Shon, dere's a leetle beautiful ladies' gold watch that I brought here from Denver mit my first stock of goods und it's so shmall dat nobody won't buy it in dis camp, und dat goes mit de ring for de leetle girl's Christmas, too. Und say, Shon, ven you see all de boys und you don't got enough yust bring me a shnow ball und I'll lend you ten dollar on it und put Santa Claus' name on the ticket. I don't vas a Skylock ven I vas a Shew, und don't you remember it, Shon."

With the ring in his purse, the ring placed on the woman's finger when at the altar she took the name of the dear one whom she mourned, John started on a tour of the saloons and gambling houses of the camp. Quietly he told the story to the listening groups. "A woman in distress?" That was enough for the generous warm-hearted miners congregated in the various places, and the canvas bag John carried grew more and more corpulent in proportions as he went his rounds. Gold, silver and greenbacks came into the fund from willing hands, and when at nine that night the tour was completed, the bag seemed almost bursting with its load of treasure. Returning to the hotel with a few companions the miner had a consultation with the landlord, which concluded with the latter saying, bluntly:

"Yes, take a knife an' slit the ornery thing. I kin have a piece sewed over the hole."

"PUT SANTA CLAUS' NAME ON THE TICKET."

During the early hours of the night men moved softly about the hotel office whispering mysteriously, or sat near the stove discussing some matter in low tones. The landlord's wife had gone to the lady's room, ostensibly for a womanly chat, but really on a mission at John's request, and when, an hour later, she silently glided into the office a score of rough miners surrounded her.

"She is just going to bed," the woman said. "The poor creature is tired and all worn out, and I induced her to take a small dose of laudanum. She will sleep like a top. The little girl is sleeping soundly, and I assisted the mother to place the few cheap presents she had purchased in the little stockings hanging on the back of a chair near the bed. The woman took hers off just before I came away, and they are lying on her shoes near the foot of the bed."

Along after midnight, had not Mrs. Maynard been securely locked in the arms of opiate-induced sleep, some very mysterious transactions would have met her eyes. She would have seen honest old John's bewhiskered face at the opening thus made, his head cautiously enter, and his keen eyes peer around in the dim light which came through the window from the winter moon. Then she would have seen his burly form come noiselessly through the opening, move cautiously to a chair and remove therefrom the tiny, present-laden stockings. She would have seen the great form stoop and would have heard the searching fingers moving over the floor, and then have seen the miner assume a half stooping attitude, and move away grasping the baby stockings in one hand and a pair of much larger dimensions in the other. But she sweetly slept on, unconscious that her room had been invaded by a warm-hearted representative of Santa Claus.

"O, mamma, mamma, wake up, I want to tell you something."

The widow started from her sleep. "I had such a funny dream, mamma," the little one said. "I dreamed Santa Claus was in here, but he didn't look a bit like our old Santa. He was a great big man with long black whiskers, and he came to the bed and looked at you, so pitiful. I could see him in the moonlight that came through the window, and it didn't seem like I was asleep at all. He looked at you a little while and then at me, and I dreamed I shut my eyes real quick, to make believe I was asleep. He leaned away over you and kissed me just as easy as could be, and whispered 'God bless you, dear,' and then when I opened my eyes again he was gone. Wasn't it a funny dream?"

The mother smiled at the queer recital, little dreaming that what Midget believed to be a vision of the night had been a reality.

"If he was really here, darling," she said, "he was no doubt hunting you, and may have left you something. Jump up and look at your stockings."

The little one needed no second bidding. She was on the cold floor in a moment, and through the gray light of the early dawn the mother watched her.

"O, mamma! Mamma!"

A smile of pleasure came over the mother's face at the cry of delight. Every pang it had cost her to give up the ring she so prized was softened by the happiness which clung to her darling's tones.

"O, mamma!"

"Well, what did you get, baby?"

"A watch, a real gold watch, a little teenie watch, and it's running."

"A what, Midget? Why, child, is your brain turned? Santa Claus never brings gold watches to poor children."

"Oh, he did, mamma, he did, he did, and there's something in your stockings, too."

"In my stockings? Why, my darling, are you crazy?"

"No, mamma, it's a real watch, and it is ticking. Just look."

She ran to the bed with the treasure in her hand. The mother took the tiny time-piece, and her eyes opened wide with wonder when she found that Midget's words were true.

"Here are your stockings, mamma, and they are so heavy I can hardly carry them. I just believe I did see Santa Claus, and wasn't dreaming at all."

The mother reached for the stockings, and when she felt the weight and it flashed across her mind that they were freighted with money, she held her breath in astonishment. She poured the treasure out on the bed. Gold, silver and greenbacks, wealth she had never dreamed she would possess, and in the shining heap lay her wedding-ring, with a note attached. Opening the paper, she read:

"Madam. When you Think sandy Claws forgits peepel thats in trouble, You ar off yure base, fur He nose his biz, and so dus Big John, even if he doant want you to no He done This, and i rite it an Slip it in unbenone to Him, for he Herd you and yure babby talk an node your trubble, an the boys node Thare biz, too. Big John is the oanly sandy Claws in this Here camp. yures, The proprieter."

Scarcely knowing whether she was waking or dreaming, the woman hastily arose and dressed herself, and taking the little girl by the hand went to the hotel office. The moment they entered Midget cried out:

"Oh, mamma, there's the Santa Claus I saw in my dream! That large gentleman with the whiskers. Wasn't it you, sir?"

The big fellow attempted to run into the street, but the landlord caught him and pulled him back. He blushed like a schoolgirl as he faced the wondering woman, and blurted out:

"Ma'am, don't mention it, if you please. Me an' the boys found out you was in trouble, an' we just got together an' pulled you out as Christians had ought to do."

"It's jest like this, ma'am," the landlord said. "John, 'yar, is a big, bashful feller when thar's a woman in sight, an' he made us all swar we wouldn't never let you know whar' the lift came from. It's all right, ma'am, and you kin pack up an' go to yer friends jest as soon as you want to, an' in a year you'll forgit you ever had a bit o' trouble in yer life. We're all only too happy to make you a merry Christmas, ma'am, and we all hope you may have many more of 'em."

"O, sir, how can I ever thank you for this," she said, addressing John. "I was indeed in great trouble, and—"

But he had escaped from the door and ran blushing down the street. Later in the day he met Mrs. Maynard and conquered his modesty enough to hold quite a long conversation with her. It was observed, too, that he assisted her on the stage when she smilingly bade adieu to the camp, and waved his hat enthusiastically as the driver's whip cracked and the vehicle bowled away.

A few months later at their old home in the east, Midget said to a little playfellow:

"I'm going to have a new papa pretty soon."

"Who?" her companion asked.

Tom's View of It.

Now, what do you guess? But you could not guess
What Santa Claus did last night:
He filled our stockings up to the brim,
Packing them hard and tight;
And the dear old fellow—would you believe?—
He planted a Christmas tree
And hung it thick with beautiful things
For Tommy and Ruth and me.

Tops and trumpets and drum and sled,
Marbles and bat and ball,
A shining locket and picture books,
And a curly-haired, brown-eyed doll;
Oceans of nuts and candies—Oh!
If you had been there to see
All the treasures that Christmas brought
For Tommy and Ruth and me.

Tommy gazed, with a sober face,
Then lifted his head to say:
"There's plenty of boys and girls, I know,
Who haven't a gift to-day.
Why did he bring so much to us?
There's more than enough for three;
It isn't fair that so much should be
For Polly and Ruth and me.

"'Tis easy guessing. The dear old saint
Has piled up his treasures here
To give us three a glorious chance
To share in his Christmas cheer;
So, with lovingest hearts and open hands,
We'll try our best to see
How quickly we can divide them all—
Polly and Ruth and me."

MRS. HUNT.

Mrs. FRED HUNT, of Glenville, N. Y., says: "I read about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription being so good for a woman with child, so I got two bottles last September, and December 13th I had a twelve pound baby girl. When I was confined I was not sick in any way I did not suffer any pain, and when the child was born I walked into another room and went to bed. I keep your Extract of Smart-Weed on hand all the time. It was very cold weather and our room was very cold but I did not take any cold, and never had any after-pain or any other pain. It was all due to God and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and Compound Extract of Smart-Weed. This is the eighth living child and the largest of them all. I suffered everything that flesh could suffer with the other babies. I always had a doctor and then he could not help me very much, but this time my mother and my husband were alone with me. My baby was only seven days old when I got up and dressed and left my room and stayed up all day."

DELANO DIARY

—Today is the shortest in the year.

—Some heavy pork found a market here this week.

—John Haffner has on exhibition at his store a "Ferris Wheel". Anyone wishing to take a ride on it is invited to call at his place of business.

—A grand New Year's ball, under the auspices of the Watertown Fire Department will be given at Watertown on Monday evening, Dec. 31.

—Fish from Lake Superior have been supplied to some of our citizens for 5 cents per pound. The game laws are such that the home game is not allowed in the market; hence the importation.

—The party of young people who intended to go to Rockford last Saturday evening and could not go on account of the storm, bore their disappointment very well indeed thanks to Miss Hagar, who entertained them at her home, where they spent a very pleasant evening.

—Delano's famous dog case was decided on Saturday last by the jury finding Geo. Cramer guilty of shooting Bev. Yancy's dog, worth $15. On Monday George returned to Buffalo and received his sentence of $30, which he proceeded to pay and now is a free American citizen once more.

—Conflicting reports have from time to time been received concerning Frank Davis who was badly injured on last Fair Day. On Monday it was reported that he was dead. In the afternoon his brother came in and got Squire Walter to go out and take his ante-mortem statement as it was thought he could not live.

—Delano's electric lights are of considerable advantage to people living a mile or two in the country, as was readily seen by belated travelers on Saturday night. After reaching that distance from the village driving became better. If there was a good light on top of the watertower it would light up the country for miles and be a great convenience on dark nights.

—Miss Irene Cheeley was called home last week on account of the sickness of her sister, Mrs. Baker, at Minnetonka. Word has been received here that Mrs. Baker died on Saturday. As the school was left in charge of Miss Mamie VanEman, and after this week there will be a two week's holiday vacation, Miss Cheeley will, likely, not return until after January 1.

—Last Saturday night soon after dark rain commenced to fall and a good downpour was kept up for several hours. It was one of the darkest nights it was ever our lot be out driving in, and we have been out quite a few nights. Quite a number of teams were out and when meeting would run into each other before they knew of anyone else being around. J. D. Young ran into some one on the Watertown road.

—A number of teams loaded with pork and mutton passed through town Monday, some of them having already come quite a distance, on their way to Minneapolis markets. It looks as if people ought to be able to get so much for their products here as would pay them better than spending two days on the road and a night at a hotel in the city to take it to Minneapolis. Pay up, and advertise your business so that people will not drive away to do their trading. There is no reason why Delano should not be as good a market as Minneapolis. Pork could be packed here as cheaply as in the city and lots of it would go west and be nearer that market than is Minneapolis.

—Regular services at the M. E. church on Sunday at 7:30 P. M.

—Equipneupleurheunibus seems to have struck this section of the country again.

--Some of our citizens think the Minneapolis Journal ought not to publish deaths of people living in our township before they occur.

--Kerrick's crew, that went from this place to Hinkley to work on R. R. buildings, have returned home having completed the job.

--The Rebecka Lodge have changed their plans and have decided to have both the dance and supper in the lodge room. Everybody is invited.

—The Village Council held their regular meeting on Monday evening. We have not yet learned if they have "incarnated" any of their members.

—A lengthy discussion of the currency question, which at present seems to be taking the lead among politicians, is to be found on the inside of this paper.

—John Franzen, of Dakota, has moved into his father's lower town residence, while his father, Nick Franzen, now occupies his North River Street home.

—The Public School will have a two weeks vacation for the holidays. Examinations were held this week and the standings of some of the pupils will be known soon.

—Postoffice Inspector Gould, of Minneapolis, made our village a visit this week and satisfied himself that things were being carried on in the proper manner at Delano's postoffice.

—Riebel, Delano's taxidermist, is becoming known about the country far and near. We noticed a fine owl prepared by him being shipped to Glenwood this week. Some of his work has been carried to Nebraska.

—Sunday School children are busy preparing exercises to be held for Christmas. Most of the churches will have trees for the occasion. We hear that the Swedish school will have theirs at the farm home of Olaf Peterson.

—Minneapolis has another Small Pox scare. Children should be vaccinated whenever there is danger of having the disease. Few die that have been vaccinated, while those that have not often do, or are badly marked if they get it.

—It looks as if the village authorities and the R. R. company had failed to connect on the supplying city water to the R. R. tank, as this morning Dad Gast was seen hauling a new pump to his station. Competition is the life of trade. Go in, Dad, go in.

—On Monday, A. W. Wittman purchase for $1000 the building occupied by him as a drug store, and lately the property of P. H. Sims, of Merriam Park. When our business men own their own buildings it gives them more interest in public affairs and the welfare of the village.

—The weather continues to be uncommonly fine for this country and the time of year. What little snow has fallen, has disappeared and even skating is not considered safe and in the river in many places there is no ice. The winter, often halt gone at this time of year, appears not to have begun yet.

—Chris Krinkle has been supplying himself during the week with dolls, tin horses, horns, drums, candies, apples and various other articles of use or ornament for distribution among the good little boys and girls of this neighborhood. There must be a lot of good children judging from the lot of things gathered up for the occasion.

—The old village pump has met with an accident and is partially incapacitated for duty. Several have suggested that a fountain for watering horses, something after the one at Bridge Square, Minneapolis, would be a nice thing. It would surely be an improvement over the old wooden trough that has so often been turned topsy turvy and again straightened up for use.

—The Eagle's attention was called last week to a misstatement concerning the publication of the President's message. She had better, if she desires a clear conscience, retract. Such small insinuations and innuendoes left for the public to infer that your neighbors are not furnishing the President's message on time, when false don't do you nor any one else any good.

—People having friends from a distance visiting them like to have mention of the fact in the papers, and sometimes get rather vehement in their remarks if the paper does not say a word about it. The visitors are much pleased to have their names, properly spelled and with correct initials appear in the press; but would, often, prefer no mention to having a botch made of it. To obviate these difficulties people could do much by writing on a card or slip of paper the name, place of residence, when arrived and when to depart and such other facts as might be printed and handing them in to the office.

—Yesterday noon the fire bell called the populace out to learn that the residence of Mrs. Swanson near the R. R. track was on fire. The hose carts drawn by some of the most enterprising citizens were soon on the road and strung hose from the corner of Third Street and R. R. Ave. to within about four rods of the house that had been on fire, but which through the energetic efforts of near neighbors had been saved with but little loss. The water was turned on, but fell short of reaching the house, and most likely saved the deluging of everything in the building. The fire is said to have originated from sparks from a passing engine which fell upon some pieces of carpet on a box near the front door and started a blaze up the side of the house.

--On going to press we learn from John McNealey, of Woodland, that Frank Davis, his neighbor who was injured Fair Day, is about the same as for several days past.

Personals.

Dr. J. S. Shrader visited Twincite, Tuursday.

Mrs. Hellen Bain is on the sick list this week.

John A. Brasie, of Monticello, visited Delano on Monday.

Wm. Kaspohl, of Duluth, is at home for the holiday vacation.

Mrs. Bina Halgren, of Watertown, was a Delano visitor on Saturday.

Michael Tacobs, from near Loretto, was a Delano visitor yesterday.

Joseph VanEman made a trip through Rockford township on Saturday.

Mrs. Copp, wife of Rev. Copp, of Armstrong, was a Delano visitor yesterday.

Miss Celestia Cooper arrived home Sunday evening for a few week's visit with friends.

Miss Hannah O'Leary and Mrs. Timothy Gleeson visited Woodland friends on Sunday.

Frank Coffin, of Independence, patronized the Delano markets on Thursday.

Will Jacobs, of Greenwood, runs a wood train to Delano. He makes several trips a day.

M. A. Devine, of Minneapolis, came up yesterday, and went to Watertown to visit friends.

John Cunningham drove to Minneapolis on Sunday on business and to visit with his children residing there.

Leon Frazee has gone with his wife to Alexandria to spend the winter. They expect to return in the spring.

Olaf Peterson, who is working at his trade at Buffalo, visited home over Sunday, for the first time in two weeks.

"Baron Von Krueger" came up from Twincite, Saturday evening for a short visit with relatives and Delano cronies

Rev. John Truax and wife, of Fair Haven, on their way home from Iowa, stopped for a brief visit with their nephew, R. M. Walter, one day last week.

County Cullings.

The meeting of the Medical Society at Buffalo on Wednesday was well attended and proved quite interesting to all.

Court is still in session. A large number of cases have been put over to next term, still enough has been found to engage the attention of judge and jury for three weeks.

From the Waverly Tribune we learn that on Sunday last a nine year old son of Conrad Goepfert, of Woodland, got hold of a gun and in raising and lowering the hammer discharged the piece killing his six year old sister and wounding his five year old brother quite severely. Loaded guns are poor things to have among a lot of children. They will even climb up and get at them where they are supposed to be beyond their reach.

A. Y. Eaton is in St. Paul, ostensibly looking after pine land thievery; he being a member of the committee. But more than likely to see that his little boom for United States Senator don't miscarry. From the present out look Washburn aint in it, and Mr. Eaton stands an even chance with the rest of getting the office. As he has stood by the present incumbent when the break comes he can reasonably count on considerable support from among his friends, as well as enough more from the anti-Washburnites to elect him by a larger majority than Senator Davis got two years ago.

Wright County Medicals.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Wright County Medical Society was held Wednesday, the 19th inst., in the parlors of the American House, at Buffalo. Present, Drs. Ridgway, of Annandale; Cady and Shannon, of Buffalo; Catlin and Shrader, of Delano; O'Connor, of Maple Lake; O'Hair, of Waverly.

President Cady called the meeting to order and in the absence of the Secretary T. J. Catlin was chosen pro tem. The minutes of last meeting not being present were not read.

Moved and seconded that the committee on Fee Bill report. Carried.

A. M. Ridgway then read quite a long report which was discussed at length.

Moved and seconded that the committee on Fee Bill be continued till the next meeting. Carried.

Dr. A. M. Ridgway then read a paper on Typhoid fever which elicited considerable discussion from the members present.

Dr. P. O'Hair read a paper on Cholera Infantum. Owing to the lateness of the hour little could be said further on the subject.

Moved and seconded that Dr. O'Connor's paper on Scarlet Fever be postponed till next meeting. Carried.

Moved to adjourn. Carried.

T. J. CATLIN, Sec. pro tem.

THE KING BEE Of Railway trains in the North-west and without a superior in America is the North-western Limited between Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago. It is the finest train this side of Chicago, the finest train running out of the Twin Cities and is luxurious enough for a king!—The Commercial Bulletin, Minneapolis.

"There Is No Royal Road To public favor any more than to learning. This is true, at all events, in America where intrinsic excellence is necessary to secure and retain the popular favor. The reason The North-Western Line is one of the most popular railroads is that its service is not always up to date but AWAY AHEAD OF THE DATE. In our opinion, this is the Best Line between Chicago and the Twin Cities.—The Excursionist, Chicago.

MOTHER'S COOKING.

Your modern school of cookery,
Where food is done by note,
Don't hardly touch old mother's food
Although she cooked by rote.

She had a way of cooking things,
So wholesome and so sweet,
That vittels seemed to coax us boys
To take right hold and eat.

This sharlett roosh is fraud in cake,
And French a-clairs don't "stay,"
And lemon pie with lather on it
Is jest like medder hay.

In spite of all your fol-de-rols,
The old folks often sigh
For mother's "dish"—she called it "b'iled"—
And mother's pumpkin pie.

But p'r'aps it warn't all cookery
That made the vittels grand,
Maybe the heft of sweetness lay
In dear old mother's hand.

Don't matter much what vittels is
When love is served for sarse,
Love turns old hens to chickens, br'iled
Nettles to sparrer grass.

THE eighty-ninth dinner of the New England society was held in New York Saturday, Dec. 22. The toast, "The Puritan and the Cavalier," was responded to by Henry Watterson. He is said to have taken up the New South, where Henry Grady laid it down eight years ago before the same society.

WHAT'S the matter with the St. Paul Morning Call? Has she slipped over to the populists? She howls against the republicans and she doesn't like the Carlisle Currency bill. Neither does she approve of the Minnesota Democratic Association's Free Trade address. Things don't appear to be going her way at all.

MONDAY morning's city papers contain a ringing address to democrats, issued by the Executive Committee of the Minnesota Democratic Association. It advocates a Free Market, Free Trade, and a direct tax, as provided in the constitution. School district organizations are advised and the educational process is to be still further carried on. If the association goes to work in earnest it will accomplish something. The Globe supports the address. The Morning Call thinks a tariff for revenue is about the best it can go. Democrats must get together and make a brave and determined fight for principle if they would win.

MANKATO'S famous Saulpaugh-Stein breach of promise case has finally terminated by the jury allowing plaintiff $1.00 and costs of the case. This has been a disgraceful affair. It looks, to people at a distance as if the plaintiff was entitled to a judgment in her favor; that $1.00 of the wealthy defendant's easily acquired wealth would go but a small way toward healing the wounded feelings of the plaintiff. If Miss Stein was such a character as she has been made out by the trial and had become the wife of the wealthy landlord, and sailed at the top notch of Mankato society, as she would likely have done had she succeeded in marrying her paramour, and he failed to keep his side of the contract it seems as if she should have a bigger money consideration.

REPORTS from the West say that horses can be bought for $3 per head and that some stockmen are boiling them up and feeding them to the hogs; claiming that as a fattner, boiled horse beats boiled wheat. If people can eat hogs fattened on horse it will likely not be long until they do away with the swine and live on the equine flesh at once. If the broncbos are not considerably changed in transit there is no telling but after they have been turned into hog and converted into food for the genus homo that whole communities of the best citizens will run violently down a steep place into the sea, or go to bucking as in their native heath when an attempt to make them useful is made.

A Sad Affair.

Last Fair day, in Delano considerable noise, and too many drunken men were in the saloons and about town. Several quarrels, and some fighting took place. Frank Davis, of the Town of Franklin, and well known here, according to the most reliable reports, got into some difficulty at Foutsch's saloon, and in some way spilled or threw a glass of beer onto August Berneck; he was ejected from the saloon, and afterwards August Berneck, and several others followed him into the alley back of the saloon premises where Davis was set upon and from the report of an eye witness shamefully kicked and misused and left lying on the ground. Afterwards he got up and ran or got over to a narrow alleyway near Janikula's saloon where Constable Dugan found him making considereble noise and thinking hotels would not care to have him took him to the City Hall where he remained an hour or so in the jail bed, Dr. Shrader calling by request of the Mayor to see him, and Dr. Chilton, who happened to be in town, also seeing him. He was much depressed in spirits and said to some one he thought he would die. He went to the Danforth House and remained till morning when he again saw Dr. Shrader and then drove home. On his arrival his brother put him to bed and got Dr. E. E. Shrader, of Watertown, to see him. He grew worse and Dr. O'Hair, of Waverly, saw him; on Saturday he made an ante-mortem statement and on Sunday night died. His brother-in-law, Wm. Quinn, of Waverly, telegraphed to the County Attorney, Mr. Culkin, who took steps to have those implicated by his statement arrested, and on Monday Justice Walter on the authority of a telegram from Sheriff Carpenter, had August Berneck and Charles Murphy, two old and well known citizens, arrested and brought before him. Mr. Culkin and the Sheriff and deputy having arrived the two prisoners had a charge of Manslaughter in the first degree preferred against them and were conveyed to Buffalo to await a preliminary examination before Justice Cochrane.

Coroner Wakefield, accompanied by Drs. Catlin and Shrader, of Delano, and Shrader, of Watertown, visited the Davis residence Monday night and held a post mortem examination which substantiated the diagnosis of the physicians in charge that he had Peritonitis, his bowels being adhered to each other and to the walls of the abdominal cavity in many places and a large quantity of pus was found in the abdominal cavity. His face and right elbow showed marks of having been bruised in some way.

Bernick and Murphy will have their preliminary examination on Tuesday the 2nd of January. W. H. Cutting has been retained by the defence. The prisoners if held will have to be in jail for six months until the June term of court, as it is necessary for the Grand Jury to find an indictment before they can be tried.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Dec. 21, 1894.

Secretary Carlisle is so thoroughly satisfied that the more his currency bill is studied and discussed the stronger it will be both in and out of Congress, that he used his influence with the House committee on Rules to prevent the original plan, of voting on the bill before the adjournment for the Christmas recess, being carried out. He never did a thing that displayed better judgment. The bill is now before the country and the debate in the House this week will furnish an intelligent basis for argument both for and against the measure, and the time between the Christmas adjournment--next Saturday--and the reassembling of Congress--Wednesday, January 3--will be well put in by members of the House in studying how the bill may be improved; also, in learning what their constituents think of it. The information thus acquired may be put to good use in the democratic caucus which it is proposed to hold on the bill as soon as Congress returns to Washington.

The California Association, of this city, this week held a reception and gave a banquet in honor of Representative James G. Maguire, of California, one of the few re-elected democratic Congressmen residing west of the Mississippi River. The Single Tax Society, of which Judge Maguire is an honored member, assisted in making things pleasant for the large number of guests present.

Gov. Renfrow, of Oklahoma, is doing his level best to fill Congressional ears with the idea that Oklahoma ought to be a state. He points out the existence of a population of 250,000, growing cities, a tip top public school system, good newspapers, and, in fact, everything found in the most progressive of the old States, and denying statehood to the territory.

Senator Hill's speech in favor of cloture in the Senate was a good one, filled with excellent arguments in favor of cloture, but it did not change the views of any Senator, and there is no probability of any change in the Senate rules at this session that will even squint towards cloture, although it is generally believed that the republicans will adopt cloture should they regain control of the Senate.

The question of whether "Little Billy," Mahone is more powerful than Congress was revived this week by the attempt that is being made by the committee on Public Buildings and Grounds of the House and Senate to agree upon a site for a new Government Printing Office. For four years Mahone has been powerful enough to prevent any steps being taken towards the erection of a G. P. O., because the House would not agree to buy at $1.50 some ground he bought for about 15 cents a foot, and upon which he has not for years paid one cent of taxes. His hold upon republican Senators is doubtless largely political, but it is suspected that his hold upon democratic Senators who belong, as Malone himself does, to what is locally known as "John Chamberlain's poker playing crowd," is based upon something very different. At any rate his influence has proven more powerful in this matter than it was in anything when he held the balance of power in the Senate and made the notorious bargain that landed him in the republican party. His control of this matter has been very galling to democrats generally, and a strong effort is being made to end it.

The Dockery Congressional Commission, which has already done so much to reform departmental business and to cut off needless expenditures, never made a better recommendation than to abolish the separate bureaux of the Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Geological Survey, turning as much of the work they have been engaged in as it may be consider desirable to continue over to the survey division of the General Land Office. The socalled "scientists" who have for years drawn big salaries for a very small amount of work are, of course, very indignant at the proposed abolition of so many sinecures all neatly covered by the cloak of science. But it is apparent that these two bureaux have cost a great deal of money and that there is next to nothing to show for it. Congress clipped the wings of the Geological Survey a year ago by cutting its appropriation in half, and thereby spoiled a number of previously arranged summer excursions, upon which it had been common for the "scientists" to take members of their families, not only having their expenses paid, but in many cases getting them on the pay roll as "assistants." These "scientists" own a big club house in the fashionable part of town and wield an enormous social "pull," which is now being worked against the recommendations of the Dockery Commission.

WAVERY RIPPLES.

Wish you a Happy New Year.

There will be a dime social at the Union church Friday evening given by the Y. P. S. C. E. The Howard Lake male quartette will sing here also.

LONG LAKE.

DIED: William Archibald in his 85th year. He was one of the pioneers of this locality, arriving in June, 1855, having emigrated from Nova Scotia, of which country he and his family were natives. His children are Herbert Archibald, of Long Lake, Mrs. Robert Coffin, Robert, David, and Walter Archibald and Mrs. Wilbur, of Deerwood, Minn., and Mrs. Kane, of Florida.

The people of this place are enjoying Christmas in the usual manner. Our merchants found great sale for Christmas goods despite the hard times.

During the last few weeks teams were seen hauling trees, roots, earth, trunks and branches to the Peavey Farm, near Wayzata, to beautify the grounds about the buildings.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

The day after Christmas and Santa Claus has not got around yet! Must be he has got belated or taken the wrong road or perhaps got on a drunk.

There was a large attendance at the Christmas entertainment held at the school house in Maple Plain on Christmas eve.

Wm. Perkins and wife, of St Cloud has been visiting in Independence for a few days.

Quite a number of young folks went skating Christmas.

There were quite a number of parties Christmas night.

Miss Mable Burns, who has been on the sick list for some time is improving.

DeForest Elliot has been down from the pineries this week.

A good many of our agricultural papers of the state advocate diversified farming and dairy business and leave off raising wheat. That is very well so far as it goes, but everybody could not go into diversified farming and the dairying business. If they did, who would raise the wheat? We must have bread, for by bread we live. One of these same agricultural papers advocates the election of W. D. Washburn to the United States Senate again. Says the coming Legislature should elect Mr. Washburn by acclamation without any nonsensical talk about it for it would be a Northwestern calamity to fail to re-elect Mr. Washburn. Poor thing, I admire your partisan principles but pity your stupid ignorance. As if no one but a coldblooded aristocrat was fit to represent Minnesota in the United States Senate. Go view his grounds and colossal mansion in Minneapolis and see if you think he would naturally be the friend of the poor man. No man with such an expensive estate to keep up, with the care of his official duties, too, has much time to devote to the interests of the poor. His time must be mostly employed about his own affairs. Better take some man from a sod shanty on the prairie. He understands the interests of the poor better than such a man as Washburn.

Another republican paper says if the democrats had only known enough to do so and so (let the McKinley bill alone) things migh have been different.

J. H. MCGARY.

Literary Note.

The relation which price bears to quality in literature is made obscure by the Christmas Cosmopolitan. Stories by Rudyard Kipling, Wm. Dean Howells, Mrs. Spencer Trask, Mrs. Burton Harrison, and Albion W. Tourgee, are interspersed with poetry by Sir Edwin Arnold, Edmund Clarence Stedman, and James Whitcomb Riley, while through the number are scattered illustrations, by such famous artists as Remington, Toche, Reinhart, Turner, Van Schaick, Gibson and Stevens. A series of portraits of beautiful women of society illustrate an article on The Relations of Photography to Art; a travel article by Napoleon Ney, grandson of the famous Field Marshal; one of the series of Great Passions of History, to which Froude and Gosse have already contributed, and half a dozen others equally interesting, go to make up the attractions of the number. The Cosmopolitan people say: "We might charge you more for this number, but, in all frankness, could we give you better material, better illustrated, if we charged you a dollar a copy?

"It Is Better to Give Than to Receive."

A. H. HUMMEL, the noted criminal lawyer.

When we apply to it the Scriptural injunction "It is better to give than to receive" Christmas offers us an opportunity to show those we love that we have not forgotten them. It is a pretty custom to have a day fixed when we may give this outward vent to our feelings. When annoyed we may, nay, often do, say cruel things during a year; but we are all too apt to hide our fonder sentiments except during courtship.

The custom per se is beautiful; but it is carried to such excess at times that it becomes a burden. Every man's presents should be regulated by both his pocket and his heart. It is nothing less than absurd to feel an obligation to incur expenses that one can not afford. This is unjust to the recipient and nothing short of criminal on the part of the giver.

It is not the present alone that is valued, but the feeling that prompted it. Nobody can make gifts to every casual acquaintance. The line must be drawn somewhere, and my idea is that it should be drawn as near the family hearthstone as possible. Some intimate friends must be remembered, but never at the expense of the best-beloved ones at home, or, for that matter, the loved ones that may be ever so far away. I do not think that any sensible person feels hurt because he has not received presents from friends, or because presents that were sent cost comparatively little. Those who weigh the value of a gift are mercenary beings whose hearts do not respond with sincerity.

Calves Come High.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Dec. 21.—The famous "Jones County Calf Case" has just been finally settled by the Iowa supreme court. The case has been in the courts twenty years; the leading attorneys and several of the principals are dead; the cost aggregates over $40.000, while the calves which originated the law suit were worth only $40. By the decision Bob Johnson, the plaintiff, gets judgment for costs for about $8.000. Attorneys' liens against any judgment Johnson might get amount to over $15,000, but they are outlawed and the estates of those who filed them have long since been scattered. The case has been tried before 25 judges and 144 jurors.—Globe.

Among Our Exchanges.

Fear that Republican Senators will prevent legislation is not a valid excuse for the failure of democratic Senators to try to legislate. Let every democrat in the state remember that.—St. Cloud Times.

I enjoy being able to celebrate Christmas as Dickens liked to have it; and if with such enjoyment others are made correspondingly happy, then indeed is my cup of bliss full to overflowing.—From "Common Sense of Christmas Gifts" in Demorest's Magazine for December.

Both Senator Washburn and Congressman Fletcher are of the opinion that the Carlisle currency bill cannot possibly become a law, and this is also the opinion of Senator Allison, of Iowa. They all believe that no financial legislation is possible at this session, which is perhaps fortunate for the country, for it is hardly possible that anything of a helpful nature can proceed from such an incohate body as the democratic congress.--Evening Tribune.

The Washburn managers and organs should not undervalue the influence of the country press. The country press has made and unmade more men than any other force. As a force for good it towers above the metropolitan press as a mountain above a mole hill. United against Washburn they would annihilate him beyond the hope of resurrection. Do not despise the country press dear brethern of the city. Individually they are Reubens perhaps, but collectively they are a whole carload of Ward McAllisters, Sandows and Parkhursts.--St. Peter Herald.

THE new treaty between the United States and Japan will not go into effect until July 17, 1899. The concessions made to Japan are made on the assumption that she is a civilized power, and in the next five years she will have ample opportunity to prove that she is.

BECAUSE of criticism of the manner in which the coalition cabinet governs Austria, the circulation of the Frankfurter Zeitiung, one of the most influential German newspapers, has been prohibited in Austria. This is the first time that a German newspaper has been subjected to such a severe measure.

"OLD IRONSIDES," the venerable and historical warship, Constitution, which was launched in Boston harbor in 1797, is being refitted and will be sent to that harbor for permanent location as the headquarters of the Boston naval reserve. The grand old vessel ought to be preserved forever, by rebuilding decayed portions as time and wear necessitate.

THE tendency in New England of late has been to vote for the licensing of saloons. The majority for license in Boston the other day was 11,799, against 9,589 last year. Pittsfield, Mass., defeated license last year, but at the recent election gave it a majority of 659, because two of the druggists had been selling a barrel of whisky a day and clearing $30,000 a year each on a license that cost just one dollar.

IT is contrary to law for a private individual to buy gold from the mines of Transvaal. The entire products of the mines must be sold to the Dutch government at rates fixed by statute and any person found with uncoined gold in his possession is liable to severe punishment. This somewhat singular law is being enforced rigidly, and quite a number of well-to-do people have been sent to prison for violating its provisions.

THE decision of the supreme court of the United States in a Massachusetts case does not affect the manufacture or sale of oleomargarine—it simply means that colored grease shall not be sold as butter pure from the farms of the country. It was this sailing under false colors that was forever condemned as far as the courts are concerned. The states have the eternal right to protect the makers of the pure June colored butter.

IN Vienna a man died recently who had his heart on the right side and almost all his internal organs, milt, liver and intestines, were found to be opposite to their usual places. Deceased never felt any inconvenience from this derangement. He learned of it accidentally several years ago and offered to sell his body to the British museum for the immediate payment of a good round sum, but the offer was declined. The cause of death was consumption.

THE shark, much as the sailors may hate it, furnishes several valuable products. An oil obtained from its liver vies in medical qualities with that obtained from the liver of the cod; its skin, when dried, takes the hardness and polish of mother of pearl, and is used by jewelers for fancy objects, by binders for making shagreen, and by cabinet-makers for polishing wood; while the Chinese pickle its fins and think them one of the greatest delicacies beneath the sun.

ENGLAND has taken captive a woman who, it is claimed, is 300 years old. She is Queen Majajie, the ruler of a tribe of Kaffirs, whose age is vouched for by the reputed traditions of her tribe. Generations have spoken of her as being blessed with the gift of perpetual life, and her fame has extended throughout the uncivilized regions as far north as Egypt. While it is not for a moment to be believed that the woman could have reached this marvelous age, the English government says it has traced the history of Queen Majajie's tribe back for 110 years, all that time under her rule.

THE protection of the deer in Vermont will extend until 1900, but the farmers say that if there were not a little hunting the animals would so increase as to be a nuisance before then. They have been eating some of the crops this autumn, are often found in orchards consuming fallen fruit, and an agriculturist in Windsor county complains that they have destroyed his entire crop of buckwheat. Several of the fawns have been domesticated and are as tame as cows and sheep, not to say a good deal worse about getting into gardens. High fences will keep cattle out, but not deer.

MISS ELVIRA FIFE and her sister Elmira have long held the distinction of being the oldest living twins in America. Elvira died recently at Petersburg, N. H., aged 83 years, 3 months and 26 days. She was, as is her sister, very eccentric. Although the Boston & Maine railroad had run within ten rods of their door ever since the railroad was built, neither of them had ever ridden upon a railroad train, never visited a theater, and until death divided them seventy hours was the longest space of time they had ever been separated. The surviving twin is very feeble and has lost her mind.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

Proceedings of the Second Session.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 19.—The vice president laid before the senate the report of Admiral Walker on the subject of Hawaii. A bill was passed to open for settlement abandoned military reservations in various states and territories. A bill was also passed to establish a national military park at the battlefield of Shiloh. The Nicaragua canal bill was further discussed. In the house the time was occupied in debating the Carlisle currency bill.

THURSDAY, Dec. 20.—In the senate bills were reported to revive the grade of lieutenant general in the army, to forfeit lands granted to aid in the construction of railroads, and to provide a suitable residence for the president. In the house bills were introduced to amend the national banking act, authorizing the deposit of legal tenders instead of bonds to secure circulation, the circulating bank notes to be exempt from taxation; to provide a residence for the president; and an urgency deficiency bill of $575,000 to complete the census. A bill was passed to pension the widow of Maj. Gen. Nathaniel P. Banks at the rate of $100 a month. The currency bill was further discussed.

FRIDAY, Dec. 21.—The senate was session to-day. In the house Mr. Wilson (W. Va.) introduced a bill repealing that portion of the new tariff act which imposes a differential duty of one-tenth of 1 per cent. a pound on sugars imported from countries paying a bounty on sugar exported. A bill was passed for the relief of homesteaders in Wisconsin and Minnesota whose property was devastated by the forest fires last year. Mr. Springer introduced a substitute for the Carlisle currency bill.

SATURDAY, Dec. 22.—Senator Morgan addressed the senate in favor of the Nicaragua canal bill. A resolution was introduced for information as to why all United States ships of war had been withdrawn from the Hawaiian islands. Adjourned to January 3, 1895. In the house a bill was introduced to exclude political influence in the appointment of postmasters. Mr. Bryan (Neb.) spoke against the Carlisle currency bill. Adjourned to January 3, 1895.

LATER NEWS.

Drowned.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 26.—A most distressing accident occurred at St. Paul park Monday afternoon whereby three young men, students at St. Paul college, lost their lives. They broke through the ice in a bend of the river where the water was very deep, and were drowned before help could be had. The dead are:

Matthew Uhl, age 19.
Frank Langar, age 19.
Alphonse Langer, age 23.

The accident was witnessed by several boys who were unable to lend a hand to save the young men, and their story shows that Alphonse Langer lost his life in attempting to save his brother and Uhl. Matthew Uhl is the son of President Uhl, of the St. Paul college, and the Langers were his cousins. Uhl and Frank Langer were skating and had been on the ice half an hour when the catastrophe occurred.

SUPT. Byrnes of New York has issued an order prohibiting the police from riding free on elevated or street cars. They are forbidden to accept any free transportation or franking privileges.

THE wages of the skilled labor in Carnegie's steel works have been cut 10 to 20 per cent. The men decided to accept.

CHAS. ROCHE was robbed of $13 and murdered the 24th by tramps at Hubbard, Ohio.

ALL of the passenger conductors on the New York Central railroad will be required to give bonds after Jan. 1.

THE Y. M. C. A. building at Albany, N. Y., was burned the 25th. Loss, $60,000.

MARY MOON, of Newman's Grove, Neb., was kicked and trampled to death the 25th by a cow she was trying to milk.

Two freight trains on the Big Four road collided at Calvin's Station, Ind., the 25th. Both engines were wrecked and Engineer Joe Ready killed.

DESTITUTE PEOPLE.

Three Thousand Nebraskans Suffer the Pangs of Hunger.

Three Consecutive Crop Failures Leave Families in Twenty-One Counties in a Pitiable Condition—No Money for Life's Necessaries.

NIOBRARA, Neb., Dec. 25.—The suffering among the inhabitants of the drought-blasted part of Nebraska, including three-fourths of the residents of five counties, is becoming more intense daily, and immediate steps alone can prevent many deaths by starvation. Three years ago the farmers of these drought-blighted counties raised a very light crop, and the past two years the crops have been almost total failures. Many families have not enough provisions in their homes for one week's subsistance and no money to purchase the necessaries of life.

A Long List of Destitute.

President Nason, of the Nebraska state relief commission, has been forwarded a carefully-prepared report of the number of destitute families in the different counties in the state where there was a crop failure. The list is a large one and it will require all the assistance that can be procured to keep the people in the most urgent of necessities during the cold winter months. The report as has been made out by Secretary Ludden is as follows:

Custer county, 250 families; Perkins, 200; Chase, 225; Dundy, 120; Hitchcock, 250; Red Willow, 100; Hayes, 200; Frontier, 40; Furnas, 100; Lincoln, 700; Dawson, 45; Keith, 200; Deuel, 40; Cherry, 40; McPherson, 40; Blaine, 20; Boyd, 250; Holt, 30; Antelope, 30; Keya Paha, 25; Knox, 25.

STORMS ABROAD.

The British Isles and the Continent Suffer from Fierce Gales.

LONDON, Dec. 25.—Reports of the storm received from all parts of England show that immense damage has been everywhere caused by the recent gales. The loss will reach tens of thousands of pounds. Many buildings have been blown down and telegraph wires have suffered greatly. Traffic has been completely suspended in many places on account of the floods. Many ships have been driven ashore by the winds.

Over fifty persons have been reported dead in different places as a result of the storm, while hundreds have been injured. Eight persons, while attempting to escape from a bark driven ashore at Holy Head, were drowned. A chimney at Sheffield was blown down and it is reported that five persons were killed and many injured.

Three fishing smacks went down Saturday night off Stornaway, on the Scotch coast, and all three crews, numbering twenty-two men, were drowned. At Teelin a house collapsed and the three occupants were killed. In Stanolar two persons were killed by a falling chimney.

Dispatches from the continent say that northern France and Germany suffered severely from the storm, although the loss of life and property cannot be estimated. At Hamburg many vessels went adrift and collided or grounded. The tide was the highest seen since 1882. The lower parts of Wilhelmshaven on the North sea were flooded and the dykes would have gone if the garrison had not worked energetically for hours to strengthen them. Luebeck and Colberg also suffered much damage.

At least thirteen persons were killed and sixty injured, many of them fatally, by the wreck of the Manchester express on the London & Northwestern railway, at Chelford, Saturday. The accident in reality was caused by the recent storm, which has wrought so much damage throughout England.

PARIS, Dec. 25.—The storm which has swept northwestern Europe has done great damage in Belgium. The Dendre overflowed its banks at Termonde, and the inhabitants were aroused at midnight by ringing bells to flee for their lives. In Rotterdam the water rose 12 feet above the usual high water mark. The streets were under 2 or 3 feet of water, and the inhabitants paddled about on rafts and in boats.

GREAT MEN OF THE PAST.

New Hampshire Gives Congress Statues of Daniel Webster and Gen. Stark.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—The senate devoted Thursday's session to addresses in connection with the acceptance and placing in statuary hall of the capitol of the marble statues of Gen. John Stark and Daniel Webster, presented by the state of New Hampshire.

The one that attracted most attention was that of Senator Hoar (rep., Mass.) in relation to Mr. Webster, whose speeches, he said, were the literature of American nationality. They were to the American what the psalms of David were to the Hebrew, what the songs of Burns were to the Scotchman. Up to the 7th of March, 1850, when he made his speech in the senate in support of the fugitive slave law, he was the oracle of New England. But on that day he put himself in opposition to the conscience of the north. The voice of law, as he interpreted it, and the voice of God, speaking to the individual soul then for the first time in the nation's history, seemed to be in conflect. Nothing, said Senator Hoar, could have resisted the dominion of Daniel Webster over New England, until he provoked an encounter with the inexorable conscience of the Puritan. Senator Hoar,s concluding sentence was warmly applauded. It was: "He is the one foremost figure in our history between the day when Washington died and the day when Lincoln took the oath of office."

Senator Morgan (dem., Ala.) followed Senator Hoar, and took an opposite view of Mr. Webster's defense of the fugitive slave law, regarding it as the most conspicuous evidence of his moral courage, obeying the constitution of the United States rather than the clamor and sentiment of New England.

Senator Chandler (rep., N. H.) spoke of Webster's ancestry and his life and services to the country.

Among others who spoke in eulogy of Webster and Stark were Senators Morrill (rep., Vt.), Davis (rep., Minn.), Lodge (rep., Mass.), Gallinger (rep., N. H.), Hawley (rep., Conn.), Cullom (rep., Ill.) and Mitchell (rep., Ore.).

At 2 o'clock Mr. Baker (rep., N. H.) formally presented to congress in the lower branch the statue of Gen. Stark. He was followed by Mr. Blair (rep., N. H.), who, in a short speech, presented the statue of Daniel Webster. Other speakers were Representatives Grout (rep., Vt.) and Everett (dem., Miss.).

FOR ARBITRATION.

Labor Commissioner Wright Presents His Plan.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Labor Commissioner Wright has sent to Mr. Erdman (Pa.) the draft of a bill for the national arbitration of strikes. The bill was prepared by Mr. Wright and his associates on the strike commission appointed by President Cleveland to investigate the great Chicago strike. Such arbitration was recommended in the commission's report and the bill now gives the practical details of their plan. It differs entirely from the arbitration bill heretofore introduced by Mr. Springer, being more elaborate and precise in its details. Mr. Erdman will introduce it in the house to day. The title of the bill is "A Bill Concerning Carriers Engaged in Interstate Commerce and Their Employes." It is modeled after the interstate commerce act. A synopsis is as follows:

It provides for the appointment by the president, with the advice and consent of the senate, of a commission consisting of five persons, to be known as "the United States board of conciliation and arbitration." Not more than three of the commissioners shall be appointed from the same political party. One of them shall have had experience in the management of railroads, and the other is to be selected from some incorporated association of railway employes. The commission shall have authority to inquire into the conditions of all employes subject to the act, and shall have the right to obtain from common carriers all necessary information. The provisions of the interstate commerce act are closely followed in this respect. The commission has the power to make all necessary rules and regulations and may administer oaths.

The salray of each commissioner shall be $7,500 per annum; the secretary to be appointed shall have a salary of $3,500. The principal offices of the commission shall be in the city of Washington, where its general sessions shall be held, but special sessions may be held anywhere in the United States. An annual report shall be submitted, and publication of the reports and decisions may be authorized and shall be competent evidence in all courts of the United States.

The bill provides that the system of arbitration and conciliation shall apply to common carriers engaged in the transportation between the states of passengers and property by railroad and by water, and to all persons and corporations leasing cars used for such transportation and all their employes; that the wages paid in such transportation and handling, and the rules and regulations shall be reasonable and just, not, however, taking away the right to make contracts.

Whenever it shall come to the knowledge of the commission that a strike or controversy between those subject to the act is threatened or has occurred it shall be its duty as soon as practicable to put itself in communication with both parties and endeavor by mediation and conciliation to effect a settlement. Likewise upon the request of employes or corporations, as well as of its own volition, it may make an investigation. All reports of investigations and mediations and the findings of facts therein shall be prima facie evidence as to each and every fact and be given due weight in all judical proceedings, and the attorney general of the United States, to whom the same shall be transmitted, shall take such action as is necessary. During the pendency of an arbitration it is not lawful for an employer to discharge an employe, nor for such employe to aid or abet strikes, nor to quit employment without thirty days' notice. The violation of this provision is made a misdemeanor.

In section 13 the incorporation of employes is encouraged and chapter 567, United States statutes, 1885-1886, is enlarged so as to provide that the constitution and by-laws of such association shall contain a provision that membership shall cease by participating in schemes of violations, strikes, etc., and that the members shall not be personally liable for any acts, debts or obligations of the organization.

Whenever receivers appointed by the federal courts are in control of a railroad the employes shall have the right to be heard in the court upon all questions affecting the terms of their employment, and no reduction of wages shall be made by the receivers without the authority of the court after due notice.

It is further made a misdemeanor for any officer or employe to require employes to enter into an agreement not to become a member of a labor organization, or to threaten an employe with loss of employment or discrimination because of such membership, or to require such employe to become a member of a beneficial organization.

MAKES A CLEAN BREAST.

A Witness Causes a Sensation in the Lexow Committee Investigation.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Capt. Schmittberger was recalled as a witness before the Lexow committee on Friday. He created a sensation by his answer to the second question asked him, which was: "Do you recognize the binding character of an oath?" He replied: "I do; I have come to tell the whole truth."

Capt. Schmittberger is under indictment for bribery. He had previously refused to testify before the senate committee. Thursday, however, he was rearrested and his bail increased. Friday he took advantage of an offer of immunity from punishment held out to him by Counsel Goff, and agreed to make a clean breast of it.

Without question Friday was the most important day in the history of the Lexow committee. Schmittberger's confession is prolific not only of sensation but of evidence which confirms and verifies what have been hitherto considered the most exaggerated cases of police and official corruption. It deals with more individual cases; it shows the criminality that has prevailed in the police department.

When Capt. Schmittberger had concluded his story Mr. Goff asked the witness if there was anything further he wished to tell. He replied: "I have told all I know about the police department and have made a clean breast of everything. I felt that for the sake of my wife and children I was justified in coming forward and telling what I knew."

"How is promotion made in the police department?" asked Senator O'Connor.

"Through either money or politics.'

The captain then made an important statement. "I think," said he, "that Superintendent Byrnes is an honest man and means to do what is right if he was permitted to do so?"

PHOTOGRAPHED THE RETINA.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Dec. 21.—Photographic science may have given the first tangible clew to the identity of the murderer of Mrs. Shearman and Mrs. Davis. Several have been suspected and the clews followed up without success, but on Thursday the impression of the murderer has been found on the retina of Mrs. Sherman's eye. The photograph was taken by Fred S. Marsh, a local photographer, and to him is due the credit of having originated the idea of examining the organ. The existence of the impression of the murderer on the eye was first discovered by means of a powerful microscope. Unfortunately the features of the man could not be seen, as the view obtained shows only the back and a very little of the side. An apparently big man is represented with bushy whiskers and wearing a long overcoat. The trousers appear to be badly wrinkled. The coroner has taken out both the eyes of the murdered woman, and another photograph will be taken to-day by a skilled photographer. No impression was discoverable on Mrs. Davis' eyes.

THE CURRENCY PROBLEM.

Salient Features as It Develops Before the Lower House.

On the 19th Mr. Johnson (rep., Ind.) admitted the defects of our currency system, but he said their correction could not be obtained along the lines suggested by the committee. It was much easier, he declared, to attack the present system than offer a safe substitute for it. While remedial legislation might be advisable, this was no time for experimental legislation. Mr. Johnson then contrasted the advantages of the national banking system with respect to prompt and satisfactory settlement against failed banks and of security to note holders, with those of the state bank system revived by the bill.

Mr. Warner (dem., N. Y.) advocated the passage of the bill because of the proposed rehabilitation of state banks, and because of the fact that it took the government out of the business of issuing currency.

Mr. Ellis' (dem., Ky.) opposition was largely based upon the fact that the bill provided for a reorganization and extension of the national banking system, when every state and national convention of the democratic party for years had declared against it, and this at a time when the necessity for their services as fiscal agents, if it ever existed, had absolutely passed.

Mr. Bland (dem., Mo.) gave notice that he would move to amend by substituting for the bill his free coinage of silver and coin note scheme.

On the 21st Messrs. Pendleton (dem., W. Va.), Russell (rep., Conn.), Sickles (dem., N. Y.), McLaurin (dem., S. C.) and Rawlins (dem., Utah), participated in the currency discussion. Mr. Sickles said that he would like to see the measure perfected in order that he could give a cheerful vote for a bill intended to relieve the financial embarrassments of the country. Two evils, said he, threatened the nation. First, the serious drain of gold from the treasury as a result of the outstanding legal tenders. In this bill he found no remedy for this alarming menace. This fact constituted his first criticism of the bill. It was in this respect inadequate. The government paper was in reality a government debt which ought to be funded. "Let us return," said Mr. Sickles, "to the sound principles of the days before the war. Let us adopt the McCulloch plan of funding the greenbacks."

Mr. Springer (dem., Ill.) then offered a substitute for the pending bill. It consists of the amendments which have been agreed upon by the democratic members of the committee; others that were suggested by Secretary Carlisle, the author of the bill that has been under consideration all the week, as well as certain features of the Carlisle bill which it has been deemed advisable to retain. After laying the substitute before the house, Mr. Springer briefly explained the important changes made in the Carlisle bill and their effect as follows:

1. Permitting the deposit of currency certificates issued under section 5,193 of revised statutes, to secure circulation as well as the deposits of legal tender notes and treasury notes. These certificates represent legal tender notes actually held in the treasury, and the effect of depositing certificates is, therefore, the same precisely as to require the deposit of notes.

2. So amending the present law as to permit state banks to deposit legal tender notes and procure these currency certificates in the same manner that national banks are now permitted to do.

3. Dispensing with the provision which authorizes an assessment upon the national banks to replenish the safety fund for the redemption of the notes of failed banks, and, in place of this provision, insert one providing that the collection of the one-fourth of a cent tax for each half year shall be resumed when the safety fund is impaired and continued until the safety fund is restored.

4. Authorizing the comptroller of the currency instead of the banks themselves to designate the agencies at which national bank notes shall be redeemed. The effect of this will be to secure the redemption not only at the office of the bank, but at other places accessible to note holders.

5. Dispense with the provisions compelling existing national banks to withdraw their bonds now on deposit and take out circulation under the new system, and in lieu of that provision insert one permitting the banks to withdraw their bonds, if they see proper to do so, by depositing lawful money, as now provided by law, and then to take out circulation under the new system if they choose to do so.

6. Providing that the notes of failed national banks which are not redeemed on demand at the office of the treasurer of the United States, or any assistant treasurer of the United States, shall bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, from the date of the suspension of the bank until thirty days after public notice has been given that funds are on hand for their redemption.

This imposes no obligation upon the part of the United States to use its own funds for the redemptions, as the safety fund is in the hands of the treasurer, and he will redeem notes out of that fund.

On the 22d Mr. Coombs (dem., N. Y.) spoke in favor of the bill. Mr. Bell (dem., Tex.) opposed the measure. He said that he noticed that the practical direction of currency reform was toward contraction.

Mr. Bowers (rep., Cal.) and Mr. Bryan (dem., Neb.) also opposed the bill. The latter attacked the administration viciously for dumping on the committee on banking and currency and the house a hastily considered bill like the one pending. Its weakness was demonstrated when, after four days of verbal bombardment, it has been practically withdrawn and another measure substituted. Mr. Bryan said that, stripped of its verbiage, this bill was a simple proposition to authorize the government to loan banks money at a low rate of interest, or at no rate, to be in turn loaned by them at whatever rate they could secure.

"Mr. Cleveland thinks," said Mr. Bryan, "that the issue of currency is a function of the banks. Jefferson declared such an issue is a function of the government and thought the banks should go out of the issuing business. I am not ashamed to say that I stand by Thomas Jefferson and not Grover Cleveland."

Mr. Bryan said he had been and was now in favor of gold and silver money because the amount of money would depend on the law of supply and demand.

WORE BINNION'S SHOES.

Noel Foster Believed to Be Guilty of the Mysterious Pana Murder.

LITCHFIELD, Ill., Dec. 24. — Deputy Sheriff Edmunds, of Pana, passed through this city Saturday with Noel Foster, of Pana, the supposed murderer of young Binnion. He had on Binnion's shoes and his overcoat had blood spots on it, which he had evidently tried to wash off. He denied everything, saying that he was in Mount Vernon when the crime was committed. Foster is thought to be guilty of another murder in Pana, which has been a mystery. He was taken to Taylorville to jail.

Father's Awful Deed.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Dec. 25.—A horrible tragedy occurred here at an early hour Saturday morning. A Canadian Pacific railway laborer named George Frederick Ashwood, while crazed with drink, shot his wife and two children while they were asleep in bed. The wife and one child are dead.

FASHIONS IN JEWELRY.

THE collar form of necklace prevails this season, owing doubtless to its greater becomingness.

BLACK steel watches have a certain vogue. The surface is frequently and effectively studded with tiny diamonds.

UMBRELLA handles are sword hilt shape, that is to say, flat and slightly concave and overlaid with silver ornaments.

THERE are unusual displays of leather goods. Soft ivory tones prevail. These goods are bound in silver, frequently touched with enamel.

OLD Roman coins are mounted as medallions. Another manifestation is designs in metal, with legends in French or old English.

LARGE cut-glass punch bowls mounted in silver have medallions with engraved ornament in relief. The designs are pertinent to the office of the bowl. They are a decided acquisition.

PERFORATED silver standards for teacups are a recent addition to the equipages for afternoon tea. A lovely set seen had egg shell cups with a pale lavender border above the silver. The effect was exquisite.—Jeweler's Circular.

COMPETITION IN BABIES.

Wherein a Word to the Wise Papa Ought to Be Sufficient.

"I am getting to be the most barefaced and versatile liar on earth," said the bachelor, "and it's all on account of two little innocent babies. Two of my friends at the office have recently been invested with the honor of paternity, both boys. Prouder papas, you never saw. One of them, Jones, is an amateur photographer, and the other day he took a picture of his baby and brought it to the office.

"Of course you know how intelligent a child of one month looks," continued the bachelor, stroking his bald head with the air of a connoisseur of infancy, "but the boys in the office were loyal. They swore it was the brightest looking kid they had ever seen, and that it was the image of Jones.

"If it had been anyone else's child Jones would have knocked somebody down for the insult, but he took it as a great compliment and stuck the picture up in a frame on his desk.

"This was too much for Smith—the other papa. He hasn't any camera of his own, so he got a young

Y THRONE is yonder belfry:
Hark how I wake the world!
Oh, joyful be the message
That broadcast now is hurled!
A word of hope and triumph,
Again I waft to you.
Ringing out the old year,
Ringing in the new!

I've marked the gains and losses,
The strivings of the hour:
Rank weeds I've seen upgrowing,
Where should have bloomed the flower.
The nobler path and purpose,
I bid ye all pursue,
Ringing out the old year,
Ringing in the new!

To all a heart of gladness,
To all a kindly thought!
Beneath Time's opening portals,
No good deed be unwrought!
How soon my voice is silent,
Its moments now, how few!
Ringing out the old year,
Ringing in the new!

May brightest sunshine gather
About each roof-tree fair!
God's blessing on the harvest,
That bounteously we share!
Joys blossom in life's pathway!
And thus I bid adieu—
Ringing out the old year,
Ringing in the new!

POVERTY'S NEW YEAR.

"WELL," impudently queried the man as he stood in the door of a fourth floor room and looked into the face of a woman whose cheeks had grown white as she heard his step on the landing.

"I'm sorry, sir, but—"

"Same old story, is it?"

"I've had to tell you for the last two months—that I was out of work and couldn't pay my rent. That was bad enough, but now my Tom is out of work, too. He's there on the bed, sir, and the doctor says it's a touch of pneumonia."

"You owe two months' back rent," he said, as he inspected the poor, old furniture and wondered if it would pay to attach it.

"Yes, sir, but if you'll only have a little patience we'll pay you."

"Patience won't pay taxes nor make repairs. I'll give you the day to pack your traps."

"But where will I go?"

"Beat some other landlord out of two months' rent."

"I haven't a shilling in the house and there lies my sick boy! Give me a week, anyhow. It will be the death of Tom to be carried out. It's too cold in the room here, but I've only a little coal and have to use it more carefully than you do gold."

"You can talk to the constables when they come; I'm sick and tired of hearing these yarns."

"Before the week is out I may find work. If Tom was well I wouldn't say a word, but don't set us out with him so badly off that the doctor—"

"Talk to the constables!" shouted the man as he turned to go.

"But, sir, if you would only let us stay another week I'm sure you wouldn't lose by it. There's such a thing as the Lord raising up a friend for the widow and the fatherless just as they are ready to give up."

"Can't stop—talk to the constable—two months' back rent or out you go."

That was the way the year opened for Widow Flint and her boy Tom. It was hard times all around. Plenty of energetic, skillful mechanics were out of work and behind in their rent, and dealers and manufacturers who generally had plenty of work to give out were holding back to watch the business outlook. Tom might have kept his place at three dollars per week in the box factory, but the want of proper food and clothing had made him susceptible to exposure and brought him low. There wasn't money enough in the house to get the doctor's prescription filled at a drug store, and it was well that the boy's fever blunted his appetite, as a loaf of bread was the only palatable thing in the house. Neighbors! Yes, plenty of them. There were forty families under that roof, but most of them had little else but bread. When poverty begins to hunger their poverty is selfish.

It makes people selfish to herd them together. The sight of each other's destitution blunts all sentiment.

"But—He's like the mayor, ain't he—never noticing anybody but well-off folks."

"Tom, the Lord looks down upon us all—the poor as well as the rich. We are all in His keeping. Don't doubt His goodness. It's hard work to be sick and freezing and hungering, but if it's our burden to bear we must do it. You must have medicine, Tom. I'm going out to see if I can pawn my shawl."

"And then you can't go out to look for work."

"But it may save you."

She went out and walked about for an hour, but pawnbrokers and second-hand clothing dealers were taking a holiday with the rest of the world. She finally entered a drug store, and asked of the urbane proprietor, who came forward rubbing his hands, to take the shawl and fill the prescription.

"Very sorry, you know, but we couldn't do it," he replied. "Medicines are cash, and the shawl is old and thin and not worth anything."

"But my Tom is threatened with pneumonia, sir."

"Y-e-s. Just the sort of weather for pneumonia, and most of the cases seem to prove fatal."

"And must he die for the want of this medicine?"

"Good day, ma'am—good day. I notice the thermometer is down to zero, and I shouldn't wonder if it would go lower before night."

She had assured Tom that there was only one God, and that He watched over the poor as well as the rich, but as she wended her way homewards she had to combat her doubts. His fever was worse, and he was out of his mind, and all day long he moaned and tossed about, and she could do no more than hold a cup of water to his lips now and then. When night began to fall she made a bundle of Tom's clothes. They were old, but of more value than her shawl. If he died she would not redeem them; if he got well—well, she had said that the Lord sometimes raised up a friend for the poor and distressed.

"Humph! Four o'clock p. m., and New Year's day and you not out of bed yet?"

It was a young man of twenty-five, who had gone to bed at 2 o'clock that morning. His face was pinched and pale, his eyes hollow and bloodshot, and one looking at him might have taken him for an old man.

"Made a fool of yourself again last night, didn't you?" he growled, talking to himself as he lay looking around. "Old man, do you know that I'm about ready to cut your acquaintance? A young man of decent family—plenty of money—good prospects, and yet how are you using yourself? Champagne, cards, dissipation. Going right to the dogs on the gallop. At twenty-five you feel like a man of fifty. Health, prospects and the whole outfit going to the devil, and what are you getting in exchange? You are the son of your father and a high-roller—that is all. When you come to figure it down you are a champion fool—nothing less."

"Head as big as a house and your stomach full of vitriol. Nice chap you are. A decent mule ought to be ashamed to kick you. No sand—no energy—hardly strength enough to get into your clothes and wash up. You and I are going to have a talk after a bit. Had no idea where the boys tucked me away this morning, but I guess this is a hotel, and I'll order up a bite to eat."

Half an hour later the high-roller sat down to his cigar, and, as he smoked, he said:

"What I want to know is how much longer you are going to continue this sort of business. You've had six or seven years of it, and it seems to me that you ought to be through. When a young man gets to that point where he realizes that he is an ass he's ready for a change. Suppose we surprise the old folks by dropping this high-roller business and living a half-way decent life. Champagne, cards, songs, cigars, and all that last night till you were drunk as an old bum. That reminds me. Seems to me I had a streak of luck. Let's see."

He had money in every pocket—twos, fives and tens. The bills were crumpled and rolled, but he smoothed them out on his knee and counted them over and said:

"A fool for luck! Here's an even three hundred dollars, and I must have had luck, just about enough to pay for a wine supper, and just about a hundredth part of what I've lost at cards. Well, what are you going to do about the other matter—swearing off? Strikes you as about the correct thing, does it? All right. Hold up your right hand and repeat after me.

"'I, James Forbush, being in my right mind for the first time in several years, and fully realizing that I am the biggest idiot in North America, do hereby affirm and declare that I am no longer a high-roller on wheels. In other words, I pledge myself to eschew cards, drink and other rapid transit matters from and after this first day of January, 189—, and if I break my word may I be despised by men and kicked by animals.

"That's all right, old man—all right. May come hard, but you'll wabble through. Now, as to the money. You don't need it. It was won at cards, and there's wine stains on every bill. In being a high-roller you've forgotten all about charity. You've been ready to flip a dollar to the darky who held your overcoat, but never a nickel to the beggar on the street. Let's take a walk."

"Well, what's the matter with you?"

"Don't arrest me, sir, I'll move on!

"Arrest nothing! What's in the bundle?"

"Tom's suit, sir."

"And who's Tom?"

"My boy, sir, and he's sick with pneumonia and I'm trying to sell his clothes to get medicine."

"Come off! I never heard of such a thing!"

"Here's the prescription, sir, and will you come with me and see for yourself?"

She led the way and he followed. When he saw the pinching poverty and heard her story—when he stood by the bed and saw how sick poor Tom was, he smiled grimly and said:

"Then there are high-rollers and low-rollers. Never knew that before. Never had an idea that people really suffered from poverty. So this is poverty, eh?—no money—no hopes—boy sick—rent due—coal out—and you are trying to sell the boy's clothes for medicine!"

At that moment Tom ceased his moaning and opened his eyes and saw the strange man in the room.

"I thought it was a dream, mother,"

"What, Tom?"

"About the Lord. I was walking the streets and looking all over for Him, and He was right here all the time. Now we'll have the medicine and a good fire and something to eat! You said there was a Lord, but—I—I—"

"What does he mean?" asked the high-roller.

"Why, sir, I told him that the Lord might raise up a friend for us. He was so ill and we were so poor that he doubted if the Lord watched over the poor."

One by one he counted the bills into her hand—just three hundred dollars, and put on his hat to go.

"Why, sir—but you see—you don't mean all this for me?"

"Get medicine, a doctor, coal, provisions—save Tom's life!" he said, as he went out.

She sat down in a chair, dazed and wonderingly if she had not passed from earth to Heaven, and as he clattered downstairs and out into the cold and the night he muttered:

"Old man, you've made a beginning, and now see if you can't keep it up."—Detroit Free Press.

WAS IT THE LANDLORD?

Something New.

"I am going to have something new next week," said Aunt May, the day after Christmas.

"A new dress?" questioned Daisy.

"A new book?" asked Fred.

"A new guitar?" guessed Hattie.

"You haven't come within a mile of it," said auntie. "It is a great deal more important than any of those articles you have so far mentioned. Just think a minute."

So they all pulled their thinking caps clear down to their eyes, as Daisy said, and pretty soon Fred asked: "Will we have it, too, auntie?"

"Yes," she said, "we'll all have it."

"Will Mr. Hill's folks have it?" And Fred's eyes began to twinkle.

"Yes," said auntie, "everybody will have it."

Then Daisy and Hattie began to twinkle, too, and Fred shouted: "It's the New Year, auntie!" And the girls cried: "Happy New Year for everybody!"—Youth's Companion.

The Old Year's Flight.

And his thread-bare garments flying,
The Old Year softly steals away,
Through the pines so sadly sighing.

He casts one glance on his kingdom fair,
And thinks with a tender sorrow
That his reign is o'er and he comes no more
For a new king rules to-morrow.

"Full many a gift have I brought to you,
O world, that your hearts are scorning!
Yet the Crown of Thorns may prove at last
More dear than a king's adorning.

Will the gay young prince to his people bring
More joy than I've been giving?
Will they all forget, as the days go by,
The dead king for the living?

"Nay; whatsoever the New Year brings,
Some hearts will still be yearning
For joys gone by; and with sorrow deep
To the Old Year will be turning.

"So, fare thee well, both friends and foes,
May all your burdens lighten!
And day by day, along your way,
The path forever brighten."
—Lora Annis Chase, in Boston Budget.

What He Had On.

"Did you see Freddie Twiggins on New Year's day?" asked one girl. "No," replied the other; "I was told, though, that he—er—that he had skates on." "Skates," repeated the other; "skates doesn't begin to express it. Those were snow shoes."—Indianapolis Journal.

A MIRACLE IN TEXAS.

Investigated by the Texas Christian Advocate and Vouched for by Dr. C. H. Stansbury.

(From the Texas Christian Advocate.)

Our representative has made a careful investigation of the H. E. Spaulding case at Longview, which is here published for the first time, and which will be read with great interest by medical men everywhere. In reply to the Christian Advocate's questions Mr. Spaulding said: About eight years ago while running a locomotive I contracted sciatic rheumatism in my left side from my hip down. It came on slow but sure and in a few months I lost control entirely of that member, it was just the same as if it was paralyzed, I was totally unable to move out of my room for a year and a half, six months of which time I was bedridden. I tried every remedy suggested, and had regular physicians in constant attendance on me. I was bundled up and sent to Hot Springs where I spent three months under the treatment of the most eminent specialists, all of which did me no good, and I came back from the springs in a worse condition than when I went. I came home and laid flat on my back and suffered the most excruciating agonies, screaming in pain every time anybody walked across the room, the only ease I obtained being from the constant use of opiates. After three months of this kind of agony, during which time my entire left leg perished away to the very bone, my attention was called to a new remedy called Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, by Mr. Allison who is now train dispatcher at Texarkana, and who was relieved of locomotor ataxia of twenty years duration. At his urgent and repeated solicitation I consented to give them a trial, after taking a few doses I began to improve. I continued taking the pills and kept right on improving until I was finally cured. My leg is just the same size now as the other one, and I am sure that Pink Pills not only cured me but saved life.

The reporter next visited Dr. C. H. Stansbury, a graduate of one of the medical schools of Kentucky, and a man who enjoys the confidence of everybody in Longview. He said: "I know that Mr. Spaulding had a terribly severe attack of sciatic rheumatism of which I tried to cure him; used everything known to my profession in vain and finally recommended him to go to Hot Springs. He came back from the springs worse than when he went and I thought it was only a matter of time until his heart would be affected and he would die. I also know that his cure is the direct result of the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

"That is rather an unusual statement for a regular physician to make, doctor."

"I know it is, but a fact is a fact, and there are hundreds of people right here in Longview who know what I say is the truth. I also know Mr. Allison and know that he was relieved of a genuine and severe case of locomotor ataxia of twenty years standing."

A ROSE WHIST PARTY.

Novel Idea for a Social Evening—Dainty Prizes Given Pertaining to the Rose.

Any novel idea which will help to solve that difficult question of how to entertain a number of guests is always a welcome suggestion, and one very pretty form of entertainment is a rose whist party.

To begin with, the invitations are sent out on pale pink paper, and announce that rose whist is to be the order of the evening. The game played is that familiar one of progressive whist, with the exception that each player keeps account for herself of all the red cards which are taken, and nothing else is counted. When the time is up for the fortunate player who holds the most red cards takes the first prize, while the one who has the least gets the "booby."

The prizes should all be something pertaining to the rose. Numerous articles can be thought of, such as rose bowls, rose candlesticks, rose sachets, bottles of rose perfume, bonbonnieres with candied rose leaves, etc. Upon each table are placed four full-grown La France or Mermet roses, with long stems and green leaves, as well as a dainty dish filled with pink and white bonbons. Each player also has a tally card of pink paper and a pink pencil attached for keeping the score.

The ices served are pink and white, and the supper table should be gracefully draped with pink ribbons, with rose petals strewn about on the cover. In fact, roses in profusion should be everywhere, and the lights should be softly shaded in pink.

This can be made a very pretty form of amusement, and one's own ingenuity could suggest many more features to make it a great success. It would be an added attraction if the hostess were dressed in a rosepink gown.—Chicago Times.

FARMERS AND A HORSE TRADE.

Coombes Helped Them Out and They Learned a Little by Experience.

A man named Coombes was a recognized authority on horses, not only in certain lumber regions in Pennsylvania, where he carried on a brisk business trading and selling horses and fitting out the lumbermen with teams, but also in the adjacent county, which was an agricultural district, he had gained a reputation for shrewdness and square dealing.

When the county fair was held in September he was on the spot and in front of the little store which he made his headquarters there was always a line of horses hitched to the fence, which the owners had driven from different parts of the county to be sold or traded, according to the pleasure of Mr. Coombes. One day, as Coombes was leaning against his door-post discussing the merits of a promising three-year-old with the enthusiastic owner of the animal, a wagon entered the inclosure in front of the shop and stopped at the door. A man covered with dust, with a red face and a wilted appearance, jumped from the wagon and addressed Mr. Coombes.

"Well, I am glad to see you, Mr. Coombes. Business looks promising with you," looking around at the horses on the grounds. "Perhaps I am not dusty and hot and perhaps I don't think a deal of you to come twenty miles in this weather to make a trade with you. Just take a look at that off horse. He is a beauty, he is. There isn't another like him in the country, but the fact is he is too speedy for me. I want a horse that will go well with the other horse—something not too fast, something strong and steady."

Mr. Coombes showed much interest in the matter and the farmer became more and more convinced that he had acted wisely in seeking his services. While they were talking he saw Mr. Coombes' eye rest in a dreamy way on a pair of horses that were hitched near the door. The instant he saw the object of Coombes' attention he exclaimed: "Gad, sir, I think we have struck the very horse that I want, the off horse—that bay there. Look him over. If he is sound and kind he will do for me. I'll trade even. How does that strike you?"

"I don't know," answered Coombes, doubtfully. "He is an especially fine animal."

"Well, I will throw in ten dollars. I will just step over to the fair grounds and you can think it over."

Presently the other man appeared, the owner of the "especially fine animal,"

"Have you found what I want?" He asked. "I must be getting home again. Twenty miles before dark."

"Take a look at this horse," said Coombes, pointing to the animal that the owner had called "too speedy." "He is just what you want. Fast, lightly built and a good match for your other horse."

The farmer looked at the horse, compared it with his own horse, had it hitched up and driven around the inclosure and finally exclaimed: "First rate, is it an even trade?"

"Throw in ten dollars and you can have him," answered Coombes.

"It's a bargain," said the farmer. He gave Coombes ten dollars and leaving his "especially fine animal" he drove his other horse and its new mate down the dusty street. When he had traveled about a mile one of the horses cast a shoe and he was obliged to stop at a blacksmith's shop beside the road. While he was chatting with his old acquaintance the blacksmith and waiting for the shoeing to be completed he saw a wagon stop at the door and an agitated voice exclaimed: "Neighbor, I want to know where you got that horse?" pointing to the newly acquired animal. The owner came out of the shop and answered with pride: "He is a fine piece of horseflesh, ain't he? I made a trade with Coombes. I——" but he stopped abruptly, for his eye rested on the off horse in his neighbor's team and he saw in it his lately dicarded property.

The two men looked at each other.

"How much did you pay to boot?" asked the man in the wagon.

"Ten dollars," answered the other; "and you?"

"Ten dollars."

They were neighbors; they lived a quarter of a mile from each other and they drove home slowly, side by side, thinking, no doubt, of the long twenty miles over the dusty road, of the ten dollars of each and sometimes of Coombes.—N. Y. Tribune.

The Reason Why.

Mr. G. (an old friend)—Yes—you have a most beautiful parlor here—but to have nothing to sit upon but one chair is a rather original idea, is it not?

Mrs. Z.—When one has mariageable daughters, one must have original ideas.—Truth.

In Our Great Grandfather's Time,

big bulky pills were in general use. Like the "blunderbuss" of that decade they were big and clumsy, but ineffective. In this century of enlightenment, we have Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, which cure all liver, stomach and bowel derangements in the most effective way.

Assist Nature a little now and then, with a gentle, cleansing laxative, thereby removing offending matter from the stomach and bowels, toning up and invigorating the liver and quickening its tardy action, and you thereby remove the cause of a multitude of distressing diseases, such as headaches, indigestion, or dyspepsia, biliousness, pimples, blotches, eruptions, boils, constipation, piles, fistulas and maladies too numerous to mention.

If people would pay more attention to properly regulating the action of their bowels, they would have less frequent occasion to call for their doctor's services to subdue attacks of dangerous diseases.

That, of all known agents to accomplish this purpose, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are unequaled, is proven by the fact that once used, they are always in favor. Their secondary effect is to keep the bowels open and regular, not to further constipate, as is the case with other pills. Hence, their great popularity, with sufferers from habitual constipation, piles and indigestion.

A free sample of the "Pellets," (4 to 7 doses) on trial, is mailed to any address, post-paid, on receipt of name and address on postal card.

For Royal Baking Powder. The "Royal" is shown by all tests, official, scientific, and practical, stronger, purer, and better in every way than all other Baking Powders. Its superiority is privately acknowledged by other manufacturers, and well known by all dealers.

If some grocers try to sell another baking powder in place of the "Royal," it is because of the greater profit. This of itself is good evidence of the superiority of the "Royal." To give greater profit the other must be a lower cost powder, and to cost less it must be made with cheaper and inferior materials, and thus, though selling for the same, give less value to the consumer.

DELANO DIARY

—The Catholics enjoyed their usual church festivities on Christmas.

—Most of the teachers of the Public Schools are enjoying their vacation at home with friends.

—Bock Bros. are completing their contract on the bridge at Wright's ford. It is not expected that they will make very much on the job, having bid about $200. under some careful figurers on the work.

—Rev. Powell informs us that a dime sociable will be held on Thursday evening Jan. 3, at the risidence of Mrs. Jonas Johnson. Rev. Atchison, P. E., will be present. All are invited. The P. E. will preach on Friday evening at the M. E. church.

—It takes a rich man to draw a check, a pretty girl to draw attention, a horse to draw a cart, a porous plaster to draw the skin, a toper to draw a cork, a free lunch to draw a crowd, and an advertisement in a newspaper to draw trade.—Ex.

—The Watertown correspondent of the Eagle improves his opportunity this week to preach his readers a first class temperance sermon. We hope it will not fall by the wayside.

—We suggested recently that Delano would make a good place for a pork-packing establishment. Now we see Minneapolis is trying to get up an establishment to convert cattle and hogs into food. Delano would do as well accordingly on a small scale.

—On account of the large attendance promised, the Rebekah Lodge has found it necessary to hold their dance on New Year's Eve in the City Hall and supper well be served in the Odd Fellows Hall as originally planned A general invitation is extended to all.

—John Catlin caught an eel about a foot long the other day, near Lyle's ford, by stunning it by striking the ice over it, and then chopping a hole in the ice and taking him out. Mr. Soshnik caught one about three feet long, last summer, near Rockford Station, These are the first we have heard of being caught about here.

—That saloon row indulged in on Christmas by some young men of the village, who have been raised to believe that Christmas and all other days should be spent in a more profitable and enjoyable manner is said by those supposed to know to have been a disgraceful affair. This bit of news was not filched from the Eagle.

—Christmas passed off pleasantly to most people in this vicinity. There was no snow so traveling was done on wheels. Most of the churches and several of the citizens had Christmas trees for the little folks. Councilman Coffin, at the Presbyterian, and night operator Burkhart at the M. E. church acted as Santa Claus in their ablest manner. The exercises and singing were well carried out and highly appreciated by the visitors as were the presents brought by Chris Kinkle, to old and young.

—Some of our polititians are already casting about for candidates for the village officers. The village went republican this fall and maybe that the voters of that persuasion will favor continuing the present wide open policy and put up a straight Republican ticket. Most of the Democratic voters seem to take very little interest in who or how things are carried on in our village lately. If you can't spare time to attend caucuses and help nominate men for whom you will cast your votes, don't complain because village affairs are not run for your liking.

—See the Village Council's "Notice" to buy cord wood.

—Some of the little folks insist that Santa Claus best girl lives on South Third Street.

—A number of our Masonic citizens are going to Rockford to night to attend installation exercises and a grand supper. The K. P's. are already gone to Howard Lake to aid in instituting a new lodge of that order.

—News from the Eagle, (not filched) "John Lohmiller, the good natured agent of the Minneapolis Brewing Co., sent us a token of his esteem on Monday which was duly appreciated."

Possibly this Christmas present had such an hypnotic effect on the Old Bird that she failed to find the news this week. Also to clear her conscience of that "story" about the printing of the President's Message. So long as you allow little things like that to go unanswered you must expect to have people doubt your word. "False in uno, false in omnibus."

—There is quite a good story going the rounds of our village concerning a gentleman who had a sick cow and called on his neighbor to know what to do for her. It is something like this:

Mr. G. "I heerrd you had a sick cow, Misther. And what's this you was afther doin' for her?"

Mr. B. "I gave her a pound of salts and she came out all right."

Mr. G. (at drug store) "Plase give me foive pounds of saltpater."

Mr. B. (next day) "How's your cow, Mr. G."

Mr. G. (in very much of a hurry) "Oh, she's all right."

Customer, at barber shop. "I hear Mr. G. has lost his cow."

Mr. G. (on being interviewed) "I never bought but four pounds of the dang stuff and the cow is dead."

—As has been before pointed out by the newspapers, and ministers, and others, the lax way of managing things connected with the drinking of intoxticating liquors in our village has come to what may prove a boomerang to those who dispense the fluids. Licenses are bought for $500. each, and contracts made with the village for a year at a time. The saloon-keeper agrees to abide by the law, to keep closed up on Sunday; to sell to no old drunkards nor minors, to have no card playing, etc., etc. The village have power to enforce their part of the contract, and if the saloon-keeper is not responsible his bondsmen are for his abiding by the law. Yet it is well known that too many people get too much to drink and that too many rows are had in consequence. And now that two of our citizens are locked up at Buffalo on the charge of Manslaughter in the first degree, while another young man who has frequently in years past, been their companion in visiting saloons and getting too much, has done so for the last time, and a number of others are feeling considerably concerned on the subject, would be a good time to make a start to try to do better. The 1st of January, too, is here when it is customary to make resolves. Let our people all resolve to do what they can to correct the errors into which they have fallen. Let them have less carousing on Fair Days. Closed saloons on Sunday. Let minors and old drunkards be looked after. And let the laws of the land be lived up to closer than in the past year.

County Cullings.

"The silly "BUFFALO GAZETTE" which never has any news unless it filches it from the Eagle, gives it out that A. Y. Eaton has as good a chance for the U. S. Senatorship against Washburn as any other man in the state."—Eagle.

We plead not guilty to the Eagle's charge. We did not know that the Eagle had given it out that A. Y. Eaton had a chance. We think she did not come any nearer the truth, nor any nearer clearing her conscience (if she has any conscience) when she said that about us, than she did when she said she was the only paper in the county to print the President's Message the same week it came out. Do tell some truth, Eagle, so that in case others happen to quote from you they will not be open to your charge that they are "silly".

That "French Hog" seems destined, from the Eagls insinuations, to beat the "Old Bird" in the race for a fat job in the legislature. "The race is not always to the swiftest."

Last Friday morning Jim Tracy, who lives in Southside town, got up, kindled a fire and went out to do do some chores. Shortly after he had gone out his wife got up and when partly dressed she discovered that the house was on fire, she awoke her sister-in-law and the two ladies barely succeeded in escaping from the burning building. Tracy saw the house was burning and ran to it as quickly as possible but it was impossible to get into the house to save anything so the house and contents were totally destroyed. The ladies had a very narrow escape. The loss is about $1500.—Buffalo Journal.

Don Holler, one of the younger sons of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Holler, died of diphtheria Monday last. Dan Holler who has been sick with the disease, is recovering. Gene Holler, next youngest son, Raymond, the youngest, and Earnest are now down with the disease. The family have the sincere sympathy of the entire community in their present trouble. Everything that love and skill can do is being done, and there is good hope there will be no more fatal cases in the family. So far the disease has been kept confined, and no other cases reported. The Board of Health has acted promptly and wisely, and if proper precautions are taken the disease can be stamped out effectively.—Latest. The attending physician reports all the patients doing well and improving, which is gratifying.—Wright County Times.

District Court.

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.
Square Type.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in these developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the softer sex. every one of women should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for A specimen copy (free), and you will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put you in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of the whole family.
